German Air Raiders Sink British Naval Trawler

But Nazis Suffer Severe Losses in Wave of Attacks On Small Boats

Two German Planes Shot Down Off British Coast; Finnish Steamer Sunk by Submarine

By EDWIN STOUT

London, Feb. 22 (AP)—Germany's air raiders accounted for Britain's fifth naval loss of the war today, sinking a naval trawler in another wave of attacks up and down the British coast, but suffered repulses in fierce return fire from newly armed small boats and lost two planes in hot sky fights.

German undersea activity also was reported in dispatches from Amsterdam to have resulted in loss of the 2,621-ton Finnish steamer Brita off the Irish coast. The crew abandoned ship after an explosion.

"A submarine was sighted after the explosion," said the Brita's message.

Nine trawlers were attacked by the air raiders during the day, and one of them, the 540-ton navy boat Fifeshire, was sunk, the admiralty announced. Two officers and nineteen men were believed lost, the admiralty said, and only one crewman saved.

The naval trawler Solon was bombed and raked with machinegun fire, but the attacking planes were driven off by sharp fire, and the boat returned safely to land.

14th Trawler Sunk

The Fifeshire was the fourteenth British naval trawler officially reported sunk thus far in the war, but the first to be lost from aerial bombardment.

The busy royal air force, which Prime Minister Chamberlain only yesterday was ready now to meet attacks of any size and strike back, also was reported to have attacked German torpedo boats in continuing reconnaissance flights over Germany's northwestern sea bases of Borkum and Helgoland.

Accounts of the German air activity said the Nazi warplanes swept up and down the east coasts of England and Scotland in an intensification of efforts to cut Britain's food supply lines, which the British press is calling "vengeance raids" over the attack of the British destroyer Cossack on the German vessel Altmark off Norway last Friday night, in which 299 British prisoners were rescued.

German Bomber Crashes

One of the German bombers shot down by the British crashed in a farm field on the outskirts of Coldingham, near St. Abb's Head, south eastern Scotland, while the other plunged into the sea off the coast of Northumberland.

The crew of four in the first bomber set fire to their ship. One had a bullet wound in the leg. The four, taken prisoner, were held in a local police station.

Child Enthroned Ruler of Tibet

New Delhi, India, Feb. 23 (Friday) (AP)—The child Dalai Lama formally ascended the golden throne of Tibet at Lhasa yesterday to reign as "His Holiness the Precious Dalai Lama, owner of all living begins in the snowy country," official shortwave advices from a British mission in the Tibetan capital said today.

Enthronement of the child, Lingkh La-Mu-Tan-Chu, occupied the entire day, and the ceremonies may last for several more days in the great hall of the Potala, golden roofed palace of the forbidden city.

Yesterday's rites reached their crescendo when the solemn faced little boy, regarded as the six-year old reincarnation of his predecessor, the 13th Dalai Lama, walked hand in hand with the chief abbot and another Chamberlain through the lamplit great hall, thronged with dignitaries. Over the carpet marked with eight lucky signs he toddled with the help of the priests, then clambered upon the massive throne amidst the deep throb of trumpets and solemnly surveyed his subjects.

Now he is lord spiritual and temporal of all Tibet, the world's only theocracy—vice-regent of Buddha on earth and God-King of a country nearly three times the size of California, a land in which one out of every five men belongs to the ruling class of priests.

E. T. Weir Named To Raise Funds For Republicans

Pittsburgh Steel Man Heads Party's Finance Committee

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Republicans got organized for one of the coming campaign's most important problems—raising funds—today with the appointment of Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steel man, as chairman of the party's finance committee.

Meanwhile, the Railway Labor Executive's Association, composed of officials of twenty out of twenty-one railway labor organizations, publicly endorsed twenty-two members of the Senate for renomination in approaching state primaries.

The Weir appointment was announced by John D. M. Hamilton, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, with a statement which noted that Weir and his company, National Steel Corporation, were "famous for having made a profit every year during the depression."

Weir Against New Deal

Weir, chairman of the corporation's board of directors, and president of the Iron and Steel Institute, has been an aggressive opponent of the New Deal. Repeatedly he has been embroiled with New Deal agencies and with the C. I. O.

The senators endorsed by the railway labor officials were: Ashurst (D-Ariz), Maloney (D-Conn), Slattery (D-Ill), Minton (D-Ind), Radcliffe (D-Md), Walsh (D-Mass), Bilbo (D-Miss), Truman (D-Mo), Wheeler (D-Mont), Pittman (D-Nev), Chavez (D-NM), Mead (D-NY), Donahey (D-Ohio), McKeller (D-Tenn), Connally (D-Tex), Schwellenbach (D-Wash), O'Mahoney (D-Wyo), Johnson (R-Calif), Vandenberg (R-Mich), Frazier (R-ND), Shipstead (FL-Minn), and LaFollette (Prog-Wis).

Oppose Senator Burke

The organization, however, turned thumbs down on one senator who is up for renomination, Senator Burke (D-Neb). Burke's opponent, Gov. R. L. Cochran, was endorsed instead, with a notation that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers did not participate because it was not prepared to act at this time.

Says Finns Have Captured Hundreds of Tanks, Cars and Trucks

By WADE WERNER

With the Finnish Army Northwest of Lake Ladoga, Feb. 22 (AP)—Finnish troops fighting amid the gorgeous scenery of this winter wonderland fought on today in their weird, intricate war of encirclement against the Russian invaders.

They drew their lines tighter around the remnants of the shattered Soviet eighteenth division—perhaps a whole battalion is valiantly holding out—while their comrades, operating tractors and trucks, hauled away tons of war booty from one of Finland's greatest victories.

Others, slowly and relentlessly, with phantom ski troops and artillery strategy prepared the way for advances elsewhere on this complicated front.

I motored fifty miles this afternoon and walked several more to reach the front where the last resistance of the famous eighteenth division is being wiped out.

Sees Captured Tanks

A few miles behind the front I encountered a long cavalcade of captured Russian tanks and trucks being hauled to the rear by the Finns for repair and later use against the enemy.

More tanks were scattered here and there in ditches and fields.

Then we came upon whole parks of tanks and tractors, automobiles and artillery—and among them the frozen dead.

We picked our way through a confusion of vehicles and what seemed to be thousands of grotesque, waxlike figures lying alone on in heaps.

Actually there were only about 1,500 dead in this particular scene of carnage—only a part of the eighteenth division's fallen, who were scattered in various positions over an area of many miles.

As night fell and moonlight illuminated the scene, the impression of utter destruction, complete disaster and death was overwhelming.

The crash of artillery suddenly broke the silence.

Near Russian Lines

"There are the Russian lines," said the captain accompanying us. He pointed to a hillside half a mile away.

A colored rocket shot skyward.

There were intermittent bursts of machine gun fire; then the roar of a plane flying over us.

We stood motionless until it had passed over.

"I don't think that flier was worrying about us," said the captain.

Two Bombs Explode In London West End

London, Feb. 22 (AP) — Two bombs, believed to have been planted by Irish Republican army terrorists, exploded tonight in London's west end.

One woman was injured seriously by one explosion in busy Oxford street, main west end artery. Windows in three stores were smashed.

The second blast wrecked a men's lavatory at the marble arch, at Oxford street and Hyde Park. No one was injured there.

Police believed the bombs were intended to renew the "terror campaign" which preceded the execution of two I. R. A. zealots at Birmingham on February 7.

Mannerheim Line Smashed on 22nd Red Army Birthday, Moscow Says

Moscow, Feb. 23 (Friday) (AP)—The twenty-second birthday of the Red army dawned today with the announcement—hoped for by many Russians—that Finland's Mannerheim Line had been smashed.

The military communique from Leningrad reported only the capture of twenty-one more Finnish defensive positions on the Karelian isthmus and the bogging down of aerial operations by a Finnish blizzard.

Russians, however, had by no means lost hope of a decisive victory after eighty-five days of intensive operations against the well-built Mannerheim Line.

Soviet sources recounted the gains, reported in the capture of hundreds of Finnish forts and pillboxes, that have been made by the Red army, and compared them with the lack of similar progress by the French and British armies in the west.

While the twenty-second anniversary of the army coincides with a supreme effort in the north it also comes at a time when the U.S.S.R. is paying strict attention to her defenses in the south, where her oil wealth is concentrated.

War Tactics Changed

Originally Red army strategy was built upon the basis of strict defense. Only in 1938 was the idea

Many of 200,000 Called for March To Report at Once

Government Issues Sweeping Decree Banning Exports

Bucarest, Feb. 22 (AP) — Rumania, showing increasing concern over the possibility of war in the spring, today increased her armed forces and published a sweeping decree banning the export of a long list of raw materials and manufactured goods "necessary for the national defense."

Many of the 200,000 reserves who originally were called for March 1 were reported ordered to start reporting immediately for service with the nation's armed forces. These already number 1,400,000 men and, with the latest call, a virtual state of mobilization will be in force by March 1.

Oil and wheat—Rumania's chief exports—were left out of today's decree although it was confirmed authoritatively that delivery of aviation gasoline and lubricants abroad previously had been banned.

Influenced by Germany

It was learned that large internal purchases of commodities in which Rumania is deficient — mainly by Germany—and the Allies' delay in furnishing new stocks led to issuance of the decree.

Young Man Says He Killed Girl In Los Angeles

John F. Reavis Confesses Murder of Alice Burns

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 22 (AP)—A twenty-five-year-old musician told police today he "flew into a rage" and killed Alice "Jerry" Burns, whose nude body was found in a vacant lot in Los Angeles last Dec. 28.

Detective Capt. Harry J. Kelly said John Reavis freely admitted he stabbed Miss Burns, 17, a tavern entertainer he had taken for an automobile ride after he had visited several other drinking establishments. Reavis was arrested today in a Balboa park zoo rest room.

"I took her for a ride," Kelly quoted Reavis. "We stopped by a vacant lot, did some petting, and became involved in an argument. We struggled and fell from the car. I flew into a rage and stabbed her."

Kelly did not press Reavis for further explanation.

The dead girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Woodruff, Fort Worth, Texas. She was married first at fourteen and escaped two years ago from the Texas state reformatory at Gainesville to begin her "B girl" career on Los Angeles' Main street. Ten months ago she married Laurel C. Barnes, 26, a railroad worker employed near Riverside while she was working as an entertainer in a bar room.

"I'm glad I'm caught," Reavis told his captors, Detectives Ed Dieckmann and A. Gayton.

Following the slaying Reavis told Kelly he drove to San Diego, than to Tijuana, Mex., and back to San Diego where he abandoned his automobile. Police found the car, linked it with Reavis and began an investigation which led to his arrest on information received from acquaintances.

Pennsy Income Is $20,986,425 Higher

Philadelphia, Feb. 22 (AP) — The Pennsylvania Railroad, riding the crest of a sharp upturn of industrial activity during the last four months of 1939, earned a net income for the year of $32,032,525—an increase of $20,986,425 over 1938—the sompany's 93rd annual report disclosed today.

A $23,177,686 surplus remaining after appropriations to the sinking and other funds, was equivalent to $1.76 per share on the outstanding stock, compared with twenty-three cents per share in 1938.

SWEDISH AIRMEN TO AID FINNS

Sweden's air force is numerically small but the planes are of the best quality and its personnel well-trained and well-equipped. Gen. Torsten Friis, Swedish aviation chief, is pictured inspecting some of his aerial warriors. Stockholm reports that, despite denial of open military aid to Finland by the government, a fleet of Swedish-manned planes will soon be flown to the beleaguered country. (Central Press)

Mack Wilt Asserts He Alone Staged Baltimore Holdup

Baltimore, Feb. 22 (AP) — Four youths, one of whom pleaded guilty to a charge of robbing the Westport branch bank of the Union Trust Company and attempted to absolve the others of complicity, were bound over to the grand jury today under bonds totaling $14,000.

Mack Lloyd Wilt, 18, pleaded guilty to charges of robbing the bank last Monday noon of $1,500 and of larceny of a pistol and automobile used in the holdup. His bail was set at $10,000.

Takes Entire Blame

"Please disregard the whole thing with exception of my case," pleaded Wilt in his effort to clear William J. de Bullet, and Lester E. deWitt, both 19, and Dean S. Dentry, 21. De Bullet and de Witt were charged as accessories and Dentry with receiving stolen property. All three pleaded innocent.

Harold Dahl Is Free To Return To Home in U.S.

American Aviator and Others Released by Spanish Government

Madrid, Feb. 22 (AP)—Harold Dahl, the American aviator-of-fortune whose beautiful blonde actress wife helped save him from a firing squad by sending her picture to General Franco, finally was a free man tonight.

Along with seven other Americans who fought for the Spanish Republican army, Dahl, after nearly three years as a prisoner of war, awaited only a boat ride for his return to the United States.

(The news was too good for his wife, Edith Rogers Dahl, to believe. In the Philadelphia night club where, with the billing 'she stopped the firing squad," she is doing a Spanish dance specialty, she refused to celebrate until she got official word from the U. S. State department—because "I've heard it so many times before.")

Dahl and his companions were the last of 106 American prisoners released since the war ended last March. Most of them were captured fighting with the Abraham Lincoln battalion on the Ebro river in 1938.

Embassay Announces Releases

The United States embassy announced the releases. Tonight Dahl, Clarence Alvie Blair of Red Granite, Wis., and Cohn Haber of New York, were at Seville, waiting to sail on the American Export liner Exiria for the United States tomorrow.

Others released—after intervention of the state department in Washington — are Lawrence Fant Doran, listed in records here as a native of Los Angeles; Anthony Peter Kehrlicker ,a native of Polk County, Ia.; Rudolph Opara, of Cleveland; Alf Abedreasen, naturalized American from Norway and Conrad Stojewa, of California.

All fought with the Spanish Republicans against Franco.

Draws Black Ball And Must Lose Life

Lapaz, Bolivia, Feb. 22. (AP)—Francisco Mamani today drew the black ball from the "Anfora Reos"—(criminal vase)—and under Bolivian law he must die while his partner in murder lives.

Mamani and Julio Zegarra, convicted of lynching Domingo Quispe, drew lots as specified in a statute which provides that when two or more persons are convicted of murder only one must die for the crime.

They were convicted of taking the law into their own hands and killing Quispe after the latter robbed Mamani and then set fire to Zegarra's home.

Men-of-War Believed in Arctic To Halt Soviet Commerce with Germany

Scandinavian Neutrality Menaced by New Development; Russia's Navy Ready for War

Kirkenes, Norway, Feb. 22 (AP)—An undetermined number of British warships are lying off Finland's Petsamo district and Russia's Arctic coast near Murmansk, it was learned definitely here tonight.

This was the first confirmation of reports circulated since yesterday that British men-of-war were in the northern waters.

It was believed that the ships were placed in the area to prevent German vessels from using Norwegian territorial waters in trade with Russia.

Scandinavia Worried Over Warship Reports

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Copenhagen, Feb. 22 (AP)—Reports published in Scandinavian papers that British and French warships are cruising in the Arctic ocean in the direction of Murmansk, possibly with the intention of interfering with German-Soviet trade, brought new worries to Scandinavia today.

Murmansk is Russia's only ice-free Arctic port and has become an increasingly important factor in the part Russia plays in European affairs.

There was no confirmation of these reports here, but even the possibility of naval activity in northern waters was viewed with anxiety in the light of the probable effect on the increasingly delicate status of Scandinavian neutrality.

(Informed London quarters said there was reason to believe a British naval detachment recently had been in the vicinity of Petsamo, Finland's Arctic coastal region which is in Russian hands, near the Murmansk region.)

Russian Navy Prepared

Russia's Arctic navy was said to have been placed in complete preparedness for war.

This report and the Altmark incident last Friday—the British navy's raid on a German prison ship in Norwegian waters—have given Scandinavia the feeling that almost anything can happen in northern Europe.

Consequently unusual attention was focussed on the meeting of Scandinavian foreign ministers in Copenhagen Saturday and Sunday in belief a greater degree of Scandinavian co-operation may result.

The Stockholm Dagens Nyheter in an editorial expressed hope the foreign ministers would draft identical rules to govern the passage of belligerent vessels in Scandinavian waters.

Swedes Still Indignant

Swedish indignation was running high over the Russian bombing of Pajala, a village near the Finnish frontier, yesterday and the press

Logan Says Geery Induced Poggi To Try To Slay Him

Police Question Wounded Man in Art Galleries Mystery

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, Feb. 22 (AP)—An extraordinary story of how a pair of businessmen-promoters acquired a famous and conservative art center took form today as the authorities continued their investigation of the violent and tragic ending of that ill-starred partnership.

Of the two men who obtained control of the American Art Association-Anderson Galleries, Inc., in 1938 and saw it bankrupt within a year's time, Milton B. Logan appeared to be recovering from the attempt upon his life which was followed by the suicide of his associate, John T. Geery. Both were under indictment for withholding money from patrons of the galleries.

Mystery in Attack

Logan was bludgeoned Monday night during a motorcar ride on which he was accompanied by Geery and a third and incongruous companion declared by the police to have been John Poggi, a short, powerful news-stand operator whose connection with art was not even remote.

Logan has declared Poggi was his actual assailant; Poggi persisted in denying that he even knew Logan. Geery, who had taken out $150,000 in insurance on Logan's life through Lloyds of London, shot himself to death last Monday night in his big suburban home a few hours after the assault upon his associate.

Admits Owning Bludgeon

Police disclosed that Poggi had admitted that the bludgeon used in the attack on Logan—a length of iron pipe weighted with lead and covered with adhesive tape—belonged to him. But the news-dealer insisted he di d not know how it happened to be on the East River drive, near the scene of the assault, where it was found and said his automobile, in which he kept it, must have been stolen.

He told detectives, they reported, that he left his car in a parking lot near the Staten Island ferry when he went to work Monday and that it was not there when he returned but was found in his garage at home.

Aides of the district attorney, meanwhile, questioned Logan at the hospital.

Logan Blames Geery

Logan asserted through his attorney his belief that it was Geery who engineered the attack. Geery had been heavy loser after the coup that acquired control of the galleries; had been "stripped financially," according to his counsel.

This acquisition of one of the world's most widely-known and dignified auction places for art objects apparently was effected through the assumption of obligations of about $175,000.

Logan, whose suave and distinguished appearance does nothing to suggest that he began life as a hotel night clerk, got a connection with the galleries through his personal association in the '20s with the late, eccentric millionaire Cortlandt

Governor Dickinson To Be Asked To Remove Prosecutor from Office

Detroit, Feb. 22 (AP)—Governor Luren D. Dickinson will be asked Friday to remove from office Duncan C. McCrea, Wayne county prosecutor indicted with fourteen other persons on charges of conspiracy to operate and protect a $1,000,000-a-year baseball pool.

Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, whose one-man grand jury inquiry into relations between Metropolitan law enforcement officers and the under-world resulted in the indictment, announced today his intention to make the request to the governor.

McCrea, Fred W. Frahm, former Detroit police superintendent, and Harry F. Colburn, the prosecutor's chief assistant, were accused, with two detective lieutenants and two detectives, of accepting money and gratuities to protect the operations of the National Sports Junior Baseball Pool. Besides the fifteen named as defendants, four were named as co-conspirators, but not defendants.

Three Elude Arrest

McCrea, Frahm and Colburn eluded arrest today, but Detective Chief Paul H. Wencel said, "they all are, or were, law enforcement officers and I believe they will give themselves up of their own accord Friday."

If convicted they would be subject to a maximum penalty of five

Gene Buck Held As Extortionist

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 22 (AP)—Gene Buck, noted author and president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was arrested at a resort today on a Montana warrant charging attempted extortion.

His arrest is the outgrowth of a dispute at Missoula, Mont., over a demand by ASCAP that certain radio stations pay fees for the use of music the organization claims to own or control.

Buck, released under $10,000 bond, said after a telephone conversation with his attorneys in Los Angeles that he would fight extradition.

In addition to the attempted extortion charge, a felony, Buck also is accused of attempting to obtain money under false pretenses and conspiracy to extort, both misdemeanors.

In Missoula, County Attorney Edward T. Dussault said "the charge against Buck and others in ASCAP is based on a statement they sent to Montana radio stations, theaters, particularly in Missoula, and others by registered mail that their licenses to play music owned by ASCAP would be revoked unless specified payments of money were made."

Police believed the bombs were intended to renew the "terror campaign" which preceded the execution of two I. R. A. zealots at Birmingham on February 7.

Mannerheim Line Smashed on 22nd Red Army Birthday, Moscow Says

Moscow, Feb. 23 (Friday) (AP)—The twenty-second birthday of the Red army dawned today with the announcement—hoped for by many Russians—that Finland's Mannerheim Line had been smashed.

The military communique from Leningrad reported only the capture of twenty-one more Finnish defensive positions on the Karelian isthmus and the bogging down of aerial operations by a Finnish blizzard.

Russians, however, had by no means lost hope of a decisive victory after eighty-five days of intensive operations against the well-built Mannerheim Line.

Soviet sources recounted the gains, reported in the capture of hundreds of Finnish forts and pillboxes, that have been made by the Red army, and compared them with the lack of similar progress by the French and British armies in the west.

While the twenty-second anniversary of the army coincides with a supreme effort in the north it also comes at a time when the U.S.S.R. is paying strict attention to her defenses in the south, where her oil wealth is concentrated.

War Tactics Changed

Originally Red army strategy was built upon the basis of strict defense. Only in 1938 was the idea

Government Issues Sweeping Decree Banning Exports

Bucarest, Feb. 22 (AP) — Rumania, showing increasing concern over the possibility of war in the spring, today increased her armed forces and published a sweeping decree banning the export of a long list of raw materials and manufactured goods "necessary for the national defense."

Many of the 200,000 reserves who originally were called for March 1 were reported ordered to start reporting immediately for service with the nation's armed forces. These already number 1,400,000 men and, with the latest call, a virtual state of mobilization will be in force by March 1.

Oil and wheat—Rumania's chief exports—were left out of today's decree although it was confirmed authoritatively that delivery of aviation gasoline and lubricants abroad previously had been banned.

Influenced by Germany

It was learned that large internal purchases of commodities in which Rumania is deficient — mainly by Germany—and the Allies' delay in furnishing new stocks led to issuance of the decree.

John F. Reavis Confesses Murder of Alice Burns

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 22 (AP)—A twenty-five-year-old musician told police today he "flew into a rage" and killed Alice "Jerry" Burns, whose nude body was found in a vacant lot in Los Angeles last Dec. 28.

Detective Capt. Harry J. Kelly said John Reavis freely admitted he stabbed Miss Burns, 17, a tavern entertainer he had taken for an automobile ride after he had visited several other drinking establishments. Reavis was arrested today in a Balboa park zoo rest room.

"I took her for a ride," Kelly quoted Reavis. "We stopped by a vacant lot, did some petting, and became involved in an argument. We struggled and fell from the car. I flew into a rage and stabbed her."

Kelly did not press Reavis for further explanation.

The dead girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Woodruff, Fort Worth, Texas. She was married first at fourteen and escaped two years ago from the Texas state reformatory at Gainesville to begin her "B girl" career on Los Angeles' Main street. Ten months ago she married Laurel C. Barnes, 26, a railroad worker employed near Riverside while she was working as an entertainer in a bar room.

"I'm glad I'm caught," Reavis told his captors, Detectives Ed Dieckmann and A. Gayton.

Following the slaying Reavis told Kelly he drove to San Diego, than to Tijuana, Mex., and back to San Diego where he abandoned his automobile. Police found the car, linked it with Reavis and began an investigation which led to his arrest on information received from acquaintances.

Pennsy Income Is $20,986,425 Higher

Philadelphia, Feb. 22 (AP) — The Pennsylvania Railroad, riding the crest of a sharp upturn of industrial activity during the last four months of 1939, earned a net income for the year of $32,032,525—an increase of $20,986,425 over 1938—the sompany's 93rd annual report disclosed today.

A $23,177,686 surplus remaining after appropriations to the sinking and other funds, was equivalent to $1.76 per share on the outstanding stock, compared with twenty-three cents per share in 1938.

Harold Dahl Is Free To Return To Home in U.S.

American Aviator and Others Released by Spanish Government

Madrid, Feb. 22 (AP)—Harold Dahl, the American aviator-of-fortune whose beautiful blonde actress wife helped save him from a firing squad by sending her picture to General Franco, finally was a free man tonight.

Along with seven other Americans who fought for the Spanish Republican army, Dahl, after nearly three years as a prisoner of war, awaited only a boat ride for his return to the United States.

(The news was too good for his wife, Edith Rogers Dahl, to believe. In the Philadelphia night club where, with the billing 'she stopped the firing squad," she is doing a Spanish dance specialty, she refused to celebrate until she got official word from the U. S. State department—because "I've heard it so many times before.")

Dahl and his companions were the last of 106 American prisoners released since the war ended last March. Most of them were captured fighting with the Abraham Lincoln battalion on the Ebro river in 1938.

Embassay Announces Releases

The United States embassy announced the releases. Tonight Dahl, Clarence Alvie Blair of Red Granite, Wis., and Cohn Haber of New York, were at Seville, waiting to sail on the American Export liner Exiria for the United States tomorrow.

Others released—after intervention of the state department in Washington — are Lawrence Fant Doran, listed in records here as a native of Los Angeles; Anthony Peter Kehrlicker a native of Polk County, Ia.; Rudolph Opara, of Cleveland; Alf Abedreasen, naturalized American from Norway and Conrad Stojewa, of California.

All fought with the Spanish Republicans against Franco.

Baltimore, Feb. 22 (AP) — Four youths, one of whom pleaded guilty to a charge of robbing the Westport branch bank of the Union Trust Company and attempted to absolve the others of complicity, were bound over to the grand jury today under bonds totaling $14,000.

Mack Lloyd Wilt, 18, pleaded guilty to charges of robbing the bank last Monday noon of $1,500 and of larceny of a pistol and automobile used in the holdup. His bail was set at $10,000.

Takes Entire Blame

"Please disregard the whole thing with exception of my case," pleaded Wilt in his effort to clear William J. de Bullet, and Lester E. deWitt, both 19, and Dean S. Dentry, 21. De Bullet and de Witt were charged as accessories and Dentry with receiving stolen property. All three pleaded innocent.

Logan Says Geery Induced Poggi To Try To Slay Him

Police Question Wounded Man in Art Galleries Mystery

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, Feb. 22 (AP)—An extraordinary story of how a pair of businessmen-promoters acquired a famous and conservative art center took form today as the authorities continued their investigation of the violent and tragic ending of that ill-starred partnership.

Of the two men who obtained control of the American Art Association-Anderson Galleries, Inc., in 1938 and saw it bankrupt within a year's time, Milton B. Logan appeared to be recovering from the attempt upon his life which was followed by the suicide of his associate, John T. Geery. Both were under indictment for withholding money from patrons of the galleries.

Mystery in Attack

Logan was bludgeoned Monday night during a motorcar ride on which he was accompanied by Geery and a third and incongruous companion declared by the police to have been John Poggi, a short, powerful news-stand operator whose connection with art was not even remote.

Logan has declared Poggi was his actual assailant; Poggi persisted in denying that he even knew Logan. Geery, who had taken out $150,000 in insurance on Logan's life through Lloyds of London, shot himself to death last Monday night in his big suburban home a few hours after the assault upon his associate.

Admits Owning Bludgeon

Police disclosed that Poggi had admitted that the bludgeon used in the attack on Logan—a length of iron pipe weighted with lead and covered with adhesive tape—belonged to him. But the news-dealer insisted he di d not know how it happened to be on the East River drive, near the scene of the assault, where it was found and said his automobile, in which he kept it, must have been stolen.

He told detectives, they reported, that he left his car in a parking lot near the Staten Island ferry when he went to work Monday and that it was not there when he returned but was found in his garage at home.

Aides of the district attorney, meanwhile, questioned Logan at the hospital.

Logan Blames Geery

Logan asserted through his attorney his belief that it was Geery who engineered the attack. Geery had been heavy loser after the coup that acquired control of the galleries; had been "stripped financially," according to his counsel.

This acquisition of one of the world's most widely-known and dignified auction places for art objects apparently was effected through the assumption of obligations of about $175,000.

Logan, whose suave and distinguished appearance does nothing to suggest that he began life as a hotel night clerk, got a connection with the galleries through his personal association in the '20s with the late, eccentric millionaire Cortlandt

Scandinavian Neutrality Menaced by New Development; Russia's Navy Ready for War

Kirkenes, Norway, Feb. 22 (AP)—An undetermined number of British warships are lying off Finland's Petsamo district and Russia's Arctic coast near Murmansk, it was learned definitely here tonight.

This was the first confirmation of reports circulated since yesterday that British men-of-war were in the northern waters.

It was believed that the ships were placed in the area to prevent German vessels from using Norwegian territorial waters in trade with Russia.

Scandinavia Worried Over Warship Reports

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Copenhagen, Feb. 22 (AP)—Reports published in Scandinavian papers that British and French warships are cruising in the Arctic ocean in the direction of Murmansk, possibly with the intention of interfering with German-Soviet trade, brought new worries to Scandinavia today.

Murmansk is Russia's only ice-free Arctic port and has become an increasingly important factor in the part Russia plays in European affairs.

There was no confirmation of these reports here, but even the possibility of naval activity in northern waters was viewed with anxiety in the light of the probable effect on the increasingly delicate status of Scandinavian neutrality.

(Informed London quarters said there was reason to believe a British naval detachment recently had been in the vicinity of Petsamo, Finland's Arctic coastal region which is in Russian hands, near the Murmansk region.)

Russian Navy Prepared

Russia's Arctic navy was said to have been placed in complete preparedness for war.

This report and the Altmark incident last Friday—the British navy's raid on a German prison ship in Norwegian waters—have given Scandinavia the feeling that almost anything can happen in northern Europe.

Consequently unusual attention was focussed on the meeting of Scandinavian foreign ministers in Copenhagen Saturday and Sunday in belief a greater degree of Scandinavian co-operation may result.

The Stockholm Dagens Nyheter in an editorial expressed hope the foreign ministers would draft identical rules to govern the passage of belligerent vessels in Scandinavian waters.

Gene Buck Held As Extortionist

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 22 (AP)—Gene Buck, noted author and president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was arrested at a resort today on a Montana warrant charging attempted extortion.

His arrest is the outgrowth of a dispute at Missoula, Mont., over a demand by ASCAP that certain radio stations pay fees for the use of music the organization claims to own or control.

Buck, released under $10,000 bond, said after a telephone conversation with his attorneys in Los Angeles that he would fight extradition.

In addition to the attempted extortion charge, a felony, Buck also is accused of attempting to obtain money under false pretenses and conspiracy to extort, both misdemeanors.

In Missoula, County Attorney Edward T. Dussault said "the charge against Buck and others in ASCAP is based on a statement they sent to Montana radio stations, theaters, particularly in Missoula, and others by registered mail that their licenses to play music owned by ASCAP would be revoked unless specified payments of money were made."

Governor Dickinson To Be Asked To Remove Prosecutor from Office

Detroit, Feb. 22 (AP) — Governor Luren D. Dickinson will be asked Friday to remove from office Duncan C. McCrea, Wayne county prosecutor indicted with fourteen other persons on charges of conspiracy to operate and protect a $1,000,000-a-year baseball pool.

Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, whose one-man grand jury inquiry into relations between Metropolitan law enforcement officers and the under-world resulted in the indictment, announced today his intention to make the request to the governor.

McCrea, Fred W. Frahm, former Detroit police superintendent, and Harry F. Colburn, the prosecutor's chief assistant, were accused, with two detective lieutenants and two detectives, of accepting money and gratuities to protect the operations of the National Sports Junior Baseball Pool. Besides the fifteen named as defendants, four were named as co-conspirators, but not defendants.

Three Elude Arrest

McCrea, Frahm and Colburn eluded arrest today, but Detective Chief Paul H. Wencel said, "they all are, or were, law enforcement officers and I believe they will give themselves up of their own accord Friday."

If convicted they would be subject to a maximum penalty of five

Lansing Wanted Break With Germany in 1915, Private Papers Reveal

And Wilson Favored Recall of Both German and Austrian Ambassadors Long Before War

By ANDRUE BERDING

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP) — President Woodrow Wilson wanted both the German and Austrian ambassadors to quit Washington a year and a half before the United States entered the World War, it was disclosed today through the state department's publication of papers of Robert Lansing, World War secretary of state.

The same papers show that Lansing advocated a rupture with Germany as early as August, 1915, and also the American government was seeking to separate Austria from Germany a month before it declared war on Germany.

President Wilson was determined to get rid of the German ambassador, Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff and the Austrian Ambassador, Constantin T. Dumba, following a disclosure that they had employed an American citizen to carry secret messages to Berlin. These messages outlined activities of the envoys to cripple American plants manufacturing munitions for the Allies.

Wilson Favored Action

One of the Lansing papers is a note from Wilson to Lansing, saying, "I entirely agree with you that we shall have to take some decided action with regard to the activities of Dumba as well as those of Bernstorff. . .What do you think would be the best course, a private intimation to each of them which would allow them to ask to be relieved, without public rebuke, or a direct request on our part to their governments? I do not know the practice in these matters."

The recall of Dumba was requested shortly thereafter, but Bernstorff was permitted to remain on.

The Lansing papers, revealing that Lansing was seriously considering war with Germany as early as August, 1915, contain a letter from Lansing to President Wilson, in which he says:

Would Influence Allies

"On the assumption that we sever diplomatic intercourse with the German government, which responds with a declaration of war, the consequences internationally would seem to be the complete restoration of friendship and confidence with the Allies and the necessary recognition of the United States as a party to the peace negotiations.

"We would be in a position to influence the Allies, if they should be victorious, to be lenient in their demands and to regain a part of the good will of Germany by being a generous enemy. If, on the other hand, Germany should triumph, we would be included in any settlement made, and Germany would be deprived of the free hand she would otherwise have in dealing with us after she had overcome her European adversaries.

"If the foregoing views are sound, it would appear that our usefulness in the restoration of peace would certainly not be lessened by a state of war between this country and Germany, and it might even be increased."

Negotiated with Austria

The Lansing papers show that, even while still a neutral, the United States had engaged in conversations with Austria which might have led to a separate peace, with Austria deserting Germany.

Lansing wrote Wilson on March 17, 1917, discussing a telegram from Ambassador Frederic C. Penfield in Vienna. The telegram reported that a secret meeting between a representative of the Allies and a representative of Austria-Hungary had been suggested by the Austrian statesman, Count Czernin.

Lansing said, "if these two representatives come together to discuss general terms of peace, they may gradually drift into a discussion of a separate peace; and, if Austria-Hungary once permits her representative to talk even on the subject, I believe that something will have been gained.

"It seems to me that we ought to take the opening offered. We may accomplish nothing or we may accomplish more than we expect. If we fail, I do not see that anything has been lost. We will be no worse of than we are now.

"We agreed, you will recall, to treat all communications with the Austro-Hungarian government as strictly secret. The next step would seem to be to telegraph Penfield to ask Count Czernin if he would object to our making the suggestion of an opening such as he proposed, to one of the Allied governments, not as originating here, explaining to him that, since the idea was his, he would not wish to appear to be violating our pledge of secrecy by even adopting the suggestion as our own unless he authorized us to do so."

Committee Hears Guild President

Crawford Denies Freedom of the Press Is Threatened

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—Kenneth Crawford, president of the American Newspaper Guild, denied today that freedom of the press was in any way threatened by the guild shop contracts which his organization seeks to negotiate with newspapers.

Crawford told the House Labor Committee:

"Many publishers have fought us with something like fury on the closed shop issue—and some of them have frankly confessed that they did so because they feared that closed shops would make us too strong.

"Most of them, however, profess to see a threat against freedom of the press. x x x Actually, there is no such threat in the guild shop. We have had enough experience to know that. The editors and publishers of newspapers are in every case the judges of what shall be printed."

He explained that under a guild shop, the employer may hire whom he chooses but that such a person must become a guild member within thirty to ninety days after he takes the job. Thus, he said, the phrase "closed shop" was really a misnomer when used to describe a guild shop.

Oliver Holden, executive director of the American Press Society, told the committee Tuesday that the closed shop might threaten the freedom of the press.

In an attempt to get Crawford's comment on some of Holden's statements, Acting Chairman Ramspeck (D-Ga) of the committee asked what might happen if guild members were ordered by the CIO, for instance, to color the news against the AFL.

Crawford said that would not happen and when Ramspeck asked what might happen if such a hypothetical situation arose, Crawford said:

"We'd tell them to go to hell. We certainly wouldn't submit to that kind of direction and the CIO wouldn't attempt it. Even if they did, we couldn't get it into the newspapers anyway."

After asserting that the reason for the desire for the guild shop is obvious, Crawford said:

"It is the same reason that accounts for the desire of most unions to get closed shops or union shops. It assures dues collections and requires everyone enjoying the benefits of organization to contribute his share toward the maintenance of the organization."

De Perini Surrenders, Faces Murder Charge

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—A 48-year-old former motorman, sought by police for three days to answer to a charge of murdering his wife, surrendered today.

He is Joseph de Perini of nearby Riverdale, Md. Police had been combing suburban counties of Maryland and Washington for him since the body of his 45-year-old wife, Alice, was found Tuesday. At one time they believed he might have committed suicide—basing the idea on what they said was a note received from de Perini by a son-in-law.

Prince Georges (Maryland) county police said de Perini had signed a statement in which he told this story:

His wife had rushed at him with a butcher knife. He struck her with his fist, wrested the knife from her and stabbed her. Then he left home and went to Washington where he remained in a rooming house until this morning when, with his funds exhausted, he decided to give himself up. He boarded a street car which took him to Hyattsville, Md., where he walked into police headquarters.

He was held for a preliminary hearing Monday.

Woman Truck Driver Runs over Husband

Durango, Colo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Hurled from a speeding toboggan, Dave McCollum, 26, was run over by a truck driven by his wife. He suffered a broken back.

The McCollums were tobogganing last night with friends. After her husband's sled, carrying six men, started down a six-mile run, Mrs. McCollum followed in the truck to haul the group back up the slope.

The careening toboggan spilled five of its occupants, but McCollum stayed aboard until it piled into a snowbank on the other side of the slide.

Seeing the five men sprawled to her right, Mrs. McCollum applied the brakes. The machine skidded to the left and ran over McCollum's head and back.

His condition was reported grave.

Older Men Called To Take Field in Finnish Defense

About 2,000 Russians Reported Killed at Taipale

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Helsinki, Feb. 22 (AP)—Finland called more of her older men to the colors tonight as the Red army, hammering relentlessly at the Mannerheim line, continued a tremendous offensive which the Finns said was being repelled with heavy losses after reaching a point twelve miles from Viipuri.

Approximately 2,000 Russians were reported killed at Taipale in unsuccessful assaults on the east flank of the line, while on the opposite flank the Finnish high command said the attackers had lost "large numbers" of tanks in fierce fighting.

The Finns did not mention their own losses, but the need of replacements was emphasized by an order calling out the classes of 1894 and 1895—men forty-four to forty-six years old. The Finns three preceding classes were mobilized last week.

A snowstorm which swept the isthmus yesterday failed to retard military operations appreciably. The sky remained heavily overcast, however, and light flurries of snow during the afternoon raised Finnish hopes that a traditional February blizzard might yet come to their aid.

Fighting Near Kamara

The extent to which the Mannerheim line has been penetrated in the bitter battle that has raged along the Karelian isthmus for almost four weeks was indicated by the nightly communique, which acknowledged that the fighting had reached the vicinity of Kamara.

The village is a station on the railway line from Leningrad to Viipuri, about thirty-two miles from the Russian frontier and about twelve miles from the Finnish seaport at the head of the Gulf of Finland which is the immediate objective of the Soviet drive.

Attacks Turned Back

The Finnish high command asserted that all attacks in this sector had been turned back yesterday but described the action as very heavy.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga the Finns reported continuing successes resulting in the capture of "several enemy strong points" and 200 prisoners.

In the Pitkaranta islands along the northern shore of the lake, the Finnish communique said, several Russian supply columns were dispersed and more than 200 vehicles destroyed.

Successful Television Relay Is Announced by General Electric

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 22 (AP)—Successful television relay, with which engineers have struggled for years, was declared an actuality tonight by a General Electric Company official.

Solution of this chain, or relay, problem generally credited with delaying widespread inauguration of television. Otherwise reception theoretically is limited to the visual horizon.

High in the Helderberg mountains, near Schenectady, engineers attacked the problem. For weeks a television station there has picked up and rebroadcast programs put on the air from atop the towering Empire State building in New York city.

Experiment Successful

Tonight Dr. W. R. G. Baker, manager of the General Electric Television and radio department, termed the experiment "highly successful."

"Within a short time," he asserted, "people in Chicago may see the sun set in New York while it still is high above the horizon in Chicago."

Unlike the radio chains, which deliver programs to stations for re-broadcast by wire, the predicted television would go into the nation's homes by a series of aerial pickups and re-broadcasts.

Without chain operation each television station must operate independently in a restricted area.

Overcomes Restriction

Signals passing through the "trough" are halted by the mountain-top Antenna, 1,800 feet above sea level. The station thus overcomes the "visual broadcast horizon" restriction by raising both receiving and sending antennas.

Dr. Baker explains the nearly level Mohawk valley leading to the west provides a natural spacing of Metropolitan centers to make a network relay from New York to Chicago practicable. "Similarly," he explains, "the network could be extended to Boston and New England."

Observe Founding of Parochial Schools

Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 22 (AP)—Students and townspeople of this small college town near the Pennsylvania line paused here in memory of two big events—Washington's birthday and the 130th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic Parochial school system in the United States.

From the handful of poor pioneer children who attended first classes in the old "White Housee" on the Fleming farm Feb. 22, 1810, the institution established by the beloved Mother Seton has grown today to a modern educational plant known as St. Joseph's College.

Leaving Baltimore June 21, 1809, Mother Seton, her small daughter, and three others came to Emmitsburg to locate a school in a country that had been inhabited only by Indians and trappers a few years previously.

Recognizing that a fixed code of rules and regulations must be adopted in the interests of a progressive college, Mother Seton, the Reverend Father Dubourg, president of St. Mary's seminary at Baltimore, and Archbishop Carroll placed into effect the constitution of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent De Paul This action founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States.

Many New Freight Cars in Service

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Association of American Railroads reported a sharp increase in the number of new freight cars put into service and in the number of freight cars and locomotives on order in January.

Class 1 railroads in January put 4,983 new freight cars in service, the largest number installed in any January since 1930, when 8,709 were put on the tracks. In January, 1939, the railroads installed 1,020 new freight cars, and in January, 1938, the number was 2,148.

New freight cars on order February 1 totaled 34,559, compared with 6,637 on the same date last year, and 6,563 on February 1, 1938. The new cars on order this year included 16,542 coal; 16,803 box; 500 refrigerator; 365 flat; fifty-nine stock, and 290 miscellaneous.

Class 1 railroads on February 1, 1940, had 139 new locomotives on order, of which seventy-seven were steam and sixty-two new electric and Diesel. On the same date last year there were eighty-four on order, of which twenty-five were steam and fifty-nine electric and Diesel.

New locomotives put in service in January, 1940, totaled nineteen, of which four were steam and fifteen were electric and Diesel. In January, 1939, seventeen new locomotives were put in service, of which five were steam and twelve were electric and Diesel. In January, 1938, forty-four new locomotives were put in service, of which twenty-seven were steam and seventeen were electric and Diesel.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Soviet army's failure to crack the Taipale sector of the Mannerheim line, despite a mass attack by two full divisions on a front of probably less than five miles, demonstrates again that Russia still is far from achieving an early decisive victory over Finland.

While the Finns hold that Taipale bottleneck on the eastern flank of the Karelian isthmus, Russian successes in the center and on the west flank are of questionable value. The persistent Red army attack that cost many thousands of Russian lives may lead not to victory, but new disasters if it fails to break the Taipale front soon.

The Taipale sector appears a more vital front for both sides than its western Mannerheim line "anchor" mate, Koivisto, which the Russians claim to have captured. Unless Red forces can also crack the Finn's defense on the eastern flank on the isthmus, their whole attack might fail, resulting in another Finnish "miracle" victory.

Red army leaders are alive to that danger. The Finns report that two full Soviet divisions were engaged in the most recent mass attack on the Taipale front. That represents a force of somewhere between 30,000 and 40,000 men.

The Taipale bottleneck is a tongue of land between the shore of Lake Ladoga and the eastern extremity of the chain of waterways which make up the eastern portion of the Mannerheim defense system. That strip is less than half a dozen miles wide at its narrowest. The Taipale river battle front, winding across it, is not ten miles long over all.

That is the topographical situation still balking the Russians despite deep dents they have made elsewhere in the Mannerheim line. Pushing 30,000 to 40,000 troops into an attack sustained for hours on a front of less than five miles meant marching them forward almost shoulder to shoulder.

Only the desperate necessity of capturing that vital key to the first and most formidable waterline defenses of the Mannerheim system could justify the certain losses. Finnish claims of 2,000 Russian dead in a single day's fighting seem well justified.

Russian failure to turn the Taipale flank soon, or to make progress on the far wider flanking operation around Lake Ladoga, could imperil the whole Red attack on the isthmus.

Chickens May Soon Wear Gas Masks

Towson, Md., Feb. 22 (AP)—Gas masks for chickens may be in order if poultry thieves continue the methods used here today.

Reginald Groom reported to police he discovered two men in his hen yard early today silencing the birds with gas. Half his flock of 100 was asphyxiated.

Groom said he fired his single-barreled shotgun and heard one of the men scream as if hit. The other already was in flight.

Police who examined the dead chickens said they had been gassed but they were unable to determine the type of gas used. The surviving chickens showed some effects from the gas, Groom said.

And Wilson Favored Recall of Both German and Austrian Ambassadors Long Before War

By ANDRUE BERDING

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP) — President Woodrow Wilson wanted both the German and Austrian ambassadors to quit Washington a year and a half before the United States entered the World War, it was disclosed today through the state department's publication of papers of Robert Lansing, World War secretary of state.

The same papers show that Lansing advocated a rupture with Germany as early as August, 1915, and also the American government was seeking to separate Austria from Germany a month before it declared war on Germany.

President Wilson was determined to get rid of the German ambassador, Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff and the Austrian Ambassador, Constantin T. Dumba, following a disclosure that they had employed an American citizen to carry secret messages to Berlin. These messages outlined activities of the envoys to cripple American plants manufacturing munitions for the Allies.

Wilson Favored Action

One of the Lansing papers is a note from Wilson to Lansing, saying, "I entirely agree with you that we shall have to take some decided action with regard to the activities of Dumba as well as those of Bernstorff. . .What do you think would be the best course, a private intimation to each of them which would allow them to ask to be relieved, without public rebuke, or a direct request on our part to their governments? I do not know the practice in these matters."

The recall of Dumba was requested shortly thereafter, but Bernstorff was permitted to remain on.

The Lansing papers, revealing that Lansing was seriously considering war with Germany as early as August, 1915, contain a letter from Lansing to President Wilson, in which he says:

Would Influence Allies

"On the assumption that we sever diplomatic intercourse with the German government, which responds with a declaration of war, the consequences internationally would seem to be the complete restoration of friendship and confidence with the Allies and the necessary recognition of the United States as a party to the peace negotiations.

"We would be in a position to influence the Allies, if they should be victorious, to be lenient in their demands and to regain a part of the good will of Germany by being a generous enemy. If, on the other hand, Germany should triumph, we would be included in any settlement made, and Germany would be deprived of the free hand she would otherwise have in dealing with us after she had overcome her European adversaries.

"If the foregoing views are sound, it would appear that our usefulness in the restoration of peace would certainly not be lessened by a state of war between this country and Germany, and it might even be increased."

Negotiated with Austria

The Lansing papers show that, even while still a neutral, the United States had engaged in conversations with Austria which might have led to a separate peace, with Austria deserting Germany.

Lansing wrote Wilson on March 17, 1917, discussing a telegram from Ambassador Frederic C. Penfield in Vienna. The telegram reported that a secret meeting between a representative of the Allies and a representative of Austria-Hungary had been suggested by the Austrian statesman, Count Czernin.

Lansing said, "if these two representatives come together to discuss general terms of peace, they may gradually drift into a discussion of a separate peace; and, if Austria-Hungary once permits her representative to talk even on the subject, I believe that something will have been gained.

"It seems to me that we ought to take the opening offered. We may accomplish nothing or we may accomplish more than we expect. If we fail, I do not see that anything has been lost. We will be no worse of than we are now.

"We agreed, you will recall, to treat all communications with the Austro-Hungarian government as strictly secret. The next step would seem to be to telegraph Penfield to ask Count Czernin if he would object to our making the suggestion of an opening such as he proposed, to one of the Allied governments, not as originating here, explaining to him that, since the idea was his, he would not wish to appear to be violating our pledge of secrecy by even adopting the suggestion as our own unless he authorized us to do so."

Committee Hears Guild President

Crawford Denies Freedom of the Press Is Threatened

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—Kenneth Crawford, president of the American Newspaper Guild, denied today that freedom of the press was in any way threatened by the guild shop contracts which his organization seeks to negotiate with newspapers.

Crawford told the House Labor Committee:

"Many publishers have fought us with something like fury on the closed shop issue—and some of them have frankly confessed that they did so because they feared that closed shops would make us too strong.

"Most of them, however, profess to see a threat against freedom of the press. x x x Actually, there is no such threat in the guild shop. We have had enough experience to know that. The editors and publishers of newspapers are in every case the judges of what shall be printed."

He explained that under a guild shop, the employer may hire whom he chooses but that such a person must become a guild member within thirty to ninety days after he takes the job. Thus, he said, the phrase "closed shop" was really a misnomer when used to describe a guild shop.

Oliver Holden, executive director of the American Press Society, told the committee Tuesday that the closed shop might threaten the freedom of the press.

In an attempt to get Crawford's comment on some of Holden's statements, Acting Chairman Ramspeck (D-Ga) of the committee asked what might happen if guild members were ordered by the CIO, for instance, to color the news against the AFL.

Crawford said that would not happen and when Ramspeck asked what might happen if such a hypothetical situation arose, Crawford said:

"We'd tell them to go to hell. We certainly wouldn't submit to that kind of direction and the CIO wouldn't attempt it. Even if they did, we couldn't get it into the newspapers anyway."

After asserting that the reason for the desire for the guild shop is obvious, Crawford said:

"It is the same reason that accounts for the desire of most unions to get closed shops or union shops. It assures dues collections and requires everyone enjoying the benefits of organization to contribute his share toward the maintenance of the organization."

De Perini Surrenders, Faces Murder Charge

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—A 48-year-old former motorman, sought by police for three days to answer to a charge of murdering his wife, surrendered today.

He is Joseph de Perini of nearby Riverdale, Md. Police had been combing suburban counties of Maryland and Washington for him since the body of his 45-year-old wife, Alice, was found Tuesday. At one time they believed he might have committed suicide—basing the idea on what they said was a note received from de Perini by a son-in-law.

Prince Georges (Maryland) county police said de Perini had signed a statement in which he told this story:

His wife had rushed at him with a butcher knife. He struck her with his fist, wrested the knife from her and stabbed her. Then he left home and went to Washington where he remained in a rooming house until this morning when, with his funds exhausted, he decided to give himself up. He boarded a street car which took him to Hyattsville, Md., where he walked into police headquarters.

He was held for a preliminary hearing Monday.

Woman Truck Driver Runs over Husband

Durango, Colo., Feb. 22 (AP)—Hurled from a speeding toboggan, Dave McCollum, 26, was run over by a truck driven by his wife. He suffered a broken back.

The McCollums were tobogganing last night with friends. After her husband's sled, carrying six men, started down a six-mile run, Mrs. McCollum followed in the truck to haul the group back up the slope.

The careening toboggan spilled five of its occupants, but McCollum stayed aboard until it piled into a snowbank on the other side of the slide.

Seeing the five men sprawled to her right, Mrs. McCollum applied the brakes. The machine skidded to the left and ran over McCollum's head and back.

GESTAPOLAND, OR HOW NAZIS "FREED" POLAND

Secretly made at great risk to the photographer and smuggled out of Germany, these photos present scenes in German-conquered Warsaw, Poland. Buildings in the once beautiful capital, wrecked by German bombs and shells, remains in ruins. Inset, Jews are forced to wear a yellow triangle sewn to the back of their clothes and walk in the street.

Older Men Called To Take Field in Finnish Defense

About 2,000 Russians Reported Killed at Taipale

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Helsinki, Feb. 22 (AP)—Finland called more of her older men to the colors tonight as the Red army, hammering relentlessly at the Mannerheim line, continued a tremendous offensive which the Finns said was being repelled with heavy losses after reaching a point twelve miles from Viipuri.

Approximately 2,000 Russians were reported killed at Taipale in unsuccessful assaults on the east flank of the line, while on the opposite flank the Finnish high command said the attackers had lost "large numbers" of tanks in fierce fighting.

The Finns did not mention their own losses, but the need of replacements was emphasized by an order calling out the classes of 1894 and 1895—men forty-four to forty-six years old. The Finns three preceding classes were mobilized last week.

A snowstorm which swept the isthmus yesterday failed to retard military operations appreciably. The sky remained heavily overcast, however, and light flurries of snow during the afternoon raised Finnish hopes that a traditional February blizzard might yet come to their aid.

Fighting Near Kamara

The extent to which the Mannerheim line has been penetrated in the bitter battle that has raged along the Karelian isthmus for almost four weeks was indicated by the nightly communique, which acknowledged that the fighting had reached the vicinity of Kamara.

The village is a station on the railway line from Leningrad to Viipuri, about thirty-two miles from the Russian frontier and about twelve miles from the Finnish seaport at the head of the Gulf of Finland which is the immediate objective of the Soviet drive.

Attacks Turned Back

The Finnish high command asserted that all attacks in this sector had been turned back yesterday but described the action as very heavy.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga the Finns reported continuing successes resulting in the capture of "several enemy strong points" and 200 prisoners.

In the Pitkaranta islands along the northern shore of the lake, the Finnish communique said, several Russian supply columns were dispersed and more than 200 vehicles destroyed.

Successful Television Relay Is Announced by General Electric

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 22 (AP)—Successful television relay, with which engineers have struggled for years, was declared an actuality tonight by a General Electric Company official.

Solution of this chain, or relay, problem generally credited with delaying widespread inauguration of television. Otherwise reception theoretically is limited to the visual horizon.

High in the Helderberg mountains, near Schenectady, engineers attacked the problem. For weeks a television station there has picked up and rebroadcast programs put on the air from atop the towering Empire State building in New York city.

Experiment Successful

Tonight Dr. W. R. G. Baker, manager of the General Electric Television and radio department, termed the experiment "highly successful."

"Within a short time," he asserted, "people in Chicago may see the sun set in New York while it still is high above the horizon in Chicago."

Unlike the radio chains, which deliver programs to stations for re-broadcast by wire, the predicted television would go into the nation's homes by a series of aerial pickups and re-broadcasts.

Without chain operation each television station must operate independently in a restricted area.

Overcomes Restriction

Signals passing through the "trough" are halted by the mountain-top Antenna, 1,800 feet above sea level. The station thus overcomes the "visual broadcast horizon" restriction by raising both receiving and sending antennas.

Dr. Baker explains the nearly level Mohawk valley leading to the west provides a natural spacing of Metropolitan centers to make a network relay from New York to Chicago practicable. "Similarly," he explains, "the network could be extended to Boston and New England."

Observe Founding of Parochial Schools

Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 22 (AP)—Students and townspeople of this small college town near the Pennsylvania line paused here in memory of two big events—Washington's birthday and the 130th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic Parochial school system in the United States.

From the handful of poor pioneer children who attended first classes in the old "White Housee" on the Fleming farm Feb. 22, 1810, the institution established by the beloved Mother Seton has grown today to a modern educational plant known as St. Joseph's College.

Leaving Baltimore June 21, 1809, Mother Seton, her small daughter, and three others came to Emmitsburg to locate a school in a country that had been inhabited only by Indians and trappers a few years previously.

Recognizing that a fixed code of rules and regulations must be adopted in the interests of a progressive college, Mother Seton, the Reverend Father Dubourg, president of St. Mary's seminary at Baltimore, and Archbishop Carroll placed into effect the constitution of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent De Paul This action founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States.

Many New Freight Cars in Service

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Association of American Railroads reported a sharp increase in the number of new freight cars put into service and in the number of freight cars and locomotives on order in January.

Class 1 railroads in January put 4,983 new freight cars in service, the largest number installed in any January since 1930, when 8,709 were put on the tracks. In January, 1939, the railroads installed 1,020 new freight cars, and in January, 1938, the number was 2,148.

New freight cars on order February 1 totaled 34,559, compared with 6,637 on the same date last year, and 6,563 on February 1, 1938. The new cars on order this year included 16,542 coal; 16,803 box; 500 refrigerator; 365 flat; fifty-nine stock, and 290 miscellaneous.

Class 1 railroads on February 1, 1940, had 139 new locomotives on order, of which seventy-seven were steam and sixty-two new electric and Diesel. On the same date last year there were eighty-four on order, of which twenty-five were steam and fifty-nine electric and Diesel.

New locomotives put in service in January, 1940, totaled nineteen, of which four were steam and fifteen were electric and Diesel. In January, 1939, seventeen new locomotives were put in service, of which five were steam and twelve were electric and Diesel. In January, 1938, forty-four new locomotives were put in service, of which twenty-seven were steam and seventeen were electric and Diesel.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

Associated Press Staff Writer

The Soviet army's failure to crack the Taipale sector of the Mannerheim line, despite a mass attack by two full divisions on a front of probably less than five miles, demonstrates again that Russia still is far from achieving an early decisive victory over Finland.

While the Finns hold that Taipale bottleneck on the eastern flank of the Karelian isthmus, Russian successes in the center and on the west flank are of questionable value. The persistent Red army attack that cost many thousands of Russian lives may lead not to victory, but new disasters if it fails to break the Taipale front soon.

The Taipale sector appears a more vital front for both sides than its western Mannerheim line "anchor" mate, Koivisto, which the Russians claim to have captured. Unless Red forces can also crack the Finn's defense on the eastern flank on the isthmus, their whole attack might fail, resulting in another Finnish "miracle" victory.

Red army leaders are alive to that danger. The Finns report that two full Soviet divisions were engaged in the most recent mass attack on the Taipale front. That represents a force of somewhere between 30,000 and 40,000 men.

The Taipale bottleneck is a tongue of land between the shore of Lake Ladoga and the eastern extremity of the chain of waterways which make up the eastern portion of the Mannerheim defense system. That strip is less than half a dozen miles wide at its narrowest. The Taipale river battle front, winding across it, is not ten miles long over all.

That is the topographical situation still balking the Russians despite deep dents they have made elsewhere in the Mannerheim line. Pushing 30,000 to 40,000 troops into an attack sustained for hours on a front of less than five miles meant marching them forward almost shoulder to shoulder.

Only the desperate necessity of capturing that vital key to the first and most formidable waterline defenses of the Mannerheim system could justify the certain losses. Finnish claims of 2,000 Russian dead in a single day's fighting seem well justified.

Russian failure to turn the Taipale flank soon, or to make progress on the far wider flanking operation around Lake Ladoga, could imperil the whole Red attack on the isthmus.

Chickens May Soon Wear Gas Masks

Towson, Md., Feb. 22 (AP)—Gas masks for chickens may be in order if poultry thieves continue the methods used here today.

Reginald Groom reported to police he discovered two men in his hen yard early today silencing the birds with gas. Half his flock of 100 was asphyxiated.

Groom said he fired his single-barreled shotgun and heard one of the men scream as if hit. The other already was in flight.

Police who examined the dead chickens said they had been gassed but they were unable to determine the type of gas used. The surviving chickens showed some effects from the gas, Groom said.

The Ohio River Dam Controversy

CONSIDERABLE DISAPPOINTMENT prevails along the Ohio river, particularly among rivermen, over the high roller type of dams the federal government has been installing in late years at great expense. The rivermen, it seems, prefer the wicket type dam.

The roller type dam supplanted a wicket type dam at Gallipolis and complaint obtains that the ice floes could not be flushed away from this dam recently while the wicket dams, such as exist at Dams No. 18 and 19 near Parkersburg, were readily lowered and released large accumulations of ice, thus easily saving steamboats with their cargoes that had been tied up at various points.

"Furthermore," observes the Parkersburg Sentinel, "the roller type dams are extremely expensive and are a big cost to the taxpayers of the nation."

"About the turn of the century," the Sentinel explains, "there was a strong movement for the complete canalization of the Ohio river with a stage the year around of nine feet. Those were the years of the packet-boat when dozens of those craft rode the river from Pittsburgh to Cairo carrying a large share of general freight to the decided advantage of nearly all shippers and most consumers.

"Finally the river was brought to a nine-foot stage by the erection of a vast number of wicket dams with their accompanying locks. Strangely, however, the completion of this fine waterway was followed by a gradual elimination of packets as river freight carriers until today there are very few such boats. Their places have been taken by towboats owned by the great steel and coal corporations who thus are able to have their freight carried at very low cost while Uncle Sam and his taxpayers foot the bill for keeping up the navigable stage.

"Then, somebody started a movement to have far larger and fewer dams and those to be of the roller type. The one at Gallipolis cost ten million dollars and efforts are being made to have others constructed which would make useless the present wicket dams which so well serve the purpose of providing a navigable stream.

"We cannot understand why this government should be called upon to spend so many million dollars just to provide cheap transportation for big corporations which well can afford to pay their own way. It seems to us that the old system of wicket dams now in existence is all that is needed."

It appears that plans are under way to supplant the dams in the Ohio at Parkersburg with the roller type, and the Sentinel is leading a protest against the change. The strongest argument Parkersburg has against the roller type, according to the Sentinel, is that it will have the tendency of filling up the mouth of the Little Kanawha river for a long distance with contaminated water from the Ohio. Such a dam, it is said, would back up water in the Little Kanawha to a point far up in Wirt county. Among other things this would seriously incommode the big Viscose rayon plant at Parkersburg, which employs 4,000 persons and has a pay roll of $100,000 a week and which was established there largely by reason of the excellent water available. This plant would either have to install a large water purifying plant or lay a pipe line many miles up the Little Kanawha.

So Parkersburg is going to do everything possible, according to the Sentinel, to prevent the construction of roller type dams there.

One of the strange things about this reimprovement of the Ohio is why, after having provided at enormous expense the long-desired nine-foot stage, which was supposed to solve all navigation difficulties and aid in flood control, the whole job should now be done over again at still greater expense. Was it that the New Deal just had to shovel money into something somewhere?

On the Spot

ANOTHER GRATIFYING DEVELOPMENT of the week was the smashing defeat of the Huey Long machine in Louisiana.

It was gratifying because it showed that when the people are finally aroused to the evils of bossism and corruption and have a chance to do so they will "turn the rascals out."

If any bunch ever deserved turning out anywhere it is the gang that has held Louisiana in its greedy grip since the late Huey Long transformed the government into a dictatorship.

The citizens of Louisiana, however, had not waited until the election of this week to get after the Long machine. It has been a long, hard task by reason of legal handicaps provided by it, but steps were some time since taken as a result of which a number of the bosses are in the penitentiary and a number of others are awaiting trials and investigations.

Sam H. Jones, the newly- elected governor, is a Lake Charles attorney, 42 years old, and a novice at the political game. His triumph came upon his promises to finish demolition of the machine and rehabilitate the state government. If any one was ever on the spot for the fulfillment of pledges he is there. By the turn of fate he has ample opportunity to finish the job as Long had had his subservient legislatures pass a number of dictatorial laws designed to keep him and his regime in power and to frustrate opposition. These laws for the most part remain on the statute books.

The new governor and the reform ticket elected with him are also on the spot with respect to their stewardship as they face the temptation to take over the power left by the Long machine and utilize it themselves to keep themselves likewise in power. Here, indeed, they face a severe test, but if they have any sense of proportion and of moral values they should realize that what has happened to the Long outfit can also happen to them. They have just got to make good.

It is the hope everywhere, of course, that these men will face their responsibilities fairly and squarely, and redeem the Pelican state from the subverted rule under which it was so long shamefully misgoverned and scandalously looted.

A Simpler Calendar

THE WORLD CALENDAR PLAN, now claiming to have the approval of fourteen governments, rearranges the length of the familiar twelve months, equalizes the quarters and makes every year the same.

The first month in every quarter would have thirty-one days and the other two months thirty days each. Every month would have exactly twenty-six week days; every month would begin on Sunday and end on Saturday; and every year would begin with Sunday, January 1.

The observance of Washington's Birthday again brought to mind the fact that it originally fell on February 11. It was shifted to February 22 because the Gregorian calendar reform, adopted by Great Britain when Washington was 20, added eleven days to the old-style dates that had been fixed under the Julian calendar.

Some of the colonies were slow to conform to the change; but Pennsylvania adopted the new calendar before the end of the Revolutionary war, and the first public celebration of Washington's birthday took place at Valley Forge February 22, 1778. Virginia was still following the old reckoning until after Washington's last anniversary, which was celebrated at Alexandria, February 11, 1799.

The British parliament provided that any person born before the calendar change could continue using the old style if he so desired, but this would last only during that person's lifetime.

So the agitation for calendar reform is nothing new. The calendar has been changed in the past, and from this distance it would seem that the changes were in the nature of improvements.

Wheat Imports Unnecessary

ACCORDING TO the government's Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the United States will not need to import any wheat during the coming crop year no matter how poor the crop that is harvested next summer.

Crop and surplus last summer gave this country a total supply slightly in excess of 1,000,000,000 bushels. Normal consumption during a year is about 700,000,000 bushels. The carryover next July will therefore be 300,000,000 bushels.

Latest government forecast estimates the winter wheat crop at 400,000,000 bushels. But even if it is only 300,000,000 bushels, the spring wheat crop would add enough to give the United States a normal year's supply. Nearly all of the surplus might be wiped out but there would still be enough to satisfy domestic demand.

Price trend during the next few months will depend largely upon European demand for Canadian wheat and the manner in which farmers dispose of loan wheat. Wheat loan stocks stand at 167,000,000 bushels. If the farmers took a notion to dispose of most of this at the same time it would send prices crashing. But farmers have shown no disposition thus far to sell at anything like present levels.

American women would not stand for a dictator, says a feminine speaker. We don't know about that—look how the lovelies follow the dictates of fashion!

"The fearful thing about a skid," says an auto journal, "is its brief duration." How about the one that Europe has been doing for the last several years?

The one person in the world who is never hit for a small loan is the Emperor of Japan. He's so sacred no one is allowed to touch him.

O Inconsistency!

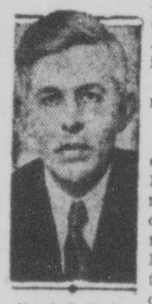
By MARSHALL MASLIN

You charge me, Sir, with Inconsistency!
You say I change, drift with the wind, blow hot, blow cold, deny today what I most strenuously affirmed just yesterday, and may tomorrow defend what I opposed today. . . . This is the charge you bring against me. . . . And Inconsistency, you loudly cry, is the sign of an unstable mind.



Marshall Maslin

I agree, my Critic, and I deny most firmly your complaint.

Must a man remember always exactly where he stood yesterday? Must he cling, like the meanest miser to a coin, to every scrap of opinion, every vagrant statement that ever fell unregarded from his lips? Must he watch himself as the cat watches the mouse, for fear of change, for fear of what a critic may think?

If I say I like vegetable salad, must I eat it every night in the year? If I mention my liking for Kreisler's violin and his Vienna waltzes, must I hear them forever, at every concert? If I like a man today, must I like him always? If he bored me yesterday, must he bore me tomorrow? Cannot he change, and may not I, as well?

Am I fixed, nailed to the wall, bound down with weights, immutably what I was and never to be anything else?

I change and so do you. And so do the clouds and so does the tree before your door. And so does the old earth beneath your plodding feet. . . . We too must move, must change. Must be what we in our strangest fantasies, had never dreamed of being.

The forces that made us what we are fail and disappear, but the energy of them takes a new form and shapes us anew. We were settled for life but a new frontier opens ahead of us and we break a trail toward a new adventure.

We were younger once and set in our ways. The years come upon us and we think new thoughts and with the same voice speak different words. It is the same river, but new waters flow between its banks. Is the river, then, so inconsistent? Is life inconsistent, is energy, is beauty—because it changes before our eyes? Are sunsets, trees and human beings inconsistent because they change? And why do you complain when you find your friend grown otherwise than you wish?

O solid, stolid fellow, unchanging and accusing man! You miss a heap of living by standing still and crying out against the changing world!

Etiquet of Prize Ring Is Recalled

Edwin C. Hill

In "Northwest Passage", by Kenneth Roberts, there is an interesting tale of wildcat hunting in early-day New England. The boys got up early in a bitter winter morning and before braving the cold each drank two or three quarts of buttered rum. Then, when they saw a wildcat, they just walked up and kissed him and put him in the bag. We were thinking of that when Arturo Godoy kissed Joe Louis in the fourteenth round of their recent brawl.

That, however, was not a buttered-rum attack, although back in the days of bath-tub gin, it would have been a nice idea for prize-fighters. It was merely an old Spanish custom, or to be more exact, French. With the Latins this is the kiss of both chivalry and triumph, traditionally bestowed by the victor. Senor Godoy was saying in effect, "Senor Louis, it is now clear to all beholders that I have made a monkey out of you, but I observe the amenities and thus salute you as the victor." However, the majority of the judges had other ideas.

Old Stuff

After the fight, I fell in with a philosophical gent, an old friend to whom pretty nearly everything is old stuff. He told me about the ancient Gauls who, winning a savage encounter, were required to make some gesture of magnanimity. This came on down to the French custom of the prize-ring by which the winner always kisses the loser on both cheeks, less uniformly observed in other latin countries. My friend so filled me with historic precedent that I thought I might dash up to Harvard and trade it in for a Ph. D. One of his citations, however, deserves wider circulation.

Fighter a Sideline

"It was in Paris, in September, 1923," said my friend, "Ernest Hemingway, even in that day strongly inclined to the red-bloodedness which later made him the most hairy-chested of modern writing men. He was a poet, then, working with Sylvia Beach in her little print shop on the Rue Odeon, and quotations on poems, like the franc, were slipping. Hence Mr. Hemingway carried a sideline in the person of Larry Gaines, a colored fighter from Canada, whence the poet had brought him.

"Gaines was a tall, lank, shuffling boy, a tough fighter with an impressive record, and quite a few years later champion of the British Empire. After meeting a string of push-overs, Hemingway got his boy matched against M. Mithieu, champion of the French army. Mithieu was supposed to be an eat-'em alive fighter and the French papers were fanning him up as the coming world champion.

A Beautiful Job

The fight came off under the management of M. Anatasse, at an ancient stadium in the Rue Pelleport. M. Anatasse, a dapper little man, was a magnificent showman and had done a beautiful job in building up Mithieu as a killer. The stadium was a mediaeval arena, surrounded by boxes, in which family parties drank aperitifs, and sang little chansons.

"Adjoining was the 'Academic du Boxe,' with lace curtains and flowers in window boxes, and a dancing salon, where fighters in evening dress danced between fights. The academy was maintained as a fight stable by the Ministry of Education, just then inducing nation virility. At the ringside sat relatives of the fighters, grandmothers some of them, knitting and tatting, and crying "bis Armand!" when one lad smacked another.

Dynamite Explodes

"Larry Gaines was absolutely bug-eyed. He had never seen a fight arena like this one. When he shuffled to his corner, took off a tattered robe and disclosed his soiled trunks, he looked a little dazed. Then came the beautiful Mithieu, romping into the ring, tossing aside his gold robe, rippling his splendid muscles like a spirited pink stallion, to the frantic cheers of the crowd. The fight started. Mithieu did a bit of Delsarte posturing. Gaines went into a defensive crouch, waiting the lightning bolt. Then Mithieu let loose a hay-maker which missed Gainer by about two feet, at the same time throwing himself wide open as he extended his left in a graceful gesture.

"Gaines' face lit up like Forty-second and Broadway, after a black-out. One saw a couple of octaves of gleaming white teeth. It had become quite clear that the charming M. Mithieu was not a fighter. One couldn't quite see what happened. There was an explosion of black dynamite and M. Mithieu was stiff as a plank. Gaines had noted that each fighter, when he flattened another, had picked him up and kissed him on both cheeks. He wanted to behave nicely. So he bent over the somnolent Mithieu and planted on each cheek a kiss which could have been heard far through the surrounding faubourgs. 'Did I do all right Mister Hemingway?' he asked. 'Perfect' said Hemingway."

HEADS SWEDISH ARMY

Gen. Per Sylvan

Chief of staff of Sweden's army is General Per Sylvan. Sweden, the war brought home to her by fall of Red bombs on the Swedish town of Pajala, is divided on the question of open military assistance to neighboring Finland. Many observers say if Finland falls Sweden will be Russia's next victim.

AFTER THEM, MEN, THEY'RE DESPERATE CHARACTERS

Sweden and Norway First in Line To Give Most Needed Aid to Finland

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Feb. 22.—From the point of view of American policy about Finland, there is light in present events in Finland. Here in America, many persons think our government ought to loan (or give) Finland money for arms. Others think our government should give for purposes other than arms, for food and the like. Regardless of what our government does, many persons think our people, by popular subscription, should give Finland money for arms. Other persons think that, by popular subscription, we should give for purposes other than arms.

Mark Sullivan

The needs of Finland are three: She needs men, soldiers; she needs arms, including airplanes; her third need is food, clothing, hospital supplies and the like.

Of the three forms of help, the most indispensable is soldiers; without soldiers the other two hardly avail. How many soldiers is a matter of judgement. Most estimates are surprisingly small. One person of good jurgment says 350,000 would be enough. Another judgment is as low as 75,000. The more soldiers, the better. But in the judgment of qualified persons, the terrain and the other conditions are such that a surprisingly small number of soldiers, added to the gallant Finns, could hold off the Russian indefinitely.

Is Natural Source

For providing soldiers, the natural source is Sweden. Sweden has the soldiers, and they are good; she has a fine army, adapted to the climate. And it is upon Sweden that the primary obligation rests. Sweden is the country that will face Russia next, if Finland falls. Sweden is a kind of back-country to Finland. When and if the Russians cross the narrow strip that is Finland, they are upon Sweden's border.

This puts upon Sweden the primary obligation for furnishing soldiers. The other forms of help Finland needs—arms, and food and the like—can readily come from elsewhere.

But if Sweden does not give soldiers, other people throughout the world will be chilled about giving the other forms of help. The mere fact of failure by Sweden to act, would have an unfortunate psychological effect. It is as if all the states of the United States were separate countries; and as if Maine were invaded by a foreign foe; and as if Maine's neighbor, New Hampshire, did not send soldiers to help. In such a condition, help would be less likely to come from Texas.

King Fearful

The Swedish king announced this week that Sweden would not send organized military aid to Finland. It is certain the king did not like to take this position; and it is probable he took it only through fear that by such a step Sweden might later be involved in the war between Germany and the Allies. We can feel sure that he did what he thought was best, and we can sympathize with him. One can read between the lines of King Gustaf's statement that he takes this stand only because his official position calls upon him to do it. Almost, one infers that if the Swedish people chose to do otherwise, the king would admit that that is their privilege. The king, in his statement, spoke of "other ways" of help, "not inconsiderable assistance", that are already going from Sweden to Finland. It may be the other forms of help include soldiers—they may be going as individuals, or small units not in uniform. As we have learned to recognize "undeclared war," so may there be such a thing as "undeclared help."

May Be Sufficient

Possibly the volunteers going into Finland from various countries may be sufficient in number and may be organized into effective military strength in sufficient time to save Finland. Next to Sweden, the obligation to send soldiers to Finland rests upon Norway; and upon the Allies, France and England. It may be that soldiers are going from the Allies. Finland may yet have, from one source or another, enough soldiers.

That Finland should first get man power from other sources, is the first requisite to her ever getting arms from America. America is guided much by a lesson learned from the Great war. When it was first suggested we should enter, we were told, or led to believe, that all the Allies would need from us would be arms, ships, money and the like. We took it for granted there would be no demand on us for man power, except possibly a small army, a division or two as a symbol. But once we had declared war, we were told we must send enormous man power. That experience remains in America's memory. Every European statesman making any calculation about America should begin with the premise that America will never again send an army to Europe—imaginably other forms of aid, but never man power.

May Press Government

If Finland gets enough soldiers from other sources, it may be that American opinion would press our government to give arms, or money for arms. So far we have specifically excluded arms from the help we give. We have loaned Finland ten million dollars for purchases of goods other than arms, and we are about to authorize 20 million more for the same purpose with the same limitation.

If Finland is ever to get arms, or money for arms, from America, in material quantity, it must be by government action. Arms means immense amounts of money, tens of millions. Besides, it is only by action of government, our own or others, that arms in large quantities, certainly airplanes, can be made available. The plane manufacturing facilities of the United States must be already working at full capacity on orders from our own government and from France and England. If the Finns are to get planes from America in the near future, they must be planes released to them by the other governments.

A Vacation Every Day

From the Raleigh, W. Va., Register

Need a vacation? Certainly! And not next month or next summer—but now! What's more, you don't need a vacation that the boss gives you, but one that you take yourself. Everyone ought to have a vacation every day, and with planning and wit he can put into short intervals all the essentials of a protracted holiday.

Too many of us dwell in the grip of routine and preoccupation, but with a bit of scheming we can change the scene, the pace, and the habit of our daily lives without breaking appointments, being late, or loafing. Mere cessation of work and aimless relaxation aren't enough because vacations must include new faces, getting new points of view, doing different and exciting things—rekindling that something which puts sparkle back in eyes, spring back into sagging arches.

The lunch hour provides vacation opportunities or a walk, glimpses of new surroundings, an exchange of ideas with truck drivers and college students in "beaneries" and cafeterias; or a few minutes to catch the drama of the street with a camera.

Even the visits of persons who interrupt your busiest working hours can be vacations if an interesting exchange of views replaces a bored resistance to the other fellow's ideas. A few minutes at a hobby for many folks will sweep aside the accumulated debris of other people's demands which clutter up their minds in the tyranny of fixed schedules.

Third Term Seen Although Disliked

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, Feb. 22—I believe that Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated and elected for a third term. I have said this more than once here and elsewhere. Every time I say it publicly, I get a lot of indignant fan letters from people who agree with me — at least in being very much opposed to a third term for any man. The complaint is that this is "defeatism" — almost treason in the sense of adhering to the enemy, giving him aid and comfort. I can't answer each of these, kick separately, so this is an attempt at a blanket reply.

In the first place, to be either a "defeatist" or a "traitor", you have to owe somebody an allegiance for which you are fighting. I shall fight as hard as I can against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt, but I believe that a column that tries —sometimes not very successfully— to be a fair comment on events and actions in general—hasn't any business tying up with any favorite to the exclusion of any contrary comment, at least until the issues are drawn and there is no other thing to say except "yea" or "nay."

In this view it is neither "defeatism" nor "treason" to say that I believe Mr. Roosevelt will be our next president—if that is my opinion—which it is.

Cursed in Dixie

As to his nomination—does a majority of the Democratic party desire it? Decidedly not. In Dixie there are curses not loud but deep. Southern Democracy has been the step-child of the New Deal. It threatens white political supremacy. It has taken the South's ⅔ rule away from the nomination. Its farm policy is ruining the foreign market for cotton. The South has received the lowest per capita handout for "recovery and relief". But the politicians of the South have been dragooned by New Deal pap, purge and power. They are now only a minority without a veto in the convention. They must get on any band wagon that really starts to roll, or read themselves into the outer dark. In the election, the South will vote Democratic as usual because, there it is almost like marrying a negro not to do so.

Want the Handouts

The tradition against a third term and the trend away from the president among Democratic politicians —in their hearts—is almost as strong in the North. What do politicos like Frank Hague in New Jersey and Chicago's Boss Nash care about Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal? They care principally for its handouts — but that is enough. Less powerful politicians are somewhat in the same category. You could count the really convinced and zealous New Dealers in the Senate on the fingers of one hand. If you were Siamese twins you could count all there are in both houses of Congress on your fingers and toes. But here again the vast New Deal political and patronage machine controls political attitudes if not political thinking.

Can't Oppose Him

These are the gents who decide on the delegates and pick men of their own type. Whether or not he raises a finger or even permits his name to be used, most of these men will not vote against Mr. Roosevelt. Some boy orator will arise at sometime in the convention with a cross of gold and crown of thorns speech and it will be all over except the shouting—which will last for two hours.

In the election, there will be on the side of the president (1) the normal Democratic minority; (2) a majority of the Jewish people; (3) the farmers as long as they are sure of "benefit" checks; (4) the unemployed on relief; (5) most of the negro race; (6) most of organized labor; (7,8,9 and 10) Republican ineptitude, disunion and lack of either a program or a sufficiently popular candidate—allee samee 1936. Figure out a way to beat that if you can. I can't.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

On the Record

By Louis J. Taber, Master of the National Grange

An impartial survey of the whole situation must convince any intelligent and unprejudiced person that under present conditions our government is pursuing diametrically opposite and contradictory policies at one and the same time. Under the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Wage-Hour Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, the Social Security Act, and similar legislation, we have adopted a policy that calls for economic nationalism. * * * Under the Reciprocal Tariff policy we are pursuing what is sometimes called a "good neighbor policy," or a policy of international altruism. It must be manifest that we cannot successfully pursue both of these policies at one and the same time.

The Ohio River Dam Controversy

CONSIDERABLE DISAPPOINTMENT prevails along the Ohio river, particularly among rivermen, over the high roller type of dams the federal government has been installing in late years at great expense. The rivermen, it seems, prefer the wicket type dam.

The roller type dam supplanted a wicket type dam at Gallipolis and complaint obtains that the ice floes could not be flushed away from this dam recently while the wicket dams, such as exist at Dams No. 18 and 19 near Parkersburg, were readily lowered and released large accumulations of ice, thus easily saving steamboats with their cargoes that had been tied up at various points.

"Furthermore," observes the Parkersburg Sentinel, "the roller type dams are extremely expensive and are a big cost to the taxpayers of the nation."

"About the turn of the century," the Sentinel explains, "there was a strong movement for the complete canalization of the Ohio river with a stage the year around of nine feet. Those were the years of the packet-boat when dozens of those craft rode the river from Pittsburgh to Cairo carrying a large share of general freight to the decided advantage of nearly all shippers and most consumers.

"Finally the river was brought to a nine-foot stage by the erection of a vast number of wicket dams with their accompanying locks. Strangely, however, the completion of this fine waterway was followed by a gradual elimination of packets as river freight carriers until today there are very few such boats. Their places have been taken by towboats owned by the great steel and coal corporations who thus are able to have their freight carried at very low cost while Uncle Sam and his taxpayers foot the bill for keeping up the navigable stage.

"Then, somebody started a movement to have far larger and fewer dams and those to be of the roller type. The one at Gallipolis cost ten million dollars and efforts are being made to have others constructed which would make useless the present wicket dams which so well serve the purpose of providing a navigable stream.

"We cannot understand why this government should be called upon to spend so many million dollars just to provide cheap transportation for big corporations which well can afford to pay their own way. It seems to us that the old system of wicket dams now in existence is all that is needed."

It appears that plans are under way to supplant the dams in the Ohio at Parkersburg with the roller type, and the Sentinel is leading a protest against the change. The strongest argument Parkersburg has against the roller type, according to the Sentinel, is that it will have the tendency of filling up the mouth of the Little Kanawha river for a long distance with contaminated water from the Ohio. Such a dam, it is said, would back up water in the Little Kanawha to a point far up in Wirt county. Among other things this would seriously incommode the big Viscose rayon plant at Parkersburg, which employs 4,000 persons and has a pay roll of $100,000 a week and which was established there largely by reason of the excellent water available. This plant would either have to install a large water purifying plant or lay a pipe line many miles up the Little Kanawha.

So Parkersburg is going to do everything possible, according to the Sentinel, to prevent the construction of roller type dams there.

One of the strange things about this reimprovement of the Ohio is why, after having provided at enormous expense the long-desired nine-foot stage, which was supposed to solve all navigation difficulties and aid in flood control, the whole job should now be done over again at still greater expense. Was it that the New Deal just had to shovel money into something somewhere?

On the Spot

ANOTHER GRATIFYING DEVELOPMENT of the week was the smashing defeat of the Huey Long machine in Louisiana.

It was gratifying because it showed that when the people are finally aroused to the evils of bossism and corruption and have a chance to do so they will "turn the rascals out."

If any bunch ever deserved turning out anywhere it is the gang that has held Louisiana in its greedy grip since the late Huey Long transformed the government into a dictatorship.

The citizens of Louisiana, however, had not waited until the election of this week to get after the Long machine. It has been a long, hard task by reason of legal handicaps provided by it, but steps were some time since taken as a result of which a number of the bosses are in the penitentiary and a number of others are awaiting trials and investigations.

Sam H. Jones, the newly- elected governor, is a Lake Charles attorney, 42 years old, and a novice at the political game. His triumph came upon his promises to finish demolition of the machine and rehabilitate the state government. If any one was ever on the spot for the fulfillment of pledges he is there. By the turn of fate he has ample opportunity to finish the job as Long had had his subservient legislatures pass a number of dictatorial laws designed to keep him and his regime in power and to frustrate opposition. These laws for the most part remain on the statute books.

The new governor and the reform ticket elected with him are also on the spot with respect to their stewardship as they face the temptation to take over the power left by the Long machine and utilize it themselves to keep themselves likewise in power. Here, indeed, they face a severe test, but if they have any sense of proportion and of moral values they should realize that what has happened to the Long outfit can also happen to them. They have just got to make good.

It is the hope everywhere, of course, that these men will face their responsibilities fairly and squarely, and redeem the Pelican state from the subverted rule under which it was so long shamefully misgoverned and scandalously looted.

A Simpler Calendar

THE WORLD CALENDAR PLAN, now claiming to have the approval of fourteen governments, rearranges the length of the familiar twelve months, equalizes the quarters and makes every year the same.

The first month in every quarter would have thirty-one days and the other two months thirty days each. Every month would have exactly twenty-six week days; every month would begin on Sunday and end on Saturday; and every year would begin with Sunday, January 1.

The observance of Washington's Birthday again brought to mind the fact that it originally fell on February 11. It was shifted to February 22 because the Gregorian calendar reform, adopted by Great Britain when Washington was 20, added eleven days to the old-style dates that had been fixed under the Julian calendar.

Some of the colonies were slow to conform to the change; but Pennsylvania adopted the new calendar before the end of the Revolutionary war, and the first public celebration of Washington's birthday took place at Valley Forge February 22, 1778. Virginia was still following the old reckoning until after Washington's last anniversary, which was celebrated at Alexandria, February 11, 1799.

The British parliament provided that any person born before the calendar change could continue using the old style if he so desired, but this would last only during that person's lifetime.

So the agitation for calendar reform is nothing new. The calendar has been changed in the past, and from this distance it would seem that the changes were in the nature of improvements.

Wheat Imports Unnecessary

ACCORDING TO the government's Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the United States will not need to import any wheat during the coming crop year no matter how poor the crop that is harvested next summer.

Crop and surplus last summer gave this country a total supply slightly in excess of 1,000,000,000 bushels. Normal consumption during a year is about 700,000,000 bushels. The carryover next July will therefore be 300,000,000 bushels.

Latest government forecast estimates the winter wheat crop at 400,000,000 bushels. But even if it is only 300,000,000 bushels, the spring wheat crop would add enough to give the United States a normal year's supply. Nearly all of the surplus might be wiped out but there would still be enough to satisfy domestic demand.

Price trend during the next few months will depend largely upon European demand for Canadian wheat and the manner in which farmers dispose of loan wheat. Wheat loan stocks stand at 167,000,000 bushels. If the farmers took a notion to dispose of most of this at the same time it would send prices crashing. But farmers have shown no disposition thus far to sell at anything like present levels.

American women would not stand for a dictator, says a feminine speaker. We don't know about that—look how the lovelies follow the dictates of fashion!

"The fearful thing about a skid," says an auto journal, "is its brief duration." How about the one that Europe has been doing for the last several years?

The one person in the world who is never hit for a small loan is the Emperor of Japan. He's so sacred no one is allowed to touch him.

O Inconsistency!

By MARSHALL MASLIN

You charge me, Sir, with Inconsistency!

You say I change, drift with the wind, blow hot, blow cold, deny today what I most strenuously affirmed just yesterday, and may tomorrow defend what I opposed today. . . . This is the charge you bring against me. . . . And Inconsistency, you loudly cry, is the sign of an unstable mind.

I agree, my Critic, and I deny most firmly your complaint.

Marshall Maslin

Must a man remember always exactly where he stood yesterday? Must he cling, like the meanest miser to a coin, to every scrap of opinion, every vagrant statement that ever fell unregarded from his lips? Must he watch himself as the cat watches the mouse, for fear of change, for fear of what a critic may think?

If I say I like vegetable salad, must I eat it every night in the year? If I mention my liking for Kreisler's violin and his Vienna waltzes, must I hear them forever, at every concert? If I like a man today, must I like him always? If he bored me yesterday, must he bore me tomorrow? Cannot he change, and may not I, as well?

Am I fixed, nailed to the wall, bound down with weights, immutably what I was and never to be anything else?

I change and so do you. And so do the clouds and so does the tree before your door. And so does the old earth beneath your plodding feet. . . . We too must move, must change. Must be what we in our strangest fantasies, had never dreamed of being.

The forces that made us what we are fail and disappear, but the energy of them takes a new form and shapes us anew. We were settled for life but a new frontier opens ahead of us and we break a trail toward a new adventure.

We were younger once and set in our ways. The years come upon us and we think new thoughts and with the same voice speak different words. It is the same river, but new waters flow between its banks. Is the river, then, so inconsistent? Is life inconsistent, is energy, is beauty—because it changes before our eyes? Are sunsets, trees and human beings inconsistent because they change? And why do you complain when you find your friend grown otherwise than you wish?

O solid, stolid fellow, unchanging and accusing man! You miss a heap of living by standing still and crying out against the changing world!

Etiquet of Prize Ring Is Recalled

Edwin C. Hill

In "Northwest Passage", by Kenneth Roberts, there is an interesting tale of wildcat hunting in early-day New England. The boys got up early in a bitter winter morning and before braving the cold each drank two or three quarts of buttered rum. Then, when they saw a wildcat, they just walked up and kissed him and put him in the bag. We were thinking of that when Arturo Godoy kissed Joe Louis in the fourteenth round of their recent brawl.

That, however, was not a buttered-rum attack, although back in the days of bath-tub gin, it would have been a nice idea for prize-fighters. It was merely an old Spanish custom, or to be more exact, French. With the Latins this is the kiss of both chivalry and triumph, traditionally bestowed by the victor. Senor Godoy was saying in effect, "Senor Louis, it is now clear to all beholders that I have made a monkey out of you, but I observe the amenities and thus salute you as the victor." However, the majority of the judges had other ideas.

Old Stuff

After the fight, I fell in with a philosophical gent, an old friend to whom pretty nearly everything is old stuff. He told me about the ancient Gauls who, winning a savage encounter, were required to make some gesture of magnanimity. This came on down to the French custom of the prize-ring by which the winner always kisses the loser on both cheeks, less uniformly observed in other latin countries. My friend so filled me with historic precedent that I thought I might dash up to Harvard and trade it in for a Ph. D. One of his citations, however, deserves wider circulation.

Fighter a Sideline

"It was in Paris, in September, 1923," said my friend, "Ernest Hemingway, even in that day strongly inclined to the red-bloodedness which later made him the most hairy-chested of modern writing men. He was a poet, then, working with Sylvia Beach in her little print shop on the Rue Odeon, and quotations on poems, like the franc, were slipping. Hence Mr. Hemingway carried a sideline in the person of Larry Gaines, a colored fighter from Canada, whence the poet had brought him.

"Gaines was a tall, lank, shuffling boy, a tough fighter with an impressive record, and quite a few years later champion of the British Empire. After meeting a string of push-overs, Hemingway got his boy matched against M. Mithieu, champion of the French army. Mithieu was supposed to be an eat-'em alive fighter and the French papers were fanning him up as the coming world champion.

A Beautiful Job

The fight came off under the management of M. Anatasse, at an ancient stadium in the Rue Pelleport. M. Anatasse, a dapper little man, was a magnificent showman and had done a beautiful job in building up Mithieu as a killer. The stadium was a mediaeval arena, surrounded by boxes, in which family parties drank aperitifs, and sang little chansons.

"Adjoining was the 'Academie du Boxe,' with lace curtains and flowers in window boxes, and a dancing salon, where fighters in evening dress danced between fights. The academy was maintained as a fight stable by the Ministry of Education, just then inducing nation virility. At the ringside sat relatives of the fighters, grandmothers some of them, knitting and tatting, and crying "bis Armand!" when one lad smacked another.

Dynamite Explodes

"Larry Gaines was absolutely bug-eyed. He had never seen a fight arena like this one. When he shuffled to his corner, took off a tattered robe and disclosed his soiled trunks, he looked a little dazed. Then came the beautiful Mithieu, romping into the ring, tossing aside his gold robe, rippling his splendid muscles like a spirited pink stallion, to the frantic cheers of the crowd. The fight started. Mithieu did a bit of Delsarte posturing. Gaines went into a defensive crouch, waiting the lightning bolt. Then Mithieu let loose a hay-maker which missed Gainer by about two feet, at the same time throwing himself wide open as he extended his left in a graceful gesture.

"Gaines' face lit up like Forty-second and Broadway, after a black-out. One saw a couple of octaves of gleaming white teeth. It had become quite clear that the charming M. Mithieu was not a fighter. One couldn't quite see what happened. There was an explosion of black dynamite and M. Mithieu was stiff as a plank. Gaines had noted that each fighter, when he flattened another, had picked him up and kissed him on both cheeks. He wanted to behave nicely. So he bent over the somnolent Mithieu and planted on each cheek a kiss which could have been heard far through the surrounding faubourgs. 'Did I do all right Mister Hemingway!' he asked. 'Perfect' said Hemingway."

HEADS SWEDISH ARMY

Gen. Per Sylvan

Chief of staff of Sweden's army is General Per Sylvan. Sweden, the war brought home to her by fall of Red bombs on the Swedish town of Pajala, is divided on the question of open military assistance to neighboring Finland. Many observers say if Finland falls Sweden will be Russia's next victim.

AFTER THEM, MEN, THEY'RE DESPERATE CHARACTERS

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Feb. 22.—From the point of view of American policy about Finland, there is light in present events in Finland. Here in America, many persons think our government ought to loan (or give) Finland money for arms. Others think our government should give for purposes other than arms, for food and the like.

Mark Sullivan

Regardless of what our government does, many persons think our people, by popular subscription, should give Finland money for arms. Other persons think that, by popular subscription, we should give for purposes other than arms.

The needs of Finland are three. She needs men, soldiers; she needs arms, including airplanes; her third need is food, clothing, hospital supplies and the like.

Of the three forms of help, the most indispensable is soldiers; without soldiers the other two hardly avail. How many soldiers is a matter of judgement. Most estimates are surprisingly small. One person of good jurgment says 350,000 would be enough. Another judgment is as low as 75,000. The more soldiers, the better. But in the judgment of qualified persons, the terrain and the other conditions are such that a surprisingly small number of soldiers, added to the gallant Finns, could hold off the Russian indefinitely.

Is Natural Source

For providing soldiers, the natural source is Sweden. Sweden has the soldiers, and they are good; she has a fine army, adapted to the climate. And it is upon Sweden that the primary obligation rests. Sweden is the country that will face Russia next, if Finland falls. Sweden is a kind of back-country to Finland. When and if the Russians cross the narrow strip that is Finland, they are upon Sweden's border.

This puts upon Sweden the primary obligation for furnishing soldiers. The other forms of help Finland needs—arms, and food and the like—can readily come from elsewhere.

But if Sweden does not give soldiers, other people throughout the world will be chilled about giving the other forms of help. The mere fact of failure by Sweden to act, would have an unfortunate psychological effect. It is as if all the states of the United States were separate countries; and as if Maine were invaded by a foreign foe; and as if Maine's neighbor, New Hampshire, did not send soldiers to help. In such a condition, help would be less likely to come from Texas.

King Fearful

The Swedish king announced this week that Sweden would not send organized military aid to Finland. It is certain the king did not like to take this position; and it is probable he took it only through fear that by such a step Sweden might later be involved in the war between Germany and the Allies. We can feel sure that he did what he thought was best, and we can sympathize with him. One can read between the lines of King Gustaf's statement that he takes this stand only because his official position calls upon him to do it. Almost, one infers that if the Swedish people chose to do otherwise, the king would admit that that is their privilege. The king, in his statement, spoke of "other ways" of help, "not inconsiderable assistance", that are already going from Sweden to Finland. It may be the other forms of help include soldiers—they may be going as individuals, or small units not in uniform. As we have learned to recognize "undeclared war," so may there be such a thing as "undeclared help."

May Be Sufficient

Possibly the volunteers going into Finland from various countries may be sufficient in number and may be organized into effective military strength in sufficient time to save Finland. Next to Sweden, the obligation to send soldiers to Finland rests upon Norway; and upon the Allies, France and England. It may be that soldiers are going from the Allies. Finland may yet have, from one source or another, enough soldiers.

That Finland should first get man power from other sources, is the first requisite to her ever getting arms from America. America is guided much by a lesson learned from the Great war. When it was first suggested we should enter, we were told, or led to believe, that all the Allies would need from us would be arms, ships, money and the like. We took it for granted there would be no demand on us for man power, except possibly a small army, a division or two as a symbol. But once we had declared war, we were told we must send enormous man power. That experience remains in America's memory. Every European statesman making any calculation about America should begin with the premise that America will never again send an army to Europe—imaginably other forms of aid, but never man power.

May Press Government

If Finland gets enough soldiers from other sources, it may be that American opinion would press our government to give arms, or money for arms. So far we have specifically excluded arms from the help we give. We have loaned Finland ten million dollars for purchases of goods other than arms, and we are about to authorize 20 million more for the same purpose with the same limitation.

If Finland is ever to get arms, or money for arms, from America, in material quantity, it must be by government action. Arms means immense amounts of money, tens of millions. Besides, it is only by action of government, our own or others, that arms in large quantities, certainly airplanes, can be made available. The plane manufacturing facilities of the United States must be already working at full capacity on orders from our own government and from France and England. If the Finns are to get planes from America in the near future, they must be planes released to them by the other governments.

A Vacation Every Day

From the Raleigh, W. Va., Register

Need a vacation? Certainly! And not next month or next summer—but now! What's more, you don't need a vacation that the boss gives you, but one that you take yourself. Everyone ought to have a vacation every day, and with planning and wit he can put into short intervals all the essentials of a protracted holiday.

Too many of us dwell in the grip of routine and preoccupation, but with a bit of scheming we can change the scene, the pace, and the habit of our daily lives without breaking appointments, being late, or loafing. Mere cessation of work and aimless relaxation aren't enough because vacations must include new faces, getting new points of view, doing different and exciting things—rekindling that something which puts sparkle back in eyes, spring back into sagging arches.

The lunch hour provides vacation opportunities or a walk, glimpses of new surroundings, an exchange of ideas with truck drivers and college students in "beaneries" and cafeterias; or a few minutes to catch the drama of the street with a camera.

Even the visits of persons who interrupt your busiest working hours can be vacations if an interesting exchange of views replaces a bored resistance to the other fellow's ideas. A few minutes at a hobby for many folks will sweep aside the accumulated debris of other people's demands which clutter up their minds in the tyranny of fixed schedules.

Morning Motto

Indifference never wrote great works, nor thought out striking inventions, nor reared the solemn architecture that awes the soul, nor breathed sublime music, nor painted glorious pictures, nor undertook heroic philanthropies—All these grandeurs are born of enthusiasm and are done heartily.—ANON.

Third Term Seen Although Disliked

Hugh Johnson

Washington, Feb. 22—I believe that Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated and elected for a third term. I have said this more than once here and elsewhere. Every time I say it publicly, I get a lot of indignant fan letters from people who agree with me — at least in being very much opposed to a third term for any man. The complaint is that this is "defeatism" — almost treason in the sense of adhereing to the enemy, giving him aid and comfort. I can't answer each of these, kick separately, so this is an attempt at a blanket reply.

In the first place, to be either a "defeatist" or a "traitor", you have to owe somebody an allegiance for which you are fighting. I shall fight as hard as I can against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt, but I believe that a column that tries—sometimes not very successfully—to be a fair comment on events and actions in general—hasn't any business tying up with any favorite to the exclusion of any contrary comment, at least until the issues are drawn and there is no other thing to say except "yea" or "nay."

In this view it is neither "defeatism" nor "treason" to say that I believe Mr. Roosevelt will be our next president—if that is my opinion—which it is.

Cursed in Dixie

As to his nomination—does a majority of the Democratic party desire it? Decidedly not. In Dixie there are curses not loud but deep. Southern Democracy has been the step-child of the New Deal. It threatens white political supremacy. It has taken the South's ⅔ rule away from the nomination. Its farm policy is ruining the foreign market for cotton. The South has received the lowest per capita handout for "recovery and relief". But the politicians of the South have been dragooned by New Deal pap, purge and power. They are now only a minority without a veto in the convention. They must get on any bandwagon that really starts to roll, or read themselves into the outer dark. In the election, the South will vote Democratic as usual because, there it is almost like marrying a negro not to do so.

Want the Handouts

The tradition against a third term and the trend away from the president among Democratic politicians—in their hearts—is almost as strong in the North. What do politicos like Frank Hague in New Jersey and Chicago's Boss Nash care about Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal? They care principally for its handouts — but that is enough. Less powerful politicians are somewhat in the same category. You could count the really convinced and zealous New Dealers in the Senate on the fingers of one hand. If you were Siamese twins you could count all there are in both houses of Congress on your fingers and toes. But here again the vast New Deal political and patronage machine controls political attitudes if not political thinking.

Can't Oppose Him

These are the gents who decide on the delegates and pick men of their own type. Whether or not he raises a finger or even permits his name to be used, most of these men will not vote against Mr. Roosevelt. Some boy orator will arise at sometime in the convention with a cross of gold and crown of thorns speech and it will be all over except the shouting—which will last for two hours.

In the election, there will be on the side of the president (1) the normal Democratic minority; (2) a majority of the Jewish people; (3) the farmers as long as they are sure of "benefit" checks; (4) the unemployed on relief; (5) most of the negro race; (6) most of organized labor; (7,8,9 and 10) Republican ineptitude, disunion and lack of either a program or a sufficiently popular candidate—allee samee 1936. Figure out a way to beat that if you can. I can't.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

On the Record

By Louis J. Taber, Master of the National Grange

An impartial survey of the whole situation must convince any intelligent and unprejudiced person that under present conditions our government is pursuing diametrically opposite and contradictory policies at one and the same time. Under the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Wage-Hour Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, the Social Security Act, and similar legislation, we have adopted a policy that calls for economic nationalism. * * * Under the Reciprocal Tariff policy we are pursuing what is sometimes called a "good neighbor policy," or a policy of international altruism. It must be manifest that we cannot successfully pursue both of these policies at one and the same time.

Frank Merriwell Creator Wants To Write for Movies

Burl L. Standish, Broke, Hopes To Stage Quick Comeback

By JOHN FERRIS

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)—Peerless Frank Merriwell, who dashed triumphantly through millions of words and millions of copies of paper-bound books, would have solved this problem before your anxious eyes had reached page 147:—

Courageous, resourceful Frank . . . smiling Frank with the curly chestnut hair and fair brow, the lithe, athletic figure, the steely muscles . . . or his courageous, resourceful brother, Dick, with brow so fair and curly chestnut hair. . . .

No, sir! They wouldn't have had to go to municipal court to answer a dispossess notice because of an unpaid $430 assessment against an $8,500 apartment in a co-operative building.

But that's just what their creator, Burt L. Standish, whose real name is George W. Patten, has to do.

No sir. Frank would have said: "Unhand that author. In youth he sheltered me, and I'll protect him now."

But Frank—and Dick, too—is gone with the pulp, though Patten was hopeful today that Hollywood would take note of the ageless glamor of the storied muscles and let him show what a real hero can do on the screen.

Patten is 74, a tall white-haired, quiet man who in his heyday turned out a 20,000-word book every week over a period of eighteen years, besides other works. Four years ago he was ill. He was unable to work for two years. His wife and sister-in-law were ill. There were bills. Both women later died. More bills.

Now Patten doesn't want pity, but only a moratorium. He won't be homeless, for he has a ten-room house in Camden, Me., but he would like to save his $8,500 apartment investment.

Frank Merriwell Creator Wants To Write for Movies

Burl L. Standish, Broke, Hopes To Stage Quick Comeback

By JOHN FERRIS

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)—Peerless Frank Merriwell, who dashed triumphantly through millions of words and millions of copies of paper-bound books, would have solved this problem before your anxious eyes had reached page 147:—

Courageous, resourceful Frank . . . smiling Frank with the curly chestnut hair and fair brow, the lithe, athletic figure, the steely muscles . . . or his courageous, resourceful brother, Dick, with brow so fair and curly chestnut hair. . . .

No, sir! They wouldn't have had to go to municipal court to answer a dispossess notice because of an unpaid $430 assessment against an $8,500 apartment in a co-operative building.

But that's just what their creator, Burt L. Standish, whose real name is George W. Patten, has to do.

No sir. Frank would have said: "Unhand that author. In youth he sheltered me, and I'll protect him now."

But Frank—and Dick, too—is gone with the pulp, though Patten was hopeful today that Hollywood would take note of the ageless glamor of the storied muscles and let him show what a real hero can do on the screen.

Patten is 74, a tall white-haired, quiet man who in his heyday turned out a 20,000-word book every week over a period of eighteen years, besides other works. Four years ago he was ill. He was unable to work for two years. His wife and sister-in-law were ill. There were bills. Both women later died. More bills.

Now Patten doesn't want pity, but only a moratorium. He won't be homeless, for he has a ten-room house in Camden, Me., but he would like to save his $8,500 apartment investment.

THAT TAILORED SUIT

...creates a path of fashion

Every fashion magazine proclaims and acclaims it as 1940's smartest tailleur . . . not strictly tailored but definitely soft . . . yet lovingly trim. Rounds of applause, too, for the new, long, uninterrupted line of the silhouette . . . happily it plays no favorites . . . flattering to small figures as well as tall ones; thin, or not so thin. Appropriate for every hour of your day . . . for undercoat wear now . . . later to parade alone. Find your suit at Rosenbaum's, where the collection is as large and varied as you would naturally expect.

(at right) Longer jacket tailleur, particularly new and becoming suit treatment in twill . . the long torso effect will equalize short as well as long proportions.

$29.98

Companion to the ribbon-bound twill suit, we suggest a blouse of frothy, sheer batiste with imported Val lace and elaborate jabot of delicate ruching.

Fashion Center Second Floor

With the longer jacket suit, wear the very new soft, blouse of Rose Petal crepe . . . flap pocket, Johnny collar, full sleeve, pearl buttons.

(above) $2.98

$29.98

(at left) With the bloused jacket, you'd like a blouse with deep, dainty yoke of insertion and entre-deux work; collar and hipband to match.

GLAMOUR GOES OUT when FAT COMES ON

• Fashion dictates the slim, slender figure. Excess fat dispels glamour, fashion designers say. Since women admire the glamorous type, why build fat, when it's so easy to reduce? Yes, it's as simple as this:

Forget fattening foods at mealtime! In their place, substitute two slices of HOLLYWOOD BREAD at every meal—six slices a day. Do this regularly—day after day—and don't be surprised when you step on the scales and notice the difference in your weight!

HOLLYWOOD BREAD is filling, but not fattening! It's baked without lard, grease or animal fats of any kind. It supplies the health-giving energy in eight delicious garden and sea vegetable flours—none of which are fattening!

You'll enjoy reducing this sensible way. HOLLYWOOD BREAD is a tasty, appetizing loaf with a delicious flavor especially when toasted. It satisfies your craving for rich sweet foods that add weight. You reduce naturally and safely —the HOLLYWOOD BREAD way!

Start now to lose extra pounds —to get that youthful slenderness you admire in others!

hysician Visits ldest Hospital United States

arity Hospital in New Orleans Founded in May, 1737

recently described my visit to oldest hospital on the North erican continent—the Hospital Jesus in Mexico City. On my way Mexico I paused in New Orleans visited the oldest hospital in United States—the Charity Hos-al. (The second and third oldest spitals in North America are in nada.)

There is some partisan dispute as which is the oldest hospital in United States, some claiming honor for the Pennsylvania spital in Philadelphia. The Phil-elphians say that the Charity was t an almshouse and only later ospital, but the record shows that early as May 20, 1737, there were patients under treatment at Charity.

In 1736 a sailor, Jean Louis, died New Orleans, leaving all his ate to found a haven for the 's poor. They were to be given itable work "so there would be mendicants." In 1779 the old spital was destroyed by a hurri-ne, but in 1782 the gift of over 0,000 by the richest citizen of the w World provided a new build-g, with much of the debris of the being used. The calamity of fire stroyed it in 1809, but it was again built near Rampart Street. Within e past few years it has moved to ulane Avenue, in fine new quarters.

Famous Doctor

The most famous of its doctors as David C. Kerwas. He was at-ched to the invading British army 1814, but allowed himself to be ptured by Andrew Jackson's oops at the Battle of New Or-ans because he felt his future as in the United States.

The old records show some things range to modern eyes. The hos-tal was the largest dispensatory r alcoholic drinks in the city in 32, and made a large part of its come by operating as a saloon. e expenditures at this time in-uded $298 for candles of sperm ale fat, $202 for leeches to bleed atients with, and $111 for surgical nstruments. This scanty allowance accounted for by the fact that ch surgeon provided his own in-truments and was very proud of em and the case that held them.

Unhealthiest City

New Orleans, by reason of its ographic position and also because its port, which harbored world-ide shipping, was then the un-healthiest city in the country. Not ly malaria bred in its mosquito-ested swamps, but yellow fever as brought in ships coming from maica and the West Indies. The ited States seaports from 1750 1850 were the sites of epidemic ter epidemic of yellow fever. Mod-n sanitation has eliminated all at, and a medical student today obably never sees a single case. know I never have seen a case.

The drainage of New Orleans was ways a great problem, and gave e to another set of plagues—

Constitutionality of State Income Tax Is Questioned

Baltimore, Feb. 22. (AP)—Constitutionality of Maryland's state income tax is questioned in an injunction suit which the state comptroller has been given ten days to answer.

The suit was filed by attorney George V. Parkhurst on behalf of Robert C. Hazard, trustee under a deed of trust created by Charles Hull Ewing.

Particularly cited by the plaintiff was the six per cent tax on unearned income. The suit contended this section of the tax law enacted by the 1939 legislature was discriminatory, oppressive and unconstitutional.

The suit, filed in Circuit court, asked an injunction to restrain State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes from collecting the tax on the funds realized from the Ewing trust.

Judge Eugene O'Dune signed an order directing Tawes to show cause in ten days why an injunction should not be issued restraining collection of any tax under the present law.

Under the new law, earned individual incomes are taxable at the rate of two and one half per cent. Returns must be filed by March 15.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (AP)—The state has planned to continue collecting the state income tax despite the filing of a suit in Baltimore attacking its constitutionality.

"We're going ahead with collections just as if the suit wasn't filed," said Joseph O'C. McCusker, deputy state comptroller. "The state law department and our office feel that the law is all right."

Comptroller J. Millard Tawes said earlier no papers had been served on him in the case.

If the tax is declared invalid, a special session of the legislature probably will have to be called to enact new revenue measures.

hysician Visits ldest Hospital United States

arity Hospital in New Orleans Founded in May, 1737

recently described my visit to oldest hospital on the North erican continent—the Hospital Jesus in Mexico City. On my way Mexico I paused in New Orleans visited the oldest hospital in United States—the Charity Hos-al. (The second and third oldest pitals in North America are in nada.)

here is some partisan dispute as which is the oldest hospital in United States, some claiming honor for the Pennsylvania pital in Philadelphia. The Phil-lphians say that the Charity was t an almshouse and only later ospital, but the record shows that early as May 20, 1737, there were patients under treatment at Charity.

n 1736 a sailor, Jean Louis, died New Orleans, leaving all his tate to found a haven for the 's poor. They were to be given table work "so there would be mendicants." In 1779 the old pital was destroyed by a hurri-e, but in 1782 the gift of over 0,000 by the richest citizen of the w World provided a new build-g with much of the debris of the being used. The calamity of fire troyed it in 1809, but it was again uilt near Rampart Street. Within past few years it has moved to lane Avenue, in fine new quarters.

Famous Doctor

The most famous of its doctors s David C. Kerwas. He was at-hed to the invading British army 1814, but allowed himself to be ptured by Andrew Jackson's oops at the Battle of New Or-ans because he felt his future s in the United States.

The old records show some things range to modern eyes. The hos-tal was the largest dispensatory r alcoholic drinks in the city in 32, and made a large part of its come by operating as a saloon. e expenditures at this time in-uded $298 for candles of sperm hale fat, $202 for leeches to bleed tients with, and $111 for surgical truments. This scanty allowance accounted for by the fact that h surgeon provided his own in-truments and was very proud of m and the case that held them.

Unhealthiest City

New Orleans, by reason of its ographic position and also because its port, which harbored world-de shipping, was then the un-althiest city in the country. Not y malaria bred in its mosquito-ested swamps, but yellow fever s brought in ships coming from maica and the West Indies. The ited States seaports from 1750 1850 were the sites of epidemic ter epidemic of yellow fever. Mod-n sanitation has eliminated all at, and a medical student today obably never sees a single case. know I never have seen a case.

The drainage of New Orleans was ways a great problem, and gave e to another set of plagues—

Training Parents From the Cradle Is Discussed

Good Child Rearing Is Fine Education for Family Life

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Good child rearing is good education for marriage and family life.

A young man and woman are about to be married. What in their background will best predict their marital happiness? Terman and his collaborators answer in their Psychological Factors in Marital Happiness, published in 1938. Among the items they rank foremost are: superior happiness of parents, childhood happiness, lack of conflict with parents, home discipline that was firm but not harsh, strong attachment to both parents, and parental frankness about sex matters.

A very similar investigation by Burgess and Cottrell, Predicting Success or Failure of Marriage, appearing in 1939, arrived at practically the same conclusions. Both of the groups of investigators on marriage found as foremost in favoring marital happiness the very items which, in this column, we have been considering foremost in good parenthood and child guidance.

Important Relationships

Several years ago, as I was discussing some of the things we parents ought to keep in mind, before one of my university classes, a mother said: "You mean, then, that our job as parents is to bring up our children, not only to be good men and women, but also to be good husbands and wives, and good fathers and mothers?"

"Exactly what I mean," was my reply.

The most important relationships in the family for wholesome child rearing are father-mother relationships—the very ones these investigators ranked foremost for furthering marital happiness of the child later. We must have these relationships before we can get wholesome parent-child relationships.

To those of us interested in wholesome marriage and family life, it is heartening to see so many colleges and universities offering courses on marriage and family life.

Affects Happiness

Nevertheless, the major factors affecting marital happiness have been developing and operating since birth, even before. Obviously, the big problem of education for marriage is the problem of education for life, of education from the cradle onward. The most strategic period, so far as later marriage is concerned, is childhood in the family. Therefore, wise parenthood means wise education of the children at home for marriage and parenthood.

In this column, therefore, we discuss from day to day those problems which have to do with the marital happiness and wider family happiness of succeeding generations, as well as with parents of this generation.

Keeping this in mind ought to help us parents try harder to be intelligent parents; try harder, too, to get along companionably and happily as husband and wife.

These two investigations in marriage reveal, furthermore, that sex as such is a relatively minor item in marital happiness, and indicate that far too much emphasis has been placed on sex in recent marriage literature. Self-discipline and mutual regard by each of the married couples for the personality of the other are so much more potent. The foundation for such an attitude we parents desire to build in our children as they grow up with us.

Frank Lowe Named To Legion Post

Bangor, Me., Feb. 22 (AP)—American Legion National Commander Raymond J. Kelly has named Col. Frank E. Lowe, of Portland, Past Maine State Commander of the Legion, as head of the organization's new National committee to coordinate the work of nationwide groups opposing "isms."

Kelly said six other persons, as yet unnamed, would be appointed to the committee which will attempt to coordinate the efforts of some 80 groups throughout the nation "in opposition to Fascism, Communism and intolerance."

Lowe, executive director of the Associated Industries of Maine, formerly was National President of the Reserve Officers' Association of America and at one time was national vice president of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Washington Was Father of U. S. Mule Industry

Annapolis (AP)—George Washington's birthday should be especially significant in the south where the mule is an integral cog in cotton economy. Washington founded the American mule-breeding industry.

Transcripts of old documents in the Maryland Hall of Records show that the mule in America dates from 1785, when the King of Spain gave President Washington two jennets and a jack.

The next year the Marquis de Lafayette sent him another jack and a pair of jennets.

From this beginning, supplemented by later importations of jack stock from Europe, the mule population has increased to 4,603,000 on American farms.

Spain once had a virtual monopoly on mule production, the exportation of jacks being forbidden.

Prosecutor, Ex-Police Chief Indicted in Baseball Pool Case

Detroit, Feb. 22. (AP)—The grand jury investigating gambling and alleged police graft has indicted Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea and several other men, including former Police Supt. Fred W. Frahm, on charges of conspiring to operate a national baseball pool.

The indictments, returned by Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson who has been sitting as a one-man grand jury, climaxed several months of investigation into allegations of conniving between gamblers and police.

Rumors had circulated for several weeks that persons "in high places" would be named in indictments, and tonight's action was followed by announcement from special prosecutor Chester P. O'Hara that "this is only the starting gun."

"There is going to be a lot more coming," he said.

The inquiry, which has resulted in the reported closing up of numerous gambling joints and a wholesale departure of "bookies" from town, began last summer after a young woman, before committing suicide, charged she knew of police-gambler associations.

Aged Postmaster Retires in Upshur

Buckhannon, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Years of seeing that the mails went through are at an end for H. B. Darnell, 81, and Emil Knutti.

Darnell had been in charge of the little French Creek post office for forty-two years; Knutti supervised the office at Alpena, Randolph county. Each retired under provision of the act specifying that any postmaster in the service more than fifteen years who was 75 years or older should be retired with a pension.

Knutti began his service in 1897 during the administration of President William McKinley. Born in Switzerland, he spent his youth in that country but came to the United States during the latter part of the nineteenth century.

Darnell was born in 1858 in what was then Lewis county, Virginia. Before receiving the postmastership, he operated a little store here. He plans to return to his farm on French Creek and enjoy his pension.

Training Parents From the Cradle Is Discussed

Good Child Rearing Is Fine Education for Family Life

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Good child rearing is good education for marriage and family life.

A young man and woman are about to be married. What in their background will best predict their marital happiness? Terman and his collaborators answer in their Psychological Factors in Marital Happiness, published in 1938. Among the items they rank foremost are: superior happiness of parents, childhood happiness, lack of conflict with parents, home discipline that was firm but not harsh, strong attachment to both parents, and parental frankness about sex matters.

A very similar investigation by Burgess and Cottrell, Predicting Success or Failure of Marriage, appearing in 1939, arrived at practically the same conclusions. Both of the groups of investigators on marriage found as foremost in favoring marital happiness the very items which, in this column, we have been considering foremost in good parenthood and child guidance.

Important Relationships

Several years ago, as I was discussing some of the things we parents ought to keep in mind, before one of my university classes, a mother said: "You mean, then, that our job as parents is to bring up our children, not only to be good men and women, but also to be good husbands and wives, and good fathers and mothers?"

"Exactly what I mean," was my reply.

The most important relationships in the family for wholesome child rearing are father-mother relationships—the very ones these investigators ranked foremost for furthering marital happiness of the child later. We must have these relationships before we can get wholesome parent-child relationships.

To those of us interested in wholesome marriage and family life, it is heartening to see so many colleges and universities offering courses on marriage and family life.

Affects Happiness

Nevertheless, the major factors affecting marital happiness have been developing and operating since birth, even before. Obviously, the big problem of education for marriage is the problem of education for life, of education from the cradle onward. The most strategic period, so far as later marriage is concerned, is childhood in the family. Therefore, wise parenthood means wise education of the children at home for marriage and parenthood.

In this column, therefore, we discuss from day to day those problems which have to do with the marital happiness and wider family happiness of succeeding generations, as well as with parents of this generation.

Keeping this in mind ought to help us parents try harder to be intelligent parents; try harder, too, to get along companionably and happily as husband and wife.

These two investigations in marriage reveal, furthermore, that sex as such is a relatively minor item in marital happiness, and indicate that far too much emphasis has been placed on sex in recent marriage literature. Self-discipline and mutual regard by each of the married couples for the personality of the other are so much more potent. The foundation for such an attitude we parents desire to build in our children as they grow up with us.

Frank Lowe Named To Legion Post

Bangor, Me., Feb. 22 (AP)—American Legion National Commander Raymond J. Kelly has named Col. Frank E. Lowe, of Portland, Past Maine State Commander of the Legion, as head of the organization's new National committee to coordinate the work of nationwide groups opposing "isms."

Kelly said six other persons, as yet unnamed, would be appointed to the committee which will attempt to coordinate the efforts of some 80 groups throughout the nation "in opposition to Fascism, Communism and intolerance."

Lowe, executive director of the Associated Industries of Maine, formerly was National President of the Reserve Officers' Association of America and at one time was national vice president of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Washington Was Father of U. S. Mule Industry

Annapolis (AP)—George Washington's birthday should be especially significant in the south where the mule is an integral cog in cotton economy. Washington founded the American mule-breeding industry.

Transcripts of old documents in the Maryland Hall of Records show that the mule in America dates from 1785, when the King of Spain gave President Washington two jennets and a jack.

The next year the Marquis de Lafayette sent him another jack and a pair of jennets.

From this beginning, supplemented by later importations of jack stock from Europe, the mule population has increased to 4,603,000 on American farms.

Spain once had a virtual monopoly on mule production, the exportation of jacks being forbidden.

Prosecutor, Ex-Police Chief Indicted in Baseball Pool Case

Detroit, Feb. 22. (AP)—The grand jury investigating gambling and alleged police graft has indicted Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea and several other men, including former Police Supt. Fred W. Frahm, on charges of conspiring to operate a national baseball pool.

The indictments, returned by Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson who has been sitting as a one-man grand jury, climaxed several months of investigation into allegations of conniving between gamblers and police.

Rumors had circulated for several weeks that persons "in high places" would be named in indictments, and tonight's action was followed by announcement from special prosecutor Chester P. O'Hara that "this is only the starting gun."

"There is going to be a lot more coming," he said.

The inquiry, which has resulted in the reported closing up of numerous gambling joints and a wholesale departure of "bookies" from town, began last summer after a young woman, before committing suicide, charged she knew of police-gambler associations.

Aged Postmaster Retires in Upshur

Buckhannon, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Years of seeing that the mails went through are at an end for H. B. Darnell, 81, and Emil Knutti.

Darnell had been in charge of the little French Creek post office for forty-two years; Knutti supervised the office at Alpena, Randolph county. Each retired under provision of the act specifying that any postmaster in the service more than fifteen years who was 75 years or older should be retired with a pension.

Knutti began his service in 1897 during the administration of President William McKinley. Born in Switzerland, he spent his youth in that country but came to the United States during the latter part of the nineteenth century.

Darnell was born in 1858 in what was then Lewis county, Virginia. Before receiving the postmastership, he operated a little store here. He plans to return to his farm on French Creek and enjoy his pension.

HELPING HAND

Genius Is Sometimes Backward and Only a Woman Out of the Past Can Bring It to Life.

By JAMES O'HARA

"It looks just like another one of those evenings to me," Barstow predicted, crumbling a piece of breadstick between his fingers. He swept the dimly lighted confines of Carlo's restaurant with impatient eyes. "I suppose I got another bum steer!"

"I don't see what you're kicking about," I said. "It seems to me that you've got your booking agent business all tied up in a bag and begging for mercy. An evening or two when nothing happens shouldn't matter a great deal!"

Barstow was faintly belligerent. "It's easy for writing birds like you to talk," he shot back without any great originality. "All you have to do is hang around and have a good time and your work walks right up to you. I have a lot of grief, let me tell you!"

"Sure," I agreed sarcastically. "Here you get a call from Maria Lanier advising you that a real find is going to be here tonight for you to pick up, just the kind of tenor you've been tearing your hair out trying to find for that summer concert tour of yours. And what do you do? You beef!"

"I'll wait until I hear this singer before I wear my throat out cheering," Barstow said. "The trouble with you is that you only remember the rare ones who come here to entertain gratis and really have something on the ball. Me, I think of the nights on end that I have to listen to a lot of has-beens and duds!"

I thought it over while Carlo himself came over to take our order, smiling his invariable little Latin smile and looking as though he was satisfied with everything in the world. He coughed discreetly when he had written down our selections and handed the order to a waiter.

"This Mr. Hodes is waiting, Mr. Barstow," he suggested expectantly. "The one Miss Lanier wanted me to tell you about."

Barstow shrugged. "All right, bring him on, Carlo," he said. "I'd give my right arm to be able to charm Lanier away from her opera contract with the city group, and I have to play along with her, just in case. This is only about the hundredth poor butterfly she's thrown on my tender mercies so far."

Carlo bustled his round person away into the back of the restaurant and presently reappeared with a lanky, unkempt individual in tow I had seen that look many times before—the kind of look a man gets when the thing he wants and needs most in life slips out of his grasp and he doesn't care any more.

I Couldn't Speak

The pianist who sporadically pounded out melodies for the diners came in and took the music the shabby man carried.

"You'll see what I mean in a minute or two," my friend predicted morosely. "He's a ham if there ever was one. I can tell without even listening!"

Barstow's words scarcely registered, because just then I happened to glance over in the corner where the tables were not very well lighted, and the girl I saw sitting there brought my faculties of observation to a swift, jolting focus. Maybe it was the way she just sat there, leaning a little forward and with her eyes on nothing but this forgotten derelict who had started singing a sentimental ballad to the hit-and-miss accompaniment of the piano.

Even at that distance I could see pity and helplessness in her look. The tenor rambled through the song, and even despite himself there were a few notes which seemed, from force of habit, to be endowed with a quality of genuineness. But on the whole, it was terrible.

And then he turned a bit and his bored eyes rested momentarily on the vital, vivid young woman I had caught looking at him. I nudged Barstow and indicated the girl.

"Maria Lanier," he said, surprised a little in spite of himself. The singer's voice halted in mid-phrase, went on again. The girl smiled encouragingly, and it seemed to me that the rest of the song went along much better.

Before he had finished, the girl had risen and covered the distance between her table and the piano in a swift, graceful rush. Impatiently she motioned the pianist aside and seated herself at the instrument. The two, the man and the woman, exchanged glances. The woman played a few bars of cue notes and started, in her clear, warm voice, the opening bars of the magnificent Liebestod from Tristan and Isolde.

I couldn't speak, and neither could Barstow. Like one coming out of a long trance the man tentatively joined in, his voice gradually taking on more sureness, more roundness and quality. The hauntingly beautiful music of the duet hung between the pair like invisible chains welding them into a single emotion.

Nobody clapped when the music ended. It would have been an anticlimax. Carlo stood there, still smiling, and watching Barstow's face. The woman stood up suddenly, riffled through the music and selected a song for the regular pianist. The man began again, alone, and the lovely Schuman Dichterliebe flowed beautifully from his throat. I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't actually seen the transformation myself.

Carlo brought the singer to our table himself and when I looked for the woman she had disappeared. Barstow showed little of his incredulity, but I knew he was impressed.

"Does he get a chance with you?" Carlo wanted to know. The man looked at Barstow, but I knew he was not seeing him at all. Barstow grumbled a bit, as he always did but nodded.

"Miss Lanier says that I should give this to you, Hodges, in case you make good. She says you can use it again if you think you can measure up to it!". The man's eyes glistened as he looked at what was in his palm . . . a thin platinum wedding ring.

Coca Cola Enjoins Competing Concerns

Baltimore, Feb. 22. (AP)—An injunction preventing three Baltimore corporations from selling products similar to Coca Cola under a trade name containing the word "Coca" or "Cola" was granted here in an oral decision by Judge William C. Coleman in U. S. District Court.

The firms enjoined were the Dixie Cola Laboratories, the Marbert Products Corporation, and the Apollo Extract and Syrup Company. Judge Coleman ruled further that if the firm distributed their products in other than bottled form they must change the color.

The injunction was asked by the Coca Cola company of Atlanta, Ga.

Judge Coleman said the defendants had the right to use the words "Coca" and "Cola" if they did not use them in the name of their product. He said they could describe their product as a coca or cola extract.

Want Streets Marked

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Mayor George R. Seamonds is in favor of marking Huntington streets. When the matter of requesting the WPA to paint street names on curbs at intersections came before council, the mayor gave his unqualified approval.

"Lots of places I go, and I don't know what street I'm on," said the mayor.

after a cold then what

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a focal infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. ## Patriotic Society Criticizes Text Book

Philadelphia, Feb. 22. (AP) — City school officials skipped to a neutral corner as a text book author scoffed at a patriotic society officer's criticism of his social science book as "Communistic."

"What do they want—medicated history?" inquired Dr. Harold Rugg, professor of education at Columbia University when told in New York of the charges voiced by Mrs. Ellwood J. Turner, corresponding secretary of the Daughters of Colonial Wars.

Dr. Alexander J. Stoddard, superintendent of the Philadelphia schools, took no sides.

"Rugg is the author of several books on our list but they are not used exclusively," he explained. "The children are taught from several textbooks and are taught to use their own judgment. They understand the author's opinion may be colored and they use their own judgment."

He added he had not received any formal complaints against Rugg's books.

The book, which Dr. Rugg said he assumed was his "Introduction To Problems of American Culture" was described as containing "very, very unAmerican teachings," by Mrs. Turner. She urged Philadelphia schools to drop it.

"All the old histories taught, 'My Country, Right Or Wrong,'" Mrs. Turner told a meeting of her organization yesterday. "That's the point of view we want our children to adopt."

"A 'soothing syrup' viewpoint," cracked back the author.

Should Share Work

No well-mannered guest in ordinary health, will accept an invitation for a week-end or house party, where the hostess has no maid, without doing her share of the work. The hostess would like to enjoy the occasion, too, and not be worn out with the business of entertaining.

Beckley Now a City of 15,000

Beckley, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The next census will show Beckley a 15,000-person city, without a major industry within its limits, and living "on the hills."

The answer to this Raleigh county seat's doubling growth during every decade since 1900 is coal—10,000,000 tons of it now a year, and 300,000,000 ton of it since 1899.

The pre-1900 place where the Giles-Fayette and Kanawha and Logan turnpikes intersected has become the spending center for 28,000 miners whose pockets are filled annually by $18,000,000 in wages.

When will it end?

Coalition Group Seeks Solution Of Work Problem

Democrats and Republicans Hope To Put Jobless Back to Work

Washington, Feb. 22. (AP)—A little band of House Democrats and Republicans has called on their colleagues to join a non-partisan campaign for putting the jobless to work.

Calling a meeting for next Monday, the group said in a notice to House members:

"Let us forget petty differences and join together for earnest thought and study of an attack on unemployment on the broad plane of simple devotion to our nation, its institutions and its people."

The appeal said that if unemployment were conquered "we will place our democratic institutions in a position unassailable by any powers or subversive influences within or without the country."

No Program Planned

No program was planned for the meeting, but Rep. Vourhis (D-Calif), who instigated the movement, said his idea was to "look at this problem from all its sides."

"Much already has been accomplished in the direction of relieving unemployment," he added, "but to a certain extent we have mounted a horse and ridden off in all directions."

Voorhis added that some of the questions to be answered are: "How does cutting down WPA affect unemployment?" What is the relation between this and farm income?" "What has monopoly got to do with it?"

The notice to members said that while more goods were produced in 1939 than in 1929, one million fewer persons were required to produce them.

"Unemployment is the first and most fundamental problem before this Congress and before the nation today," this communication continued.

"With it come fear, doubt and insecurity which inevitably fill the hearts of people who have no work to do or who may soon become unployed.

"If we do all other things and fail to overcome this problem we shall in the largest sense have failed."

Ice Bound Steamer Wanted More Ice

Ravenswood, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—On a $150 order given to a grocery store here by the captain of the then ice-bound steamer Fairplay was an item for 200 pounds of ice.

The grocery clerk couldn't understand why a boat, which had been locked in the Ohio river ice for two weeks, would be buying it.

The captain explained—the bought ice was for the boat's refrigeration system and pure ice was specified.

Democrats and Republicans Hope To Put Jobless Back to Work

Washington, Feb. 22. (AP)—A little band of House Democrats and Republicans has called on their colleagues to join a non-partisan campaign for putting the jobless to work.

Calling a meeting for next Monday, the group said in a notice to House members:

"Let us forget petty differences and join together for earnest thought and study of an attack on unemployment on the broad plane of simple devotion to our nation, its institutions and its people."

The appeal said that if unemployment were conquered "we will place our democratic institutions in a position unassailable by any powers or subversive influences within or without the country."

No Program Planned

No program was planned for the meeting, but Rep. Vourhis (D-Calif), who instigated the movement, said his idea was to "look at this problem from all its sides."

English Gardens Are Described

The gardens of the average Englishman were discribed by Mrs. A. W. Keight yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Garden Club held at the home of Miss Elizabeth L. Lowndes, 27 Washington street.

Mrs. Keight described Lewisham Park, London, South East. The park, she said, coveres about eight acres and is surrounded by an iron fence with locked gates. The Park is private to the people living on all four sides. All the houses surrounding the Park have a beautiful view of lawns and flower beds, tennis courts and bowling green. The front gardens to the houses consist chiefly of a lawn and gravel paths leading to the front door, with rose bushes planted in front of the bay windows of the house. The gardens are fenced in and trim private hedges border the enclosure. The side fences were about five feet high and near the end of the garden were sevral rose bushes to hind from view the kitchen garden. The same flowers that are found here and in Virginia are grown there, crouses, tulips, hyacinths delphenium, garaniums and phlox.

Flower Season Similar

The flower seasons there are similar to ours, Mrs. Keight said. They have tulips in May, roses in June, dahlias in September and chrysanthemums in October, though hydrangeas will not flourish outside. In Torquay and Bournemouth and the south of England palm trees and cactus grow.

The ladies were shown colored plates of various English gardens to illustrate the talk. Though the Englishman is proud to show his garden he wants it private. It is here we find clipped yew trees, fermal arrangements of flower beds and gravelled paths, stone steps leading to velvety lawns and shady rose arbors. Many of these lovely estates have been sold for taxes and are now open to the public for a small fee, to be used as pleasure gardens for outings and picnics.

Birds Are Compared

Mrs. Keight compared the birds found in the English garden to those we have here. Their robins are about the size of our sparrows, their thrush compares in size to our robin. The English birds do not have the bright plumage we find here, but they have the gift of beautiful song.

The peace and quaintness of the old world still lingers in the cottage garden of today, Mrs. Keight said. The farm may be modernized but the gay flowers and color to the whitewashed walls and thatched roof of the humble cot. Beehives are a familiar sight in the orchard, and the fruit trees are trained to grow flat against a trellis and only the choice fruits are allowed to mature.

One of the characteristic features of the cottage gardens, the speaker said, is the style of their boundaries. The commonest is the clipped privet hedge, also wooden fences. In Berkshire and Whitshire, there are wattled fences (entwined willow branches) and in the Cotswolds, drystone walls. In Devon the stone walls are painted or whitewashed. The entrance gates are usually of wood sheltered by an arch of entwined rambler roses.

Must Have Gardens

Every English householder considers it his right to have a garden, and if he is living in a densly populated area, he will cycle, in the cool of the evening, to his garden allotment some two or three miles away. Mrs. Keight called special attention to the fact that it keeps light until 9 o'clock in the evening in the summer and with daylight saving time in force the gardener has as extra hour.

After Mrs. Keight told of the comparative ease of making a garden in England, Mrs. Mattie Sturtz told how the homes of Cumberland may be surrounded by beautiful flowers and shrubs on a small budget. She reminded that the Garden Club was organized to encourage the people to beautify their homes.

Rose Cultivation Explained

Mrs. Sturtz told of her own experiences in growing roses, of how eleven years ago she began with poor, uncultivated soil and today she has 150 rose bushes. Mrs. Sturtz explained how to prune and cultivate and care for roses, stressing the fact that the blossom comes on the new growth. One amazing fact is that just before frost Mrs. Sturtz cuts all her rose buds, puts them in large containers so that they may have plenty of water, and keeps them in a room without heat, the buds will thus mature and the roses will be her most beautiful ones. These flowers she will have up until Thanksgiving time.

Selection of situation, preparation of beds, what kind of plants to buy, and the better places to get them were also described by Mrs. Sturtz. How to plant and care for the bush was also given.

Mrs. Sturtz also explained the difference between growing and dormant plants and discussed the care of each, as well as the respective merits of Spring and Fall planting.

"How I Grow Roses" was concluded with Mrs. Sturtz listing the enemies to roses and the method of control.

Tea was served.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

ROMANY was studying Janet James' scripts when Brent appeared at the apartment. Purposely, Cholly stayed downtown and went to a movie. She had no desire to be about when the announcer was forced to tell Romany of the gossip he had caused.

When Romany opened the door, she could see from the strained expression of Brent's face that something had gone amiss. Throwing himself into a chair, Brent ran his hand through his hair nervously.

"Darling!" He wasted no time. "I've wanted to tell you something for a long time. But I've been afraid if I did you wouldn't forgive me."

"Why Brent!" She laughed a little uncertainly. "You act as though you'd committed a murder or something. I'm sure it can't be as serious as you look."

But Nelson was in no mood to be cheered by her effort to make things easy for him.

"I meant well, darling, but I've made a terrible mistake. People are talking about us, I'm afraid, and I wanted to tell you before anyone else did."

She moved to the edge of her chair, her eyes widening.

"Talking about us! Oh, I suppose you mean because of Myra."

He lit a cigaret.

"No, it's much worse than that. I gave Joe Telling a check for two hundred dollars to pay for your pictures and to enter you in the television contest. He got drunk and talked in the restaurant at Interstate."

"You did what?" Romany sat back, aghast. "What are you talking about, Brent?"

He told her of the day he had gone to the press department and that Telling had refused to give her any publicity because she wasn't an Interstate artist; that Joe had asked him if he thought the place was the United States mint. And how, determined to help her, he had written the check.

"It seemed the right thing to do at the time." Brent dropped his head into his hands boyishly. "How was I to know he was going to talk and people would misunderstand?"

Much to his surprise, Romany went over and sat down beside him on the arm of his chair.

"Don't, Brent." She lifted his head with her hands, smiling as best she could. "Don't you think I know you meant to be a good friend? Haven't you proved that?"

"Oh, Romany!" He broke into a tired smile, greatly relieved. "I've been almost wild for fear you wouldn't forgive me."

"Of course"—her eyes were troubled—"it's a shock. But the day I lunched with Jane Martel, she prepared me pretty well for gossip. She says they talk about anyone when they begin to have a little luck...I've really been expecting it. And I knew they were talking because you broke your engagement to Myra."

Brent confessed he had heard the tales from Cholly, and that it had been her advice that he should tell Romany himself what was being said.

"I'm glad you did," Romany assured him. "It would have been a much greater shock to have heard it accidentally, or to have had some well-meaning person come and tell me about it."

"If there's anything under heaven I can do to undo the mess," said Brent.

"I think I'm the only one who can do that," Romany said thoughtfully.

"But how, dear?"

Romany decided:

"Well, the first thing I'm going to do is walk into the press department and tell Joe Telling I'm withdrawing from the television contest."

"But, darling," Brent protested, "the votes are pouring in for you. You're even ahead of Myra, I was told this afternoon."

"It doesn't matter. I can't stay in. And, of course, I must give Joe Telling a check for two hundred dollars to give to you. That ought to shut him up."

"But, Romany, I don't want you to return the money. I wanted to do it for you."

"Do you think I'd let you?" She sounded impatient. "Don't be silly! I've some money saved. I'll take a check in to Telling tomorrow."

"I'm sorry you won't forget it," Brent sighed. "Or let me give you back the check after Telling turns it over to me. Won't you, Romany?"

"Certainly not," she said curtly.

Brent's mood changed suddenly.

"Romany, dear," he said very low, "how much longer are you going to keep me from saying the things I've got to say to you?"

She turned her head away from him.

"What things Brent?"

It was coming. The moment she had dreaded. But she had to get it over with. Brent's arms went around her, pulling her from the arm of the chair into his lap. He buried his head in her shoulder boyishly.

"Oh, I love you so, Romany!" His voice caught. "Ever since that night at the station, when you looked at me and smiled, I've seen your face everywhere I turn."

"Don't Brent!" Romany felt stifled.

Brent sought her lips. She let him kiss her, remaining passive. He kissed her hungrily, then lifted his head, seeking her eyes.

"Tell me, Romany. Tell me, do you love me a little?"

"Oh, Brent!" She dropped her eyes unhappily. "I wish you hadn't asked me that. I'm so fond of you. But—"

He said very low:

"But! Oh, Romany, that's such a big little word. Is it just that you aren't sure? Don't you think you could love me? If you married me, sweetheart, I'd be so good to you. I'd make you love me. I'd live every hour for you."

He was so dear, so boyishly earnest. There was no doubt in Romany's mind that Brent loved her. He had proved his deep devotion in every way. Not only had he been responsible for almost everything that had happened to her in radio, but his very respect for her had proved it. It hadn't been easy, she knew, for him to stay so close to her day after day and not try to make light love to her. It was contrary to his makeup.

They were silent for a little while. Brent waited for his answer, heart pounding, his face tense with longing. Romany wondered if she should tell him she would marry him, even though she didn't have that wild feeling of elation a girl was supposed to have when a man asked her to be his wife. Perhaps she wasn't the romantic type.

Unable to bear the silence any longer, Brent, her warm cheek against his, asked breathlessly:

"You're not sure, are you, my darling? You want a little more time to make up your mind. Is that it?"

She didn't want to answer him just then. Evading would be the easiest way out. She certainly didn't want to say she would never marry him. So Romany whispered, feeling suddenly shy in his arms:

"Yes, Brent, that's it. I want—more time."

His face relaxed into a little smile.

"As long as the answer isn't no, I feel a little better. Take a little time, darling. But not too long. If I'm going to be a family man, I want to start making plans for a home for my wife. What kind of a house do you want, Romany? A penthouse or a little white house with green shutters?"

She silenced him with a hand over his mouth.

"Don't!" She hid her face against his sleeve. "Let's not talk about those things—yet."

"I'll give you four weeks." Brent laughed softly, feeling very sure that Romany would be Mrs. Nelson in the spring.

IT MAY BE A BLESSING

WHAT MAY seem like a plague, in the form of an absurdly high contract into which your partner pushed you, may turn out to be a blessing in disguise. If you stick by your guns, you may find a lot of lucky breaks in the cards and also in the way your opponents choose to play them. The ultimate result may be a lot better score than you figured to get out of the deal without performing impossible miracles.

Did anybody ever know of crazier bidding than North did on this deal? In the duplicate tournament where it arose, all experienced pairs got into 3-No Trumps and made four. This North was an auction player to whom contract bidding had been explained—the idea of getting as high as you can. And did he do it?

On examining the dummy, it looks as if two tricks may possibly be lost in each suit except spades. But West led the club 10 to the J and A. Next came the diamond A and K and one to the Q. West returned the spade 3 to the J. The spade K was cashed, club led to the K dropping the Q and setting up the remainders, the spade A furnished a heart discard, the heart finesse won, and the rest of South's hand was now good. He had lost only one trick, to the trump Q.

Keeping Feet Happy

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU love to play with your toes, little one? And, after indulging in this diversion, do you find that you can scarcely hobble because of all the pain that is lodged inside your shoes? Same old story. Chiropodists shake their heads, wonder why women try to remove corns and callouses with manicure scissors or Daddy's razor. Serious infections have resulted. Foot specialists deplore the practice because of dangers it entails.

An ingrowing toe-nail is a particularly interesting subject for home surgery. The more the afflicted one digs out the hardened tissue, the more it will bank up. If she cuts down the nail at the side, it may never be normal again. The remedy for this condition is a shoe that does not press against the flesh. It isn't that the nail grows in, but that the cuticle banks up until it becomes inflamed and painful.

Nearly all women are fussy about shoes, but their fussiness is concerned with appearance rather than comfort. Which seems pretty silly, since a shoe can be smart and sensible, give ease and satisfaction. There are hundreds of lasts from which to choose; the right one can be found.

A little overweight is nothing to worry about if proportions are good, carriage erect and vibrant. The silhouette is the important matter.

A daily work-out of ten minutes will keep one from putting on adipose upholstery, if backed up by diet restrictions. No need of starving. There are plenty of good things to eat that won't put on an ounce of flesh — lean meats, fish, poultry, green salads, vegetables that grow above ground, fruit, cottage cheese, buttermilk, fruit juices, tomato juice.

An easy exercise for getting a whippet waistline: Stand erect, hands clinched and stretched out on a level with the shoulders. Lift one hand high while lowering the other. Stretch with a gosh-awful muscle pull.

Cape-and-Frock Kiddie Outfit

Marian Martin

PATTERN 9054

Here's a complete "go-to-meetin'" ensemble for a smart little girl, Marian Martin's Pattern 9054. The adorable pantie-dress would be butterfly-gay in a crisp organdie or in a new dotted swiss sprinkled with flowers. You'll like the sleeves either puffed or in wing-like flares. The princess lines are flattering to tiny busy-bodies—and so simple to stitch. And the shirred front bodice, which may contrast, is soft and utterly charming. Try finishing off the dress prettily with a back-tying sash and ruffled edging. Now add the perky-shouldered unlined cape, making it of, say, gay contrasting flannel.

Pattern 9054 may be ordered only in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, dress, requires 3 2-4 yards 35 inch fabric and 1 1-8 yards ruffling; cape 7-8 yards 54 inch fabric.

'Best Undressed Woman' Will Be Selected

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)—Who is the "best undressed woman" of the year?

Piqued by perennial selections of the "ten best-dressed women," the Art Students League of New York is going to pick the ten who look best without benefit of too much drapery, on the grounds that "clothes make the man — shape makes the woman."

They will get down to the bare facts by studying 1,500 photographs of slimly dressed and unclad film stars, stage players, ballet dancers and professional models. The winners will be announced at the league's annual ball Friday night.

Society beauties and other "amateurs" are barred because the art students feel they uncover only to "get their pictures in the papers."

Marshall Student Wants To Fight For Finland

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Because of the war between Finland and Russia, Marshall college will have to get along without young William Haverty, and perhaps one or two others.

The youth, who at seventeen has been around more than most boys his age, sold his books and some personal effects and took a train for Dayton, Ohio, where, he said, the Finnish ambassador to Washington told him a representative of the embattled country would arrange passage to the front.

Haverty, of Huntington, was a freshman at Marshall.

Cute Little Beggar

Bowling Green, Ky. (AP)—Brownie, a homeless mongrel four years ago when she started making her home at Les Powell's filling station, now is the height of doggish refinement.

When the little brown and white dog becomes hungry, she begs Powell or others at the station for a nickel. If successful, she takes the nickel in her mouth, trots over to a hamburger stand next door, waits for someone to enter and let her in, places the nickel in a box for that purpose behind the counter and barks for a 'burger.

The hamburger always is placed in a sack which Brownie grasps in her mouth. The dog then returns to her bed in the service station, tears the sack open and devours the meal.

English Gardens Are Described

The gardens of the average Englishman were discribed by Mrs. A. W. Keight yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Garden Club held at the home of Miss Elizabeth L. Lowndes, 27 Washington street.

Mrs. Keight described Lewisham Park, London, South East. The park, she said, coveres about eight acres and is surrounded by an iron fence with locked gates. The Park is private to the people living on all four sides. All the houses surrounding the Park have a beautiful view of lawns and flower beds, tennis courts and bowling green. The front gardens to the houses consist chiefly of a lawn and gravel paths leading to the front door, with rose bushes planted in front of the bay windows of the house. The gardens are fenced in and trim private hedges border the enclosure. The side fences were about five feet high and near the end of the garden were sevral rose bushes to hind from view the kitchen garden. The same flowers that are found here and in Virginia are grown there, crouses, tulips, hyacinths delphenium, garaniums and phlox.

Flower Season Similar

The flower seasons there are similar to ours, Mrs. Keight said. They have tulips in May, roses in June, dahlias in September and chrysanthemums in October, though hydrangeas will not flourish outside. In Torquay and Bournemouth and the south of England palm trees and cactus grow.

The ladies were shown colored plates of various English gardens to illustrate the talk. Though the Englishman is proud to show his garden he wants it private. It is here we find clipped yew trees, formal arrangements of flower beds and gravelled paths, stone steps leading to velvety lawns and shady rose arbors. Many of these lovely estates have been sold for taxes and are now open to the public for a small fee, to be used as pleasure gardens for outings and picnics.

Birds Are Compared

Mrs. Keight compared the birds found in the English garden to those we have here. Their robins are about the size of our sparrows, their thrush compares in size to our robin. The English birds do not have the bright plumage we find here, but they have the gift of beautiful song.

The peace and quaintness of the old world still lingers in the cottage garden of today, Mrs. Keight said. The farm may be modernized but the gay flowers and color to the whitewashed walls and thatched roof of the humble cot. Beehives are a familiar sight in the orchard, and the fruit trees are trained to grow flat against a trellis and only the choice fruits are allowed to mature.

One of the characteristic features of the cottage gardens, the speaker said, is the style of their boundaries. The commonest is the clipped privet hedge, also wooden fences. In Berkshire and Whitshire, there are wattled fences (entwined willow branches) and in the Cotswolds, drystone walls. In Devon the stone walls are painted or whitewashed. The entrance gates are usually of wood sheltered by an arch of entwined rambler roses.

Must Have Gardens

Every English householder considers it his right to have a garden, and if he is living in a densly populated area, he will cycle, in the cool of the evening, to his garden allotment some two or three miles away. Mrs. Keight called special attention to the fact that it keeps light until 9 o'clock in the evening in the summer and with daylight saving time in force the gardener has as extra hour.

After Mrs. Keight told of the comparative ease of making a garden in England, Mrs. Mattie Sturtz told how the homes of Cumberland may be surrounded by beautiful flowers and shrubs on a small budget. She reminded that the Garden Club was organized to encourage the people to beautify their homes.

Rose Cultivation Explained

Mrs. Sturtz told of her own experiences in growing roses, of how eleven years ago she began with poor, uncultivated soil and today she has 150 rose bushes. Mrs. Sturtz explained how to prune and cultivate and care for roses, stressing the fact that the blossom comes on the new growth. One amazing fact is that just before frost Mrs. Sturtz cuts all her rose buds, puts them in large containers so that they may have plenty of water, and keeps them in a room without heat, the buds will thus mature and the roses will be her most beautiful ones. These flowers she will have up until Thanksgiving time.

Selection of situation, preparation of beds, what kind of plants to buy, and the better places to get them were also described by Mrs. Sturtz. How to plant and care for the bush was also given.

Mrs. Sturtz also explained the difference between growing and idormant plants and discussed the care of each, as well as the respective merits of Spring and Fall planting.

"How I Grow Roses" was concluded with Mrs. Sturtz listing the enemies to roses and the method of control.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

ROMANY was studying Janet James' scripts when Brent appeared at the apartment. Purposely, Cholly stayed downtown and went to a movie. She had no desire to be about when the announcer was forced to tell Romany of the gossip he had caused.

When Romany opened the door, she could see from the strained expression of Brent's face that something had gone amiss. Throwing himself into a chair, Brent ran his hand through his hair nervously.

"Darling!" He wasted no time. "I've wanted to tell you something for a long time. But I've been afraid if I did you wouldn't forgive me."

"Why Brent!" She laughed a little uncertainly. "You act as though you'd committed a murder or something. I'm sure it can't be as serious as you look."

But Nelson was in no mood to be cheered by her effort to make things easy for him.

"I meant well, darling, but I've made a terrible mistake. People are talking about us, I'm afraid, and I wanted to tell you before anyone else did."

She moved to the edge of her chair, her eyes widening.

"Talking about us! Oh, I suppose you mean because of Myra."

He lit a cigaret.

"No, it's much worse than that. I gave Joe Telling a check for two hundred dollars to pay for your pictures and to enter you in the television contest. He got drunk and talked in the restaurant at Interstate."

"You did what?" Romany sat back, aghast. "What are you talking about, Brent?"

He told her of the day he had gone to the press department and that Telling had refused to give her any publicity because she wasn't an Interstate artist; that Joe had asked him if he thought the place was the United States mint. And how, determined to help her, he had written the check.

"It seemed the right thing to do at the time." Brent dropped his head into his hands boyishly. "How was I to know he was going to talk and people would misunderstand?"

Much to his surprise, Romany went over and sat down beside him on the arm of his chair.

"Don't, Brent." She lifted his head with her hands, smiling as best she could. "Don't you think I know you meant to be a good friend? Haven't you proved that?"

"Oh, Romany!" He broke into a tired smile, greatly relieved. "I've been almost wild for fear you wouldn't forgive me."

"Of course"—her eyes were troubled—"it's a shock. But the day I lunched with Jane Martel, she prepared me pretty well for gossip. She says they talk about anyone when they begin to have a little luck...I've really been expecting it. And I knew they were talking because you broke your engagement to Myra."

Brent confessed he had heard the tales from Cholly, and that it had been her advice that he should tell Romany himself what was being said.

"I'm glad you did," Romany assured him. "It would have been a much greater shock to have heard it accidentally, or to have had some well-meaning person come and tell me about it."

"If there's anything under heaven I can do to undo the mess," said Brent.

"I think I'm the only one who can do that," Romany said thoughtfully.

"But how, dear?"

Romany decided:

"Well, the first thing I'm going to do is walk into the press department and tell Joe Telling I'm withdrawing from the television contest."

"But, darling," Brent protested, "the votes are pouring in for you. You're even ahead of Myra, I was told this afternoon."

"It doesn't matter. I can't stay in. And, of course, I must give Joe Telling a check for two hundred dollars to give to you. That ought to shut him up."

"But, Romany, I don't want you to return the money. I wanted to do it for you."

"Do you think I'd let you?" She sounded impatient. "Don't be silly! I've some money saved. I'll take a check in to Telling tomorrow."

"I'm sorry you won't forget it," Brent sighed. "Or let me give you back the check after Telling turns it over to me. Won't you, Romany?"

"Certainly not," she said curtly. Brent's mood changed suddenly.

"Romany, dear," he said very low, "how much longer are you going to keep me from saying the things I've got to say to you?"

She turned her head away from him.

"What things Brent?"

It was coming. The moment she had dreaded. But she had to get it over with. Brent's arms went around her, pulling her from the arm of the chair into his lap. He buried his head in her shoulder boyishly.

"Oh, I love you so, Romany!" His voice caught. "Ever since that night at the station, when you looked at me and smiled, I've seen your face everywhere I turn."

"Don't Brent!" Romany felt stifled.

Brent sought her lips. She let him kiss her, remaining passive. He kissed her hungrily, then lifted his head, seeking her eyes.

"Tell me, Romany. Tell me, do you love me a little?"

"Oh, Brent!" She dropped her eyes unhappily. "I wish you hadn't asked me that. I'm so fond of you. But—"

He said very low:

"But! Oh, Romany, that's such a big little word. Is it just that you aren't sure? Don't you think you could love me? If you married me, sweetheart, I'd be so good to you. I'd make you love me. I'd live every hour for you."

He was so dear, so boyishly earnest. There was no doubt in Romany's mind that Brent loved her. He had proved his deep devotion in every way. Not only had he been responsible for almost everything that had happened to her in radio, but his very respect for her had proved it. It hadn't been easy, she knew, for him to stay so close to her day after day and not try to make light love to her. It was contrary to his makeup.

They were silent for a little while. Brent waited for his answer, heart pounding, his face tense with longing. Romany wondered if she should tell him she would marry him, even though she didn't have that wild feeling of elation a girl was supposed to have when a man asked her to be his wife. Perhaps she wasn't the romantic type.

Unable to bear the silence any longer, Brent, her warm cheek against his, asked breathlessly:

"You're not sure, are you, my darling? You want a little more time to make up your mind. Is that it?"

She didn't want to answer him just then. Evading would be the easiest way out. She certainly didn't want to say she would never marry him. So Romany whispered, feeling suddenly shy in his arms:

"Yes, Brent, that's it. I want—more time."

His face relaxed into a little smile.

"As long as the answer isn't no, I feel a little better. Take a little time, darling. But not too long. If I'm going to be a family man, I want to start making plans for a home for my wife. What kind of a house do you want, Romany? A penthouse or a little white house with green shutters?"

She silenced him with a hand over his mouth.

"Don't!" She hid her face against his sleeve. "Let's not talk about those things—yet."

"I'll give you four weeks." Brent laughed softly, feeling very sure that Romany would be Mrs. Nelson in the spring.

IT MAY BE A BLESSING

WHAT MAY seem like a plague, in the form of an absurdly high contract into which your partner pushed you, may turn out to be a blessing in disguise. If you stick by your guns, you may find a lot of lucky breaks in the cards and also in the way your opponents choose to play them. The ultimate result may be a lot better score than you figured to get out of the deal without performing impossible miracles.

Did anybody ever know of crazier bidding than North did on this deal? In the duplicate tournament where it arose, all experienced pairs got into 3-No Trumps and made four. This North was an auction player to whom contract bidding had been explained—the idea of getting as high as you can. And did he do it?

On examining the dummy, it looks as if two tricks may possibly be lost in each suit except spades. But West led the club 10 to the J and A. Next came the diamond A and K and one to the Q. West returned the spade 3 to the J. The spade K was cashed, club led to the K dropping the Q and setting up the remainders, the spade A furnished a heart discard, the heart finesse won, and the rest of South's hand was now good. He had lost only one trick, to the trump Q.

Keeping Feet Happy

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU love to play with your toes, little one? And, after indulging in this diversion, do you find that you can scarcely hobble because of all the pain that is lodged inside your shoes? Same old story. Chiropodists shake their heads, wonder why women try to remove corns and callouses with manicure scissors or Daddy's razor. Serious infections have resulted. Foot specialists deplore the practice because of dangers it entails.

An ingrowing toe-nail is a particularly interesting subject for home surgery. The more the afflicted one digs out the hardened tissue, the more it will bank up. If she cuts down the nail at the side, it may never be normal again. The remedy for this condition is a shoe that does not press against the flesh. It isn't that the nail grows in, but that the cuticle banks up until it becomes inflamed and painful.

Nearly all women are fussy about shoes, but their fussiness is concerned with appearance rather than comfort. Which seems pretty silly, since a shoe can be smart and sensible, give ease and satisfaction. There are hundreds of lasts from which to choose; the right one can be found.

A little overweight is nothing to worry about if proportions are good, carriage erect and vibrant. The silhouette is the important matter.

A daily work-out of ten minutes will keep one from putting on adipose upholstery, if backed up by diet restrictions. No need of starving. There are plenty of good things to eat that won't put on an ounce of flesh — lean meats, fish, poultry, green salads, vegetables that grow above ground, fruit, cottage cheese, buttermilk, fruit juices, tomato juice.

An easy exercise for getting a whippet waistline: Stand erect, hands clinched and stretched out on a level with the shoulders. Lift one hand high while lowering the other. Stretch with a gosh-awful muscle pull.

'Best Undressed Woman' Will Be Selected

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)—Who is the "best undressed woman" of the year?

Piqued by perennial selections of the "ten best-dressed women," the Art Students League of New York is going to pick the ten who look best without benefit of too much drapery, on the grounds that "clothes make the man — shape makes the woman."

They will get down to the bare facts by studying 1,500 photographs of slimly dressed and unclad film stars, stage players, ballet dancers and professional models. The winners will be announced at the league's annual ball Friday night.

Society beauties and other "amateurs" are barred because the art students feel they uncover only to "get their pictures in the papers."

Marshall Student Wants To Fight For Finland

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Because of the war between Finland and Russia, Marshall college will have to get along without young William Haverty, and perhaps one or two others.

The youth, who at seventeen has been around more than most boys his age, sold his books and some personal effects and took a train for Dayton, Ohio, where, he said, the Finnish ambassador to Washington told him a representative of the embattled country would arrange passage to the front.

Haverty, of Huntington, was a freshman at Marshall.

Cute Little Beggar

Bowling Green, Ky. (AP)—Brownie, a homeless mongrel four years ago when she started making her home at Les Powell's filling station, now is the height of doggish refinement.

When the little brown and white dog becomes hungry, she begs Powell or others at the station for a nickel. If successful, she takes the nickel in her mouth, trots over to a hamburger stand next door, waits for someone to enter and let her in, places the nickel in a box for that purpose behind the counter and barks for a 'burger.

The hamburger always is placed in a sack which Brownie grasps in her mouth. The dog then returns to her bed in the service station, tears the sack open and devours the meal.

Could You Be a Taxi Driver? Rigid Tests Might Prove Bar

By MADELIN BLITZSTEIN
Central Press Correspondent

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22—Has it ever occurred to you to wonder whether the private life of a taxicab driver can have any effect on his ability to bring you successfully to your destination over slippery streets on a cold night?

Did you ever wonder, as you sat back comfortably in a warm taxicab, whether the man at the wheel was married or single, divorced or a widower, equipped with a college degree or only a high school graduate, young or old or middle-aged?

While these questions may seem hardly relevant to a man's ability to wind through traffic and stop at a red light, they are extremely important to a man's facility to be an expert cab driver, according to Dr. Morris S. Viteles, professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, and deviser of examinations for the Yellow Cab company in Philadelphia.

According to Dr. Viteles, who should know, since he has been studying cab drivers, their reactions to situations and the relationship of their success as drivers to their private lives for many years, marriage is five times as important for a taxi driver as experience.

The ideal age of a new cab driver, he found, is between 28 and 33, and those who have grammar school and high school educations are more apt to make a better showing on the examination he devised for prospective drivers than are those men who have gone through a university.

A Philly Driver

You see, while it may be relatively difficult to get a job driving a cab in Philadelphia, the man who gets it has a better chance of keeping it than almost any other place.

The average cab driver in Philadelphia stays on the job for 10 years, as compared with the 16 months' average in New York City and the average of even less than one year in most other places.

Dr. Viteles believes that the reason is that the applicants for taxicab driving jobs are put through a series of tests which give a very fine picture of his ability to hold the job as well as his natural aptitude for it.

In the tests, marital status is considered five times as important as experience, for Dr. Viteles gives a married man 58 points to the good.

Dr. Viteles gives a single man only 25 points and a widowed or divorced man with dependents rates in between 58 and 25, according to varying circumstances of why the divorce was obtained, how many dependents there are, what age the dependents are, etc.

Need "Horse Sense"

A man's weight and his ability to pass a "horse sense intelligent test," in the words of Dr. Viteles, are given equal importance in the ratings of the examination.

Many men apply for jobs, but only one man out of every eight who come are considered to have sufficient qualities to be promising enough to be given the opportunity to take the complete examination. Out of those who take the examination, 60 per cent pass with a high enough rating to become cab drivers.

"Applicants must be between the ages of 23½ and 35," explained Dr. Viteles. "Those between 28 and 33 are considered ideal. They are given a standard life insurance physical examination and then they take the 'horse sense test.'"

In this "horse sense test," especially devised for taxicab aspirants by Dr. Viteles, the questions are very interesting. A sample question goes like this:

Could You Answer?

"If your cab broke down and there was no other cab to which to transfer your passenger, and the passenger refused to pay because he had not been carried to his destination, what would you do?

"a—Hold him until a policeman came.

"b—Beat him with your crank handle until he paid?

"c—Ask him to give you his name and address and allow him to go?

"d—Allow him to go, but follow him until you found a policeman whom you could ask to arrest him?"

A taxicab driver in any American city

Another sample question is this one:

"If you suspected a man loaded with bundles of being a bootlegger, what would you do if he hailed your cab?

"a—Drive by as though you did not see the signal?

"b—Pick him up and drive him to the nearest police station?

"c—Tell him you cannot carry him unless he assures you he has no liquor in the bundles?

"d—Pick him up and carry him to his destination?"

Traffic Attitude

The other questions cover a wide range of subjects, all the way from the ability of the applicant to make the proper change quickly, the applicant's powers of observation, and his attitude toward respecting red and green lights.

After an applicant has passed both the medical examination and the "horse-sense tests," he is then taken in hand by the employment manager, who happens to be Harry Pegg, a one-time navy heavyweight boxing champion.

Pegg, who has been working for the company for more than 16 years, gives the new man a stiff road test and two days of what is called "schooling" in the cab.

During this period, Pegg teaches the "rookie" to help customers get in and out of his cab, and, when a passenger is a woman alone, to take her to her door after dark. Pegg tells the applicant how necessary it is to watch out for protruding fingers and feet before slamming the door of the cab closed, and explains to him the intricacies of cruising and "jockeying for position" in heavy traffic.

There are a host of other things for the expert driver to learn, like finding lost articles, helping people out of situations of various kinds and knowing every part of the city. Dr. Viteles feels that his tests have produced fine results and have succeeded in weeding out those who are equipped for the job from those who are not.

Huntington Musician Signs Fat Contract

Huntington, W. Va., Feb 22 (AP)—Jimmy Priddy, 21, returned to Huntington a much discouraged young man seven months ago, after a small New York orchestra with which he signed was disbanded.

But he kept tooting away at his trombone, and got part time work in Huntington orchestras. The return, however, amounted to no more than $7 a week sometimes.

Priddy had played since high school days, when he performed in the Pony Express band. Needless to say the immediate prospect was not bright. Then—

By a chance acquaintance, he received word that Tommy Tucker, another orchestra leader, "might need a good trombonist."

He connected. The orchestra was engaged for a cafe in Tuchhoe, N. Y. Then—

A scout for Glenn Miller, a current favorite among orchestra leaders heard him, and indicated Miller "might need a good trombonist." Miller did.

And Priddy signed to play with Glenn Miller's orchestra—at $10,000 a year. That's the figure the leading trade paper says he'll receive.

Men Who Bite Nails Are Called Stingy

Columbus, O., Feb. 22 (AP)—Women at the Ohio Hairdressers Guild convention have been warned not to marry men who bite their fingernails or file them too short.

Why?

"They are characteristically stingy," asserted Laura de Gez, New York stylist.

She suggested that men should visit a beauty salon weekly and should dye their hair to preserve a youthful appearance.

Deductions Allowable for Depreciation Are Explained

The Internal Revenue Code provides for "a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence." For convenience, such allowance usually is referred to as depreciation.

In claiming a deduction for depreciation several fundamental principles must be observed. The deduction must be confined to property actually used in trade, business, and or profession, and to improvements on real property, other than property used by the taxpayer as his personal residence. In general, it applies to the taxpayer's capital assets—buildings, machinery, etc.—the cost of which cannot be deducted as a business expense.

A lawyer, doctor, or other professional man may not charge off as a current expense the cost of a library used wholly in his profession, this being a capital expenditure and the library a capital asset; but he may deduct an allowance for depreciation based upon the useful life of the library. If part of a professional man's residencee is used by him for office purposes, a proportionate amount of the depreciation sustained may be deducted, based generally on the ration of the number of rooms used for such purposes to the total number of rooms in the building.

The same principle applies if a taxpayer rents to others a portion of his residence. Under such conditions, however, the taxpayer must include in his gross income the rentals received.

The first fire company in New York, in 1658, was known as "The Rattle Watch." It numbered eight men.

People suffering from acid indigestion, stomach gas, sick-headaches, nervousness, dizziness, "half alive" feeling because of excess acidity and lazy elimination declare they can hardly believe the remarkable relief they have experienced from taking Williams Formula.
People are so well-pleased with Williams Formula they are glad to tell their friends and all others. Mr. Louis Wendland, 2109 North 7th St., Sheboygan, Wisconsin, relates his experience.
"I have experienced considerable sour gas pains and constipation. Many foods I would eat would sour and form a great deal of gas and I would bloat. I have also been troubled with lazy bowels. Some time ago, I decided to try Williams Formula and I can surely say that I can eat many foods now and Williams Formula has a definite action on my bowels. I am grateful to have had opportunity of endorsing such a fine medicine as Williams Formula."

MR. LOUIS WENDLAND
Why should you suffer spells of dizziness, sick headaches, nausea, poor appetite, gas, bloat, tired, run-down, "half-alive" feeling, due to acid stomach and lazy elimination? Williams Formula may be just the thing you need to bring you relief and a new zest for living. Williams Formula is a compound of Natural Herbs and Minerals which start right to work giving relief, just like taking several good medicines in one. It is sold at good drug stores in two sizes—$1.50, $6. Costs only a few cents a day to take and may be worth $10 a bottle to you in the relief it gives. Surely you owe it to yourself to give it a fair trial. Get a bottle of Williams Formula today at Ford's Drug Stores, Cumberland, Frostburg.

Britain's Seizure Of Mails Attacked As Foolish Move

Senator Pittman, However, Admits Examination Was within Law

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—Senator Pittman (D-Nev) asserted today that Great Britain made "an excessive and very foolish use" of its right as a belligerent to censor American mail by sending armed marines aboard the pan-American clipper at Bermuda.

The disclosure that 2,600 pounds of mail had been seized in Bermuda on January 18 at the point of bayonets after censorship officials had been ordered off the flying boat, brought a wave of protest in Congressional circles. Included in the censored mail were letters addressed to Germany, Italy, Sweden, Portugal, the Azores and other points.

Would Cancel Flights

Senator Truman (D-Mo) suggested, in commenting on the incident, that the United States retaliate by cancelling future Clipper flights to Bermuda and by prohibiting the landing of British planes in this country.

Pittman, who is chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters that there was "no doubt" that the British had the right to examine for contraband all the mail aboard the Clipper, including that addressed to neutral countries.

"But," he added, "the British have been making an excessive and very foolish use of that right under the circumstances."

Pittman has contended that belligerents have the right to search American surface ships or planes touching on belligerent ports or to stop them on the high seas for that purpose, but have no authority to force American vessels into belligerent ports for examination as the British have done in the Mediterranean.

Truman said he thought the interference with American mails could be stopped if this country took a "firm stand" and retaliated for the Bermuda incident.

"I'm not a neutral," he said, recalling a recent speech in which he expressed sympathy for England and France, "but I don't like that sort of treatment."

Senator Clark (D-Mo) sought to strengthen support for a bill he introduced last week to bar clipper flights to Bermuda while the British continue censorship of the mails there.

Declaring the British were using "high handed procedure," Clark won unanimous consent to insert in the Senate record a newspaper account of the Bermuda incident.

Refers to Other Cases

Senator Schwellenbach (D-Wash) said he thought the incident "was not very much worse than prior cases in which the British government has refused to recognize our rights as neutrals.

"It is an indication of the extent to which England will go in her attitude toward neutrals," he added. "If England doesn't watch out, she will bring about a condition of definite antagonism to herself."

Senator Nye (R-ND) commented: "The incident displays a nice, friendly attitude toward a would-be ally. If the other side had done, I know where we would be today."

Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind) said he thought the incident was "another step to provoke us and edge us into another World War."

"I know what Andrew Jackson would have said in this case," remarked Senator Lundeen (FL-Minn). "He would have said, 'let's seize Bermuda.'" introduced by Marshal Klementi Voroshiloff, war commissar, of defending the Soviet Union by fighting on enemy territory.

Once this idea became dominant there was increased emphasis on mechanization, aviation and fast motorized units necessary to carry the war into enemy territory.

Changes in army statutes were introduced, and the oath of the soldier was changed. The new oath, sworn to by the troops for the first time on Red army day in 1938, merely pledged the soldier's allegiance to his superiors. Previously he had taken allegiance to the Communist cause of "liberating" the world's workers.

In the opinion of the Russians the march of the Red army into Poland last year and the present Finnish campaign are classical examples of defending the Soviet by offensive strategy.

Conclusion of the Black Sea maneuvers was disclosed simultaneously with the news that a training blackout had been ordered from Tuesday until further notice in Baku, Caspian oil center.

Rye, Scotch or Gin Used To Provide Heat

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 22. (AP)—G. Kelleher, managing director of a hotel here confirmed today a trade publication's report of his heating arrangements in the recent cold wave and added the practice will be resumed whenever needed.

The trade paper said the hotel in the January freeze:

"Offered to each guest a bottle of rye, scotch or gin as a means of maintaining the heat to which every person in Florida is entitled. It is understood that guests were found praying for a continuation of the Arctic wave."

been attacked by German warplanes. All said they replied to bombing and machine gun attacks with machinegun fire of their own.

Only slight damage was reported. The crew of one was said in British accounts to have suffered the principal "tragedy" when a machine-gun bullet hit a bowl of hot food the cook was carrying.

Witnesses of the Codingham fight said they say the bomber, a Heinkel, scudding along the coast with the attacking Spitfire swooping and fire on its tail in an obvious effort to prevent the Germans from escaping out to sea.

Heinkel Forced Down

As the German craft swung overland the Spitre opened up another burst of fire and the Heinkel sat down in the field.

The second bomber was brought down in a thirty-mile chase through clouds by fighter planes piloted by victors of other recent battles. A British flight lieutenant reported that the pursuit ship sighted the enemy ten miles off the Northumberland coast and as it dived to attack got a burst of machine-gun bullets from the bomber's rear gunner.

The British fighters then opened up, and the lieutenant said, "the Heinkel's undercarriage immediately dropped."

Dives into Sea

"It dived steeply to about 1,000 feet," he asserted, "when its wing tips were seen to drop off. Then it turned on its back and dived vertically into the sea."

As the air ministry announced destruction of the two German bombers, other British sources said this brought to an even fifty the number of German planes downed in such raids in the war to date. They list forty-one as known definitely to have been shot down, and said nine others probably failed to reach their home bases after running into British fire.

The British set the value of the lost planes at about $4,000,000.

Added to these claims was an Allied assertion that pursuit ships and anti-aircraft guns have shot down forty-seven bombers in France since the war began.

Police Lieut. Fred Ford said the plea of Wilt's mother caused him to return here and surrender to police after fleeing to Washington. Police testified that $1,450 was returned by Wilt's mother. Ford said de Bullet persuaded Wilt to go to Washington, where his mother conducts a boarding house, and tell her of the robbery.

Ford read a statement he assertedly obtained from Wilt in which the confessed bandit told of loaning Dentry $10. "He knew nothing about the holdup," the statement declared.

Geery Enters Concern

Geery became interested, although acknowledging he knew nothing about the art business and expected to take no active part in it, and control was obtained through negotiations with the Bishop estate, Geery putting up $10,000 as a starter, and Logan nothing. They formed the Amaranga Corporation to make the purchase.

Logan moved up to the presidency; Geery asked for, and received, the title of secretary-treasurer to protect his interests. Altogether, Geery put up $32,900 and also induced a friend to advance $5,000.

During all this time and afterward—so he was pictured in the affidavit—Geery was simply a bewildered insurance man who had an uncertain and unknowing finger in the art business. So little did he know that it was only in May, 1939, some three months before the bankruptcy, that he learned conditions were bad at the galleries.

"Modern Tories" Flayed By Secretary Woodring

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 22 (AP)—Secretary of war Harry H. Woodring declared tonight the "Tories of 1776" condemned George Washington just as "the Tories of today denounce Franklin Roosevelt and his liberal followers who have brought to many millions of our countrymen the boon of a new freedom."

The cabinet officer, addressing Democrats of his home state at their 36th annual Washington celebration, criticized those who "pay lip service to liberalism but cry out against reform."

"Without naming the specific reforms they would repeal, these modern Tories emphasize the expense," he exclaimed. "Expensive? of course the measures taken have been expensive.

"It is impossible to relieve the the distress of many millions without an appropriate expenditure of funds."

The government, meanwhile, was reported hoping to stave off a showdown in the increasingly tense Allied-German struggle for a major portion of its oil exports by offering Germany the entire government's legal share of the product of Allied and neutral owned corporations at Ploesti.

Nazis To Make Demands

With the arrival Monday of Dr. Karl Clodius, German economic expert, the Nazis were expected to make sharp demands that Rumania fulfill her promise to sell Germany 1,680,000 tons of petroleum in 1940.

Short of exporting the output of the Allied-owned fields in Rumania, which raises the spectre of a French-British blockade or outright intervention by the western powers, government circles saw little chance of furnishing Germany's entire quota.

The government, however, is entitled to 650,000 tons of oil annually from the foreign operators and could requisition from home-owned companies a total production of 350,000 tons.

In another move to protect the nation's resources, Minister of National Economy Constantin Angelescu today announced a measure forcing holders of undeveloped mineral and oil lands to sell their properties for exploitation to the state if it so orders.

Potomac State Frosh Top LaSalle 44-35

Slocum Outfit Puts up Fight Before Bowing

Weight and Height of Keyser Combination Too Much for Losers

Mason, Kelly Chief State Pointgetters; Shaffer LaSalle's Best

A sure-shooting, slick-passing Potomac State Freshmen basketball team, packing plenty of height and weight, handed Coach Art Slocum's LaSalle High hoopsters their fourth setback of the season last night at the SS. Peter & Paul gym by a 44-35 score.

The entire Frosh crow, all six footers, seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of stamina and was a bit too clever for the North Enders. Despite the handicap the Slocumen battled valiantly and several times during the late stages whittled the visitors' lead to a point where any kind of a scoring spurt could have nipped the Freshmen. The aggregation from Keyser had only six players and the sixth—Bolyard—saw only two minutes of service, replacing Forward Jim Kelly right before the first half ended.

With Norman Mason, former Fort Hill cager and Kelly doing most of the bucket dropping, the Frosh outfit stepped away from the locals in the second period and managed to stay on top through the remainder of the game. Mason and Kelly each bagged six goals and the latter added a foul to capture the evening's scoring honors with 13 markers.

Shaffer LaSalle High Scorer

Bernie Ingram, who saw service against local high school quints when playing for the Davis (W. Va.) Wildcats, was the spearhead of the Potomac State passing attack. His feinting and tricky passing decoyed LaSalle players out of position numerous times and, in addition, he made his presence known under the hoops with his rebound snagging. Sonny Levings, center, and John Stewart, guard, also turned in fine performances to make the victory a team win. Stewart, with four fielders and a singleton, was tied with "Penny" Shaffer, LaSalle forward, for third-place scoring honors with nine points.

Shaffer, in capturing scoring laurels for the losers, played one of his best games of the season. The diminutive hoop popper tallied four doubledeckers, two of them sensational one-handers, one long and another on a snowbird when he intercepted a State pass and dribbled half the length of the rectangle to tally.

Shaffer wasn't the whole show for the Slocum crew, however, for all of the eight players to see service for the Blue and Gold broke into the scoring column. Johnny Small played about half the game at a forward post and tabbed three baskets for a six-point total, the second highest for the North Enders. Ted Rowan, Lefty Smith, Dick Boyle and Ed McGraw were also big assets to the Blue and Gold.

LaSalle Takes Lead

LaSalle battled the West Virginians tooth and nail for the first chapter and even went ahead two minutes before the whistle when the score read 7-6 but a foul goal and a long basket by Stewart gave the winners the lead at 9-7 as the session ended.

The State crew broke up the North Enders' attack in the next session and penetrated its defense to set up plays before popping and connecting with deadly accuracy. Two of the winners' four goals were scored on interceptions and the other two dropped in from near the netting. The Freshmen outscored the LaSalle five nine to five during the round and were on the long end of an 18-12 score at intermission.

The teams thrilled the small gathering as the second half began with a flurry of baskets—five in all—in only a minute and 15 seconds of milling. LaSalle, with Shaffer leading the way with two goals, picked up two markers by snaring three goals to State's two during that time. Each quint tallied six twin counters in the quarter, Mason pacing the West Virginians with four buckets and Shaffer leading LaSalle basketeers with three. The quarter closed with LaSalle still trailing by six points, the score reading 30 to 24.

LaSalle managed to cut State's lead to five points with 5:30 to go in the final heat after the winners scored two quick fielders to hold a nine point advantage at 34-25. That marked the end of the Slocummens' threat, for the Frosh put on the steam to win going away.

New York—Baseball bits picked up from here and there. . . . St. Louis Browns, of all the major league clubs, are training off by their lonesome. . . . Eleven clubs sunshine it in Florida and four others in California. . And how those Browns could use some major league competition in the spring . . . Hugh Casey, Dodger pitcher, expects to make $5,000 more in salary this year than last. . . . He got $3,500 in 1939.

Wes Ferrell, Joe Medwick, Schoolboy Rowe and Paul Derringer are among the best golfers in the baseball fraternity. At least $50,000 is expected to be raised in the all-star game at Tampa, Fla., March 17.

Harry Kimberlin, Brownie pitcher now with Toledo, won 16 games for San Antonio in 1939. One Cleveland baseball fan is still yelling that Cleveland didn't snap up Joe Vosmik, former Tribesman, in that recent Brooklyn deal, because he was a Bohemian. . . . Silly, of course.

Bill Crouch, Dodger pitcher, bats both left and right handed. Ted Williams, a rookie, played in the most games for the Red Sox last year . . . 149 to be exact. . . John Sords, syndicate sports cartoonist, once was offered $1,000 as bonus to sign with the St Louis Browns. . . . As a pitcher. . ## Dragons' Game with W. Va. Frosh Will Furnish Mooted Comparison

Independent Team Hopes To Prove Superiority over Allegany High Which Gave Young Mountaineers Good Game

A comparison between local scholastic and independent basketball can be made after next Wednesday, February 28, when the Cumberland Dragons journey to Morgantown, W. Va., to engage the West Virginia Freshmen in the prelim to the West Virginia-Penn State fracas.

The Little Mountaineers defeated Allegany High, now leading in the race for city honors, by a score of 41-36 last Saturday night on the Fort Hill floor in the preliminary to the West Virginia-George Washington game, after being behind by four points with five minutes to play.

Against their one mutual opponent, the Scottdale Overholts, both the Dragons and the Freshmen lost by 10 points, but the Dragons defeated the Overholts here by a 56-31 score in the first game of the series. "Scotty" Hamilton, one of the mainstays of the Frosh quintet, who has been out for several weeks, is expected to return to the lineup by next Wednesday. The Dragons are in top shape and are primed for what is one of the high spots of their season.

Play Tonight

Two games, one tonight and one Sunday, fill the Dragons slate before this important tussle.

Tonight they will engage the Keyser Red Rock Colas, one of the toughest teams in the Keyser area, on the Y.M.C.A. floor here at 9:00 o'clock. Sunday, they engage the District All-Stars, a team composed of leading players of the Washington, D. C., section, in the preliminary to the Collegian-McKeesport game.

In the first tabulation of the Dragons scoring, Bill Schaidt, forward, and "Hink" Rowan, center, lead the hoop parade with 122 and 118 tallies, respectively. "Pooch" Orndorff, with 98, and Eugene "Snoods" Winters, with 92 points, both guards, are third and fourth.

Schaidt has garnered the most baskets, 56, and also the most in a single game, eight. Harry Rowan heads the foul shooters with 11 out of 15 for an average of .740, although Orndorff has scored the most fouls, 24. Orndorff also holds three other marks, having scored the most points in one game, 21, the most fouls, seven, and having the best single game foul average, seven out of seven. Rowan's average of nine points per game is tops in that division.

The team records show that the Dragons have garnered 692 points, an average of 46.1 per game, in winning 13 out of 15 games, while holding the opposition to 434, or an average of 28.9.

Bobby Riggs Wins Indoor Match but Looks for Trouble

Prep School Student Has Champ Going but Loses Out

New York, Feb. 22 (AP) — Dick Shipp is an 18-year-old student at Harrisburg (Pa.) Academy. This fact, while unimportant in itself, took on significance today when he was matched with Bobby Riggs in the opening round of the national indoor tennis championships.

To prepare himself for the ordeal of meeting the country's No. 1 player, young Richard stowed away a hearty breakfast which included a big slab of ham, three eggs and three quarts of milk. Thus fortified, he appeared at the Seventh Regiment Armory four hours ahead of time and paced the floor until Riggs appeared.

For the next hour, the prep school student gave a recognizable reproduction of a sparring partner making the champion's life moderately miserable . In the end Shipp was beaten, 6-4, 11-9, but by that time Riggs had had ample opportunity to adjust himself to the very special requirements of board court play.

Expects Trouble

The Wimbledon and U. S. champion didn't like it much. "It's not the surface for my kind of tennis," he complained, "and I'll probably get bounced out of here before I go many rounds further."

As a footnote, though it should be added that Bobby, fresh up from Florida, wasn't trying too hard in his first match in a national indoor tourney.

Otherwise, there wasn't much for the customers to get excited about. Don McNeill, the No. 2 seeded from Oklahoma City, couldn't get here in time and will play his first match Saturday. Elwood Cooke of Portland, Oregon, No. 3 seeded and No. 6 in the country, lost only five games in beating Fred Krais of New York.

With them into the second round went Frank Bowden, Joe Fishbach, Chauncey Steele and Leonard Hartman, all local men, and Ed Alloo of Berkeley, Calif., the No. 5 seeded.

Scoring a 3-0 victory in a regularly scheduled match this week after dropping a 2-1 decision in a postponed affair against Captain Gene Gunning's crew, Captain Clarence Fletcher's outfit strengthened its hold on first place in Division "A" of the Elks' Bowling League.

Tom Kearney and Franklin Cook posted the high scores as the Gunning team, with all hands present, took two of three games from the leaders in the postponed match. The Fletchers salvaged the third game, despite a blind score, after dropping the first two.

The Gunnings, with John Mosner, Cas Taylor and Bob Babst missing, proved easy for the pace-setters who took all three games by wide margins this week. Cook again topped the Fletcher pinmen, this time with 490, while Phil Jolley had 433 and "Buck" McCullough 427, while Kearney hit 427 for the losers.

The Brodbeck-Long match, carded for last night, was postponed because of the "Cumberland Night" celebration at Frostburg. The summaries:

THE $100,000 CHASE

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 22 (N.A.N.A.)—This impending $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, to be run here March 2, has developed more twists, turns, snarls, kinks, double somersaults and wild guesses than the golden-plated handicap has ever known before.

A few weeks ago the big race seemed to be at Charley Howard's mercy. Charley Howard had missed two $100,000 shots with Seabiscuit by the margin of two non-Hollywood eyelashes, by the margin of a Scotchman's conceded putt.

He came back last year to win with Kayak II after Seabiscuit had cracked up.

I know Howard felt confident that he had the $100,000 chase under full control this time with Kayak on hand and Seabiscuit moving back into polite society once more. But things are all different now with the race only about a week away. Kayak has started twice and has run badly both times. Seabiscuit gave us all a brilliant flash of other days and other years in his first seven-furlong start.

When both buckled up and finished far back Specify and Lassator recently, the once shining blue sky above Charley Howard became replete with storm clouds.

Wide Open Now

The fact is that Kayak, winner of the 1939 $100,000 whirl, has proved with a fair amount of conclusive evidence that he can't carry top weight. The Argentine flyer can move like a dark tornado at anything under 120 pounds. But when they shove more poundage upon him he loses his speed and his zest for running.

This theory may not stand up in the big race. But it has stood up in his last four starts in which he had to pack more than his normal allotment. He has looked well below par in his two starts around here. He ran eighth, far back of Specify, in his last attempt. And Specify had been a wide open bust up to this winning charge.

Seabiscuit is no longer a kid. At the age of seven years he has raced all over the map. He has broken down time after time. But he has always come back with a great heart and four flying feet.

Seabiscuit will be remembered as one of the great racing competitors of all time. He has been good enough to win something like $340,000. He was good enough to run away from War Admiral. With any racing luck his winnings today would be well over the $500,000 mark.

But he isnt' the old Seabiscuit we once knew, unless the vital spark in his system is stronger than any horse ever carried before. He has proved himself to be one of the great horses. Kayak II hasn't.

Each had a definite weakness. Seabiscuit hated mud and Kayak is none too fond of extra weight.

What Then?

My selection at this point for the $100,000 whirligig is Heelfly, the horse Al Vanderbilt finally sold just before the starting gate came along.

The starting gate turned Heelfly into a new and far greater horse. He no longer performs any wild series of starting upheavals. He is off and away with the pack—and he can move in a hurry.

Heelfly has been a brilliant starter out here. He has been the best horse I've seen at Santa Anita. It may be that Kayak or Seabiscuit will regain lost form—just as Specify did. But you know now what Heelfly can do.

It would be a tough break for young Al Vanderbilt to blow this big shot after so many attempts, notably with Discovery and then with Heelfly. But that's racing luck. They are also looking in the general direction of Don Mike, a great mudder, and Can't Wait, the horse that can run all day. Can't Wait was moving like a runaway express in his start along the seven-furlong route. He might have been dynamite at a mile and a quarter.

It's odd how quickly things can change. Only a few weeks ago this $100,000 party seemed to be at the mercy of Kayak II. He was older and supposed to be in better shape to win this time than he was a year ago.

It may be that Challedon, the star Maryland horse, took something out of his system. I still think it is the extra weight. Exterminator could carry 135 or even 138 pounds and keep his speed. Kayak can't. At lease he hasn't. With 130 pounds on his back he had little left at seven furlongs.

This makes it an open race—but I still like Heelfly, the starting-gate horse.

The only shadow against Heelfly is this—he has been on edge for the last six weeks. He has been almost too keen. "Form", as some philosopher has said, "is the brief interval between getting ready and going stale."

But just at this moment Heelfly certainly has his chance to make more money in a trifle over two minutes than the President of the United States can make in a year.

Catchers Popular Coaches

Cleveland, Feb. 22 (CP)—Catchers must make the most popular coaches. Every American league club this season has at least one former receiver listed on the roster as a coach. Cleveland has two—Johnny Bassler and Luke Sewell.

Sweepida Scores At Long Mutuel in Santa Anita Derby

Outsider Takes $50,000; Royal Crusader Is Second

Los Angeles, Feb. 22 (AP)—Sweepida won the sixth running of the mile and one eighth $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby. Royal Crusader placed second and Weigh Anchor finished third.

Mioland was fourth.

Time of the race was 1:51 3-5 compared with the track record of 1:48 4-5 set in 1937 by Seabiscuit. It was a fast track, after light sprinkles. There were 17 starters.

The pari mutuels paid $68.60 on Sweepida to win; $21.20 place; $10 show. On Royal Crusader $23.00 place, $13.00 show. On Weigh Anchor $6.60 show.

Jockey Ralph Neves broke third from the gate on the H. C. Hill gelding, and in the first quarter took the lead, having the race well in hand. Luther Balaski came up from behind steadily, piloting the R. C. stable's colt Royal Crusader, and moved into contention, but Neves pulled Sweepida away.

To the winner went a purse of $43,850. Thirty five thousand witnessed the race.

LaSalle Hi Athletic Drive To Be Checked

A first checkup of the LaSalle High Athletic Association's campaign to raise funds for the school's athletic program will be made at a meeting to be held this evening at 8:15 in Carroll Hall.

The drive, staged primarily to assure the return of "Pat" Conway to the local school as coach and athletic director, was started earlier this month.

Last spring nearly 300 graduates, former students and friends of the school pledged themselves to contribute $7.50, in annual payments of $2.50, to enable LaSalle to secure a full-time secular coach and teacher.

The 1939 subscriptions totaled less than $1,500, however, and as the 1940-41 program, including Conway's salary, will run higher it is estimated that at least $1,800 must be collected this spring. To reach the goal it will be necessary for new pledges to be secured and many of the original subscriptions raised.

Phils Lone Holdover

Potomac State Frosh Top LaSalle 44-35

Slocum Outfit Puts up Fight Before Bowing

Mason, Kelly Chief State Pointgetters; Shaffer LaSalle's Best

A sure-shooting, slick-passing Potomac State Freshmen basketball team, packing plenty of height and weight, handed Coach Art Slocum's LaSalle High hoopsters their fourth setback of the season last night at the SS. Peter & Paul gym by a 44-35 score.

The entire Frosh crew, all six footers, seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of stamina and was a bit too clever for the North Enders. Despite the handicap the Slocumen battled valiantly and several times during the late stages whittled the visitors' lead to a point where any kind of a scoring spurt could have nipped the Freshmen. The aggregation from Keyser had only six players and the sixth—Bolyard—saw only two minutes of service, replacing Forward Jim Kelly right before the first half ended.

With Norman Mason, former Fort Hill cager and Kelly doing most of the bucket dropping, the Frosh outfit stepped away from the locals in the second period and managed to stay on top through the remainder of the game. Mason and Kelly each bagged six goals and the latter added a foul to capture the evening's scoring honors with 13 markers.

Shaffer LaSalle High Scorer

Bernie Ingram, who saw service against local high school quints when playing for the Davis (W. Va.) Wildcats, was the spearhead of the Potomac State passing attack. His feinting and tricky passing decoyed LaSalle players out of position numerous times and, in addition, he made his presence known under the hoops with his rebound snagging. Sonny Levings, center, and John Stewart, guard, also turned in fine performances to make the victory a team win. Stewart, with four fielders and a singleton, was tied with "Penny" Shaffer, LaSalle forward, for third-place scoring honors with nine points.

Shaffer, in capturing scoring laurels for the losers, played one of his best games of the season. The diminutive hoop popper tallied four doubledeckers, two of them sensational one-handers, one long and another on a snowbird when he intercepted a State pass and dribbled half the length of the rectangle to tally.

Shaffer wasn't the whole show for the Slocum crew, however, for all of the eight players to see service for the Blue and Gold broke into the scoring column. Johnny Small played about half the game at a forward post and tabbed three baskets for a six-point total, the second highest for the North Enders. Ted Rowan, Lefty Smith, Dick Boyle and Ed McGraw were also big assets to the Blue and Gold.

LaSalle Takes Lead

LaSalle battled the West Virginians tooth and nail for the first chapter and even went ahead two minutes before the whistle when the score read 7-6 but a foul goal and a long basket by Stewart gave the winners the lead at 9-7 as the session ended.

The State crew broke up the North Enders' attack in the next session and penetrated its defense to set up plays before popping and connecting with deadly accuracy. Two of the winners' four goals were scored on interceptions and the other two dropped in from near the netting. The Freshmen outscored the LaSalle five nine to five during the round and were on the long end of an 18-12 score at intermission.

The teams thrilled the small gathering as the second half began with a flurry of baskets—five in all—in only a minute and 15 seconds of milling. LaSalle, with Shaffer leading the way with two goals, picked up two markers by snaring three goals to State's two during that time. Each quint tallied six twin counters in the quarter, Mason pacing the West Virginians with four buckets and Shaffer leading LaSalle basketeers with three. The quarter closed with LaSalle still trailing by six points, the score reading 30 to 24.

LaSalle managed to cut State's lead to five points with 5:30 to go in the final heat after the winners scored two quick fielders to hold a nine point advantage at 34-25. That marked the end of the Slocummens' threat, for the Frosh put on the steam to win going away.

The old record was 884 made by the Whites. The Dyes' setback cut their margin over the Schaidts to three games. Captain Schaidt set the pace for his team with 167-486 while Captain Dye captured honors for the day by scattering 225-529.

In the other match, the Whites remained a game behind the Schaidts in third place by scoring a sweep victory over the Reinharts. O'Connell with 431 was the only member of the winning crew to hit over 400 while Captain Reinhart was high for his team with 389. The summaries:

Harvard Swimmers Win Over Middie Mermen

Annapolis, Feb. 22 (AP)—Harvard University's swimming team took all but three first places today to give Navy mermen a 47-28 drubbing in their annual tank meet.

The John Harvards splashed off with the 300-yard medley relay to establish a lead they held to the final event. Harvard's Cutler kicked his way to a 4:56.5 pool record in the 440-yard free style event for the day's only new mark.

Dragons' Game with W. Va. Frosh Will Furnish Mooted Comparison

Independent Team Hopes To Prove Superiority over Allegany High Which Gave Young Mountaineers Good Game

A comparison between local scholastic and independent basketball can be made after next Wednesday, February 28, when the Cumberland Dragons journey to Morgantown, W. Va., to engage the West Virginia Freshmen in the prelim to the West Virginia Penn State fracas.

The Little Mountaineers defeated Allegany High, now leading in the race for city honors, by a score of 41-36 last Saturday night on the Fort Hill floor in the preliminary to the West Virginia-George Washington game, after being behind by four points with five minutes to play.

Against their one mutual opponent, the Scottdale Overholts, both the Dragons and the Freshmen lost by 10 points, but the Dragons defeated the Overholts here by a 56-31 score in the first game of the series. "Scotty" Hamilton, one of the mainstays of the Frosh quintet, who has been out for several weeks, is expected to return to the lineup by next Wednesday. The Dragons are in top shape and are primed for what is one of the high spots of their season.

Play Tonight

Two games, one tonight and one Sunday, fill the Dragons slate before this important tussle.

Tonight they will engage the Keyser Red Rock Colas, one of the toughest teams in the Keyser area, on the Y.M.C.A. floor here at 9:00 o'clock. Sunday, they engage the District All-Stars, a team composed of leading players of the Washington, D. C., section, in the preliminary to the Collegian-McKeesport game.

In the first tabulation of the Dragons scoring, Bill Schaidt, forward, and "Hink" Rowan, center, lead the hoop parade with 122 and 118 tallies, respectively. "Pooch" Orndorff, with 98, and Eugene "Snoods" Winters, with 92 points, both guards, are third and fourth.

Schaidt has garnered the most baskets, 56, and also the most in a single game, eight. Harry Rowan heads the foul shooters with 11 out of 15 for an average of .740, although Orndorff has scored the most fouls, 24. Orndorff also holds three other marks, having scored the most points in one game, 21, the most fouls, seven, and having the best single game foul average, seven out of seven. Rowan's average of nine points per game is tops in that division.

The team records show that the Dragons have garnered 692 points, an average of 46.1 per game, in winning 13 out of 15 games, while holding the opposition to 434, or an average of 28.9.

Scoring Records

Following are the individual scoring records, with the exception of one clash, with Davis, W. Va., Warriors, at Davis, in which the official score was kept by the Davis team and has not been forwarded.

Bobby Riggs Wins Indoor Match but Looks for Trouble

Prep School Student Has Champ Going but Loses Out

New York, Feb. 22 (AP) — Dick Shipp is an 18-year-old student at Harrisburg (Pa.) Academy. This fact, while unimportant in itself, took on significance today when he was matched with Bobby Riggs in the opening round of the national indoor tennis championships.

To prepare himself for the ordeal of meeting the country's No. 1 player, young Richard stowed away a hearty breakfast which included a big slab of ham, three eggs and three quarts of milk. Thus fortified, he appeared at the Seventh Regiment Armory four hours ahead of time and paced the floor until Riggs appeared.

For the next hour, the prep school student gave a recognizable reproduction of a sparring partner making the champion's life moderately miserable. In the end Shipp was beaten, 6-4, 11-9, but by that time Riggs had had ample opportunity to adjust himself to the very special requirements of board court play.

Expects Trouble

The Wimbledon and U. S. champion didn't like it much. "It's not the surface for my kind of tennis," he complained, "and I'll probably get bounced out of here before I go many rounds further."

As a footnote, though it should be added that Bobby, fresh up from Florida, wasn't trying too hard in his first match in a national indoor tourney.

Otherwise, there wasn't much for the customers to get excited about. Don McNeill, the No. 2 seeded from Oklahoma City, couldn't get here in time and will play his first match Saturday. Elwood Cooke of Portland, Oregon, No. 3 seeded and No. 6 in the country, lost only five games in beating Fred Krais of New York.

With them into the second round went Frank Bowden, Joe Fishbach, Chauncey Steele and Leonard Hartman, all local men, and Ed Alloo of Berkeley, Calif., the No. 5 seeded.

Fletcher Pinmen Boost Elks' Lead

Scoring a 3-0 victory in a regularly scheduled match this week after dropping a 2-1 decision in a postponed affair against Captain Gene Gunning's crew, Captain Clarence Fletcher's outfit strengthened its hold on first place in Division "A" of the Elks' Bowling League.

Tom Kearney and Franklin Cook posted the high scores as the Gunning team, with all hands present, took two of three games from the leaders in the postponed match. The Fletchers salvaged the third game, despite a blind score, after dropping the first two.

The Gunnings, with John Mosner, Cas Taylor and Bob Babst missing, proved easy for the pace-setters who took all three games by wide margins this week. Cook again topped the Fletcher pinmen, this time with 490, while Phil Jolley had 433 and "Buck" McCullough 427, while Kearney hit 427 for the losers.

The Brodbeck-Long match, carded for last night, was postponed because of the "Cumberland Night" celebration at Frostburg. The summaries:

The Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

THE $100,000 CHASE

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 22 (N.A.N.A.)—This impending $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, to be run here March 2, has developed more twists, turns, snarls, kinks, double somersaults and wild guesses than the golden-plated handicap has ever known before.

A few weeks ago the big race seemed to be at Charley Howard's mercy. Charley Howard had missed two $100,000 shots with Seabiscuit by the margin of two non-Hollywood eyelashes, by the margin of a Scotchman's conceded putt.

He came back last year to win with Kayak II after Seabiscuit had cracked up.

I know Howard felt confident that he had the $100,000 chase under full control this time with Kayak on hand and Seabiscuit moving back into polite society once more. But things are all different now with the race only about a week away. Kayak has started twice and has run badly both times. Seabiscuit gave us all a brilliant flash of other days and other years in his first seven-furlong start.

When both buckled up and finished far back Specify and Lassator recently, the once shining blue sky above Charley Howard became replete with storm clouds.

Wide Open Now

The fact is that Kayak, winner of the 1939 $100,000 whirl, has proved with a fair amount of conclusive evidence that he can't carry top weight. The Argentine flyer can move like a dark tornado at anything under 120 pounds. But when they shove more poundage upon him he loses his speed and his zest for running.

This theory may not stand up in the big race. But it has stood up in his last four starts in which he had to pack more than his normal allotment. He has looked well below par in his two starts around here. He ran eighth, far back of Specify, in his last attempt. And Specify had been a wide open bust up to this winning charge.

Seabiscuit is no longer a kid. At the age of seven years he has raced all over the map. He has broken down time after time. But he has always come back with a great heart and four flying feet.

Seabiscuit will be remembered as one of the great racing competitors of all time. He has been good enough to win something like $340,000. He was good enough to run away from War Admiral. With any racing luck his winnings today would be well over the $500,000 mark.

But he isnt' the old Seabiscuit we once knew, unless the vital spark in his system is stronger than any horse ever carried before. He has proved himself to be one of the great horses. Kayak II hasn't.

Each had a definite weakness. Seabiscuit hated mud and Kayak is none too fond of extra weight.

What Then?

My selection at this point for the $100,000 whirligig is Heelfly, the horse Al Vanderbilt finally sold just before the starting gate came along.

The starting gate turned Heelfly into a new and far greater horse. He no longer performs any wild series of starting upheavals. He is off and away with the pack—and he can move in a hurry.

Heelfly has been a brilliant starter out here. He has been the best horse I've seen at Santa Anita. It may be that Kayak or Seabiscuit will regain lost form—just as Specify did. But you know now what Heelfly can do.

It would be a tough break for young Al Vanderbilt to blow this big shot after so many attempts, notably with Discovery and then with Heelfly. But that's racing luck.

They are also looking in the general direction of Don Mike, a great mudder, and Can't Wait, the horse that can run all day. Can't Wait was moving like a runaway express in his start along the seven-furlong route. He might have been dynamite at a mile and a quarter.

It's odd how quickly things can change. Only a few weeks ago this $100,000 party seemed to be at the mercy of Kayak II. He was older and supposed to be in better shape to win this time than he was a year ago.

It may be that Challedon, the star Maryland horse, took something out of his system. I still think it is the extra weight. Exterminator could carry 135 or even 138 pounds and keep his speed. Kayak can't. At lease he hasn't. With 130 pounds on his back he had little left at seven furlongs.

This makes it an open race—but I still like Heelfly, the starting-gate horse.

The only shadow against Heelfy is this—he has been on edge for the last six weeks. He has been almost too keen. "Form", as some philosopher has said, "is the brief interval between getting ready and going stale."

But just at this moment Heelfy certainly has his chance to make more money in a trifle over two minutes than the President of the United States can make in a year.

Catchers Popular Coaches

Cleveland, Feb. 22 (CP)—Catchers must make the most popular coaches. Every American league club this season has at least one former receiver listed on the roster as a coach. Cleveland has two—Johnny Bassler and Luke Sewell.

Sweepida Scores At Long Mutuel in Santa Anita Derby

Outsider Takes $50,000; Royal Crusader Is Second

Los Angeles, Feb. 22 (AP)—Sweepida won the sixth running of the mile and one eighth $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby. Royal Crusader placed second and Weigh Anchor finished third.

Mioland was fourth.

Time of the race was 1:51 3-5 compared with the track record of 1:48 4-5 set in 1937 by Seabiscuit. It was a fast track, after light sprinkles. There were 17 starters.

The pari mutuels paid $68.60 on Sweepida to win; $21.20 place; $10 show. On Royal Crusader $23.00 place, $13.00 show. On Weigh Anchor $6.60 show.

Jockey Ralph Neves broke third from the gate on the H. C. Hill gelding, and in the first quarter took the lead, having the race well in hand. Luther Balaski came up from behind steadily, piloting the R. C. stable's colt Royal Crusader, and moved into contention, but Neves pulled Sweepida away.

To the winner went a purse of $43,850. Thirty five thousand witnessed the race.

LaSalle Hi Athletic Drive To Be Checked

A first checkup of the LaSalle High Athletic Association's campaign to raise funds for the school's athletic program will be made at a meeting to be held this evening at 8:15 in Carroll Hall.

The drive, staged primarily to assure the return of "Pat" Conway to the local school as coach and athletic director, was started earlier this month.

Last spring nearly 300 graduates, former students and friends of the school pledged themselves to contribute $7.50, in annual payments of $2.50, to enable LaSalle to secure a full-time secular coach and teacher.

The 1939 subscriptions totaled less than $1,500, however, and as the 1940-41 program, including Conway's salary, will run higher it is estimated that at least $1,800 must be collected this spring. To reach the goal it will be necessary for new pledges to be secured and many of the original subscriptions raised.

Boosters Night at Fort Hill High Is On Tap

Sentinels Play Handley in Last Contest at Home

Allegany and Fort Hill Faculty Teams in Preliminary

Allegany High To Play at Piedmont in Return Tilt

Cumberland's two top flight public high school teams take another step to the end of the season's trail tonight when Fort Hill meets Handley High of Winchester on the Sentinel court here at 8 o'clock, and Allegany goes to Piedmont for a return game with Coach Casey's high school aggregation.

It will be "Boosters Night" at Fort Hill and the affair will offer the unusual attraction of the faculty teams of Fort Hill and Allegany High in action in the preliminary at 7 o'clock.

Tonight's clash with Handley will be the final home showing for Fort Hill and the Sentinels will be favored to win since they trounced the Virginians at Winchester 53-25.

After tonight's skirmish, the Sentinels' remaining game will be a CVAL affair at Hagerstown. Martinsburg's Bulldogs copped the CVAL title while Fort Hill and Hagerstown are waging a battle for second place.

Fort Hill's faculty won 12 of 13 games this season. Members of the squad include Johnny Long, Leon Dissinger, James Gomer, Jud Lonnholm, Boston Sherwood, Harold Horn, Fred Burton, Paul Footen, Ken Mowen and "Bobby" Cavanaugh.

Allegany turned back Piedmont at Campobello 42-27 but the Caseymen have come a long way since that contest and may give the West Siders some trouble. The Campers will be seeking their tenth straight victory over a scholastic foe.

Conference Games Carded

In the Potomac Valley Conference games tonight, Moorefield will play at Ridgeley and Petersburg will Journey to Parsons.

The remainder of tonight's card is Beall at Oakland, Elk Garden at Grantsville, Romney at Berkeley Springs, St. Peter's at Paw Paw, Hagerstown at Martinsburg in a CVAL contest and West Liberty at Potomac State.

Tomorrow night, Parsons and Keyser will meet in a conference tussle at Keyser, Franklin will go to Circleville for another conference test and Frostburg State's Mountaineers will journey to Washington, D. C. to oppose Gallaudet.

W. Va. Intercollegiate Tourney Draw on Sunday

Buckhannon, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Director C. B. "Cebe" Ross, coach at West Virginia Wesleyan College, announced today that drawings for the annual West Virginia intercollegiate basketball tournament would take place this Sunday.

The tournament is scheduled for the Wesleyan gymnasium, March 11-12.

Fourteen colleges make up the conference, but Ross conceded that not all these would participate. Entries will be disclosed at the drawing.

The tournaments were instituted five years ago, at Fairmont, which acted as host for two years, after which they were transferred to Clarksburg. Buckhannon hereafter is expected to be the permanent site for the competition.

The Alderson Broaddus battlers are defending champions.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Ryder Cup golfers as a whole have finished dragging their wails behind them in the tournaments this year, and so far as general performance goes are about in a tie with Gene Sarazen's rebuttal team, which also has been shooting blanks.

With the exception of Byron Nelson's victory in the Texas Open, first honors in the seven tournaments to date have gone to a lot of guys named Ed, Jimmy or Lawson, who were rated just social climbers when the Ryder committee and Sarazen made up their golf social registers.

The fact that the tail is wagging the dog, however, cannot be taken as proof that the Ryder Committee or Sarazen couldn't pick an apple out of a barrel, much less a golf team. The choices were made on past performance, and should not be confused with a vote of high school seniors on the boys most likely to succeed, with the choices likely as not winding up polishing the brass doorknobs for the class nitwit.

The Ryder team is made up of Nelson, Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead, Henry Picard, Dick Metz, Jimmy Hines, Paul Runyan, Jug McSpaden, Horton Smith and Vic Ghezzi.

Sarazen's team, which he claims could take the official team apart, in addition to Sarazen is made up of Craid Wood, Denny Shute, Johnny Revolta, Jimmy Thomson, Harry Cooper, Tommy Armour, E. J. Harrison, Ed Dudley and Ben Hogan.

Some of these players, including Picard, and Sarazen himself, have not competed, but those who have, have been watching a bunch of outsiders, including Ed Oliver, Lloyd Mangrum, Clayton Heafner, Jimmy Demaret, Tony Penna, Lawson Little, Willie Goggin and Sam Byrd getting the gravy while it's hot. Chiefly Jimmy Demaret, who won three events, and Oliver, winner twice.

Demaret made it six out of seven for the dark horses yesterday by winning the playoff with Tony Penna for the Western Open championship.

It will be argued that these winter tournaments mean nothing, and from the big championship angle that is true, but the fact remains that a dollar won in the Oakland or Phoenix Open has a fine value the same as a dollar won in the Metro Open on the National Open, and we always had the quaint idea that the pros were playing for the money there was in it.

At any rate, the winter tournament showing will give Mr. Fan a fair idea of which golfers will bear watching when the summer events roll around.

Navy's Basketball Team Scores over Gettysburg Quint

Midshipmen Paced To Win by Unheralded Rookie

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Navy's basketball team, loser of 10 of its first 11 games this season, snapped out of a two-months depression today and defeated Gettysburg College, 37-21.

The Middies took the lead in the opening minute when Captain Mike Hanley canned two points on fouls and never fell behind, although the visitors from Gettysburg, Pa., knotted the count at 3-3 and 5-5.

Late in the first half Navy spurted from 9-6 to 18-6, while Gettysburg's scoring was confined almost entirely to foul pitches. Navy led at the intermission, 20-9.

Walt Shaffer, an unheralded Midshipman reserve, sparked the Navy victory and took high scoring honors with 10 points. He snatched the ball away from Gettysburg repeatedly and three times dribbled the length of the undefended floor to can setups after interceptions.

A capacity crowd saw the holiday game.

Navy's only other victory this season was against the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

Amato had high set for three games with 557 and also had high single game with 237. Bill Crane captured some glory for the Diamonds when he rolled 1,033 for the six games, four more than Amato. Stakem had third-best six-game total with 1,014. The summaries:

New Orleans Open Golf Tournament Will Start Today

Nation's Pro Brigade Out To Stop Demaret's Splurge

New Orleans, Feb. 22 (AP) — The nation's professional golfing brigade, hopeful of stopping the sensational streak of Jimmy Demaret and of sharing in the $10,000 purse put up by Mayor Robert S. Maestri, starts tramping City Park's long course tomorrow in the third annual New Orleans open.

The Houston, Tex., pro, who has won three of the seven tourneys on the winter circuit, leads the money winners with $3,350 and will get a virtual stranglehold on the purse department if he snares the $2,000 first prize here. He also would be hard to overtake in the Vardon trophy competition if he should add the winner's 45 points to his present leading 126.

Demaret, who arrived today from his playoff Western Open victory in his home town, passed off the congratulations of his fellow pros with a modest, "you just have to be lucky."

Picard Not Defending

Concensus of the leading players was that 282 would win the four-day meet. Last year's 284 by Henry Picard is the meet record. Picard is not defending his title, because of illness in his family.

The competitors looked forward to playing under ideal conditions for the first time in the winter swing. A cloudless sky was a welcome relief after 14 consecutive days of rainy, windy weather.

Late today entries for the tourney had reached 160. At least twenty more were expected before tomorrow.

Making his 1940 debut was the great veteran Gene Sarazen, the Connecticut farmer who said he "couldn't resist" the impulse to play here although he was virtually retired from competitive golf.

Middie Wrestlers Win over Harvard

Annapolis, Feb. 22 (AP) — Navy's wrestlers swarmed all over the Harvard University grapplers in seven out of eight bouts today for a 23-5 victory.

The Midshipmen took one fall and six decisions, with the 165-pound bout going into extra periods before Dick King bested Harvard's captain, Bill Daughaday. Daughaday, who was undefeated this year, wrestled on even terms with King through the regular nine-minute bout, each man getting two takedowns and switching out once.

In the first two-minute extra period, Daughaday came out from under but King switched back to topside. King took the edge in the last period.

Harvard's lone score came when Bruce Richardson threw Clay Mitchell, Navy's reserve 145-pounder. Jake Neimark got Navy's only fall when he threw Lew Dailey in 8 minutes, 33 seconds with a reverse arm lock and half nelson.

Boosters Night at Fort Hill High Is On Tap

Allegany High To Play at Piedmont in Return Tilt

Cumberland's two top flight public high school teams take another step to the end of the season's trail tonight when Fort Hill meets Handley High of Winchester on the Sentinel court here at 8 o'clock, and Allegany goes to Piedmont for a return game with Coach Casey's high school aggregation.

It will be "Boosters Night" at Fort Hill and the affair will offer the unusual attraction of the faculty teams of Fort Hill and Allegany High in action in the preliminary at 7 o'clock.

Tonight's clash with Handley will be the final home showing for Fort Hill and the Sentinels will be favored to win since they trounced the Virginians at Winchester 53-25.

After tonight's skirmish, the Sentinels' remaining game will be a CVAL affair at Hagerstown. Martinsburg's Bulldogs copped the CVAL title while Fort Hill and Hagerstown are waging a battle for second place.

Fort Hill's faculty won 12 of 13 games this season. Members of the squad include Johnny Long, Leon Dissinger, James Gomer, Jud Lonnholm, Boston Sherwood, Harold Horn, Fred Burton, Paul Footen, Ken Mowen and "Bobby" Cavanaugh.

Allegany turned back Piedmont at Campobello 42-27 but the Caseymen have come a long way since that contest and may give the West Siders some trouble. The Campers will be seeking their tenth straight victory over a scholastic foe.

Conference Games Carded

In the Potomac Valley Conference games tonight, Moorefield will play at Ridgeley and Petersburg will Journey to Parsons.

The remainder of tonight's card is Beall at Oakland, Elk Garden at Grantsville, Romney at Berkeley Springs, St. Peter's at Paw Paw, Hagerstown at Martinsburg in a CVAL contest and West Liberty at Potomac State.

Tomorrow night, Parsons and Keyser will meet in a conference tussle at Keyser, Franklin will go to Circleville for another conference test and Frostburg State's Mountaineers will journey to Washington, D. C., to oppose Gallaudet.

W. Va. Intercollegiate Tourney Draw on Sunday

Buckhannon, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Director C. B. "Cebe" Ross, coach at West Virginia Wesleyan College, announced today that drawings for the annual West Virginia intercollegiate basketball tournament would take place this Sunday.

The tournament is scheduled for the Wesleyan gymnasium, March 11-12.

Fourteen colleges make up the conference, but Ross conceded that not all these would participate. Entries will be disclosed at the drawing.

The tournaments were instituted five years ago, at Fairmont, which acted as host for two years, after which they were transferred to Clarksburg. Buckhannon hereafter is expected to be the permanent site for the competition.

The Alderson Broaddus battlers are defending champions.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Ryder Cup golfers as a whole have finished dragging their wails behind them in the tournaments this year, and so far as general performance goes are about in a tie with Gene Sarazen's rebuttal team, which also has been shooting blanks.

With the exception of Byron Nelson's victory in the Texas Open, first honors in the seven tournaments to date have gone to a lot of guys named Ed, Jimmy or Lawson, who were rated just social climbers when the Ryder committee and Sarazen made up their golf social registers.

The fact that the tail is wagging the dog, however, cannot be taken as proof that the Ryder Committee or Sarazen couldn't pick an apple out of a barrel, much less a golf team. The choices were made on past performance, and should not be confused with a vote of high school seniors on the boys most likely to succeed, with the choices likely as not winding up polishing the brass doorknobs for the class nitwit.

The Ryder team is made up of Nelson, Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead, Henry Picard, Dick Metz, Jimmy Hines, Paul Runyan, Jug McSpaden, Horton Smith and Vic Ghezzi.

Sarazen's team, which he claims could take the official team apart, in addition to Sarazen is made up of Craid Wood, Denny Shute, Johnny Revolta, Jimmy Thomson, Harry Cooper, Tommy Armour, E. J. Harrison, Ed Dudley and Ben Hogan.

Some of these players, including Picard, and Sarazen himself, have not competed, but those who have have been watching a bunch of outsiders, including Ed Oliver, Lloyd Mangrum, Clayton Heafner, Jimmy Demaret, Tony Penna, Lawson Little, Willie Goggin and Sam Byrd getting the gravy while it's hot. Chiefly Jimmy Demaret, who won three events, and Oliver, winner twice.

Demaret made it six out of seven for the dark horses yesterday by winning the playoff with Tony Penna for the Western Open championship.

It will be argued that these winter tournaments mean nothing, and from the big championship angle that is true, but the fact remains that a dollar won in the Oakland or Phoenix Open has a fine value the same as a dollar won in the Metro Open on the National Open, and we always had the quaint idea that the pros were playing for the money there was in it.

At any rate, the winter tournament showing will give Mr. Fan a fair idea of which golfers will bear watching when the summer events roll around.

Midshipmen Paced To Win by Unheralded Rookie

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 (AP) — Navy's basketball team, loser of 10 of its first 11 games this season, snapped out of a two-months depression today and defeated Gettysburg College, 37-21.

The Middies took the lead in the opening minute when Captain Mike Hanley canned two points on fouls and never fell behind, although the visitors from Gettysburg, Pa., knotted the count at 3-3 and 5-5.

Late in the first half Navy spurted from 9-6 to 18-6, while Gettysburg's scoring was confined almost entirely to foul pitches. Navy led at the intermission, 20-9.

Walt Shaffer, an unheralded Midshipman reserve, sparked the Navy victory and took high scoring honors with 10 points. He snatched the ball away from Gettysburg repeatedly and three times dribbled the length of the undefended floor to can setups after interceptions.

A capacity crowd saw the holiday game.

Navy's only other victory this season was against the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

New Orleans Open Golf Tournament Will Start Today

Nation's Pro Brigade Out To Stop Demaret's Splurge

New Orleans, Feb. 22 (AP) — The nation's professional golfing brigade, hopeful of stopping the sensational streak of Jimmy Demaret and of sharing in the $10,000 purse put up by Mayor Robert S. Maestri, starts tramping City Park's long course tomorrow in the third annual New Orleans open.

The Houston, Tex., pro, who has won three of the seven tourneys on the winter circuit, leads the money winners with $3,350 and will get a virtual stranglehold on the purse department if he snares the $2,000 first prize here. He also would be hard to overtake in the Vardon trophy competition if he should add the winner's 45 points to his present leading 126.

Demaret, who arrived today from his playoff Western Open victory in his home town, passed off the congratulations of his fellow pros with a modest, "you just have to be lucky."

Picard Not Defending

Concensus of the leading players was that 282 would win the four-day meet. Last year's 284 by Henry Picard is the meet record. Picard is not defending his title, because of illness in his family.

The competitors looked forward to playing under ideal conditions for the first time in the winter swing. A cloudless sky was a welcome relief after 14 consecutive days of rainy, windy weather.

Late today entries for the tourney had reached 160. At least twenty more were expected before tomorrow.

Making his 1940 debut was the great veteran Gene Sarazen, the Connecticut farmer who said he "couldn't resist" the impulse to play here although he was virtually retired from competitive golf.

Dye Lab duxmen took five of six games from Shipping in Celanese East Side League rolling at the Club this week to move into first place by a three-game margin. The former leaders dropped a regularly scheduled match 3-0 and then lost a postponed affair 2-1.

Shipping scattered more sticks than Dye Lab in the postponed engagement, but copped only the first game. B. Warner, Hoenicka, Sapp, Nave and Williams turned in the high scores of the two matches.

Mattingly blasted 504 pins for Main Lab in this week's other match but Warehouse bagged game and set team laurels with 739 and 2,069 counts to win 2-1. The scores:

Middie Wrestlers Win over Harvard

Annapolis, Feb. 22 (AP) — Navy's wrestlers swarmed all over the Harvard University grapplers in seven out of eight bouts today for a 23-5 victory.

The Midshipmen took one fall and six decisions, with the 165-pound bout going into extra periods before Dick King bested Harvard's captain, Bill Daughaday. Daughaday, who was undefeated this year, wrestled on even terms with King through the regular nine-minute bout, each man getting two takedowns and switching out once.

In the first two-minute extra period, Daughaday came out from under but King switched back to topside. King took the edge in the last period.

Harvard's lone score came when Bruce Richardson threw Clay Mitchell, Navy's reserve 145-pounder. Jake Neimark got Navy's only fall when he threw Lew Dailey in 8 minutes, 33 seconds with a reverse arm lock and half nelson.

This Year's Holdout Crop Lacks "Color"

Shade of Ruth and Other Old Timers Recalled by Quiet

Only 'Dizzy' Dean Is Making Any Noise and He Is Not Loud

Luke Appling's Surprise Signing May Be "Tip-Off"

Chicago, Feb. 22 (AP) — Shades of Ruth, DiMaggio and Mungo — where are those noisy holdouts of yesteryear?

Perhaps Ol' Diz Dean is a little lonesome as he "sets" down on his Texas farm awaiting a $5,000 message from the Chicago Cubs. Maybe he's wondering what's happened to that old holdout guard of which he appears to be a lone but still embattled member. What has happened to those rousing salary squabbles that once echoed from coast to coast this time of the year?

Ol' Diz isn't going down without a fight, he'll let you know, even if he hasn't any company. "I'll starve before I sign for a paltry $10,000," he yells at Cub owner P. K. Wrigley in typical Dean voice. "I'm a-building a house on my farm and I'll set in it all summer before I take a cut of $10,000."

The Rest Are Quiet

But Jerome Herman isn't getting much assistance. Outside of Dizzy, this spring hasn't produced another No. 1 noisy, colorful, headline-making holdout squawk. Sure, there are a lot of ball players seeking more money, but their technique drips with dignity.

Mel Ott of New York's Giants? He's too bashful. Even if he has to go without cavier he'll not be a big-mouth. Lee Handley of Pittsburgh? He is carrying on very calm and collected "negotiations." Clint Brown of the Chicago White Sox, who wants more money after a season in which he appeared as a relief pitcher in 63 games? Why, he hasn't heard from the club in a month, doesn't know if he has a job and still hasn't even once been heard to yell "robber."

Few Good Ones Recently

Babe Ruth's fights with the late Jacob Ruppert were annual classics. Joe DiMaggio, in 1938, staged a rip-snorting holdout from Jan. 2 to April 20, finally signing for $25,000 and subsequently getting roundly booed by New York Yankee fans. Van Lingle Mungo last year accepted a $5,000 cut from Brooklyn—but not until he'd engaged in a wordy battle with Larry MacPhail.

Maybe the tipoff on this season's lack of sound effects was the case of Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox shortstop who for nine years was the undisputed White Sox salary squawker champ. Luke whipped his signed contract in a month ago — and the Sox office employes still are shaking their heads and muttering "It ain't so."

THEY WANT MORE DOUGH

John Allen Indians

Dizzy Dean Cubs

Mel Ott Giants

Holdout time is here again with nearly 100 major league baseball players singing "We want more dough!" Heading the list is Dizzy Dean of the Cubs who is more or less familiar with this sort of thing. Diz received $20,000 last year; he is said to have been offered $10,000. He wants $15,000. A few of the others are pictured. Ott, reportedly paid $20,000 in 1939, is said to have been asked to take a cut. Allen is disputing a bonus contract.

"Dizzy" Dean Says He's Ready To Quit Diamond for Farm

Lame Cub Pitcher May Take Farm Seriously If Cubs Hold Out

Dallas, Feb. 22 (AP)—Ole Diz Dean, the man of a few thousand words, boiled down his annual holdout skit to blunt comment today:

"I won't sign for no $10,000."

Frankly, the lame Chicago Cub pitcher is vexed about the whole thing and may take his new role of gentleman farmer a little more seriously than he thought when he purchased a few acres of black land on the outskirts of Dallas several weeks ago.

"Guess I'll just get my farm ready and sit there all summer," remarked Mr. Dean after once again going over the details of owner Phil K. Wrigley's $10,000 offer and player D. Dean's refusal to sign for anything less than $15,000.

Does Not Want to Quit

The Great Dean, browsing around his several acres, first milking Betsy, a mild old cow ,then chasing down seven squealing pigs which his wife, Pat, gave him, burst out with:

"Naw, I don't want to quit baseball, but I've got will power them other players haven't. When I set my mind and know what I want, I stick to it.

"I worked out a little up at my Mississipi baseball school. I ran quite a good deal and exercised my arm. Felt pretty frisky.

"I feel like if I could get together with Mr. Wrigley I would go good this season."

Diz, deep in the problems of plowing under several acres of crops in accordance with government programs and installing a water tower "over there on the side of the hill," seemed far more worried about getting construction under way on his farm house than anything else.

Perks Up at Camp Talk

But he perked up and started asking questions when informed that the Cubs, minus only the Great Dean, had shoved off for their Santa Catalina Island training base today.

"Say, tell me, what did that story say? So training has started, has it?"

Regardless of what happens in the next few days, Dean is going right ahead with his farm plans.

"Whether I play baseball or not—and I won't unless I get what I want—I'm gonna have a good farm. 'Spect I'll build about a $12,000 or $15,000 home out here and fix it up real nice."

Coach Better Than Pupils

Annapolis, Md. (CP)—Ray Swartz, naval academy wrestling coach, is so good a grappler that he has never found a pupil among the midshipmen huskies able to throw him.

Potomac State To Play West Liberty At Keyser Tonight

Visitors Improved Since Losing to "Cats" Recently

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 22—Coach Dana "Hores" Lough's Potomac State Catamounts will meet the West Liberty Hilltoppers tomorrow night at 8:15 in the college gym here. There will be a preliminary game at 7 o'clock.

The Catamounts played the Joe Bartell-coached five early in the season, and won a 52-43 count over them at West Liberty. Since then the northern panhandle team has been improving very rapidly, and should give the Cats a stiff battle tomorrow night. The Hilltoppers held the Glenville Pioneers to a six-point margin, and the Battlers from Alderson-Broaddus, conquerors of Potomac State on two occasions, had to go into an extra period to win over the West Liberty five.

The Loughmen will be handicapped considerably tomorrow because Dewey Hawkins, a regular guard, will be out of the starting lineup because of a very painful leg injury received at Philippi last Monday against the Broaddus quint. Ingram, a freshman, will probably be called upon to fill Hawkin's place against the invaders. Bill Starford, Jack Tabscott, and Jack Gillooly will be in the front ranks for the Catamounts and Bob Harmon will be assisting Ingram at the guard positions.

Thus far this season the local team has won seven and lost nine games. In the win and loss column of the West Virginia Conference the Cats have gained three victories and four defeats.

Other teams remaining on the Catamount home schedule are Waynesburg, Shepherd, and Shenandoah.

Trozzo League

Sweep victories featured this week's Trozzo League matches at the Savoy, the Errors winning over the Walks, Balks bowing to Assists and the Outs scoring over the Hits. Adam Sterne of the Assists was the evening's high scorer with a 486 mark. Sammy DeLuca, Out kegler, sickled 480 maples to take runnerup honors. The summaries:

Smith Expected To Build Great Team at Loyola

Clipper Will Receive Ten a Season at West Coast School

By LAWRENCE PERRY

New York, Feb. 22 (C.N.F.) — Clipper Smith's welcome to the west coast has been spontaneous. Mike Pecarovich's departure from Loyola University (Los Angeles) was brought about rather suddenly and, as it appears, with not a great deal of consideration for a fine coach who did the best he could with material available. But this is not held against the Clipper who, of course, had nothing to do with whatever led to Mike's resignation.

The Clipper's job is rather a strange one. He is to get $10,000 a year for three years at least. The institution which employes him has 600 students and plays in the Gilmore Stadium, capacity 18,500 with ticket prices lower than is charged by the great Southern California universities.

Just how all this will add up is impossible for an outsider to determine. Maybe Smith will be looked to for supplementary duties as a magician. Still and all, Loyola paid Tom Lieb $90,000 for his nine years of service. He did well with what material he had and Pecarovich might have done better with his better material had not an infantile paralysis epidemic broken up his squad and stopped practice in midseason.

Clipper Smith's long association with football, following graduation from Notre Dame—Columbia Prep in Portland, Ore., Gonzaga and Santa Clara—established his reputation as a splendid gridiron instructor as a man of character and principle. His job will be to develop Loyola football to a parity with Santa Clara and St. Mary's—if possible. To this end no doubt he will encounter more favorable conditions than Pecarovich enjoyed, or Tom Lieb, either, for that matter.

Villanova A Disappointment

Clipper migrated from Santa Clara to Villanova with great expectations and so far as the quality of material was concerned he was not disappointed. Trouble was that the University of Pennsylvania has the strongest sort of a hold upon the affection and esteem of the great mass of intercollegiate football devotees in Philadelphia and vicinity. When the Quakers are strong, or even fairly strong, neighboring institutions suffer. Villanova with small attendances even at feature games did suffer and Temple did, too. Also, there is Bert Bell's Philadelphia Eagles to take care of floating patronage.

No matter how strongly a desire for major football may pervade an institution enthusiasm wanes when financial returns are not commensurate with the proficiency of its teams. At the same time there is a growing tendency in the east against catering to the ambitions of up-and-coming football systems. Last fall, for instance, the Wildcats had to draw quite widely for their opposition — South Carolina, Texas A. and M., Arkansas, Detroit and Auburn, Muhlenberg, Temple and Manhattan were the best Villanova could do in its own section. That was not so good and besides, the present administration at Villanova has begun to develop a preference for intramural sports. So the Clipper quite openly was ready for a change. At one time it seemed he would go to Boston College, then to Rice. Now at Loyola he is back in his native habitat and he will be heard from.

Backfield Battle In Prospect

They say that a greater back than Tommy Harmon will enroll at Michigan next fall. Gossip is he would be there now were it not for the fact that the Wolverine is overloaded with ball carriers. Which recalls the fact that next fall when Minnesota and Michigan meet at Minneapolis two of the nation's great backfields will collide, viz, Harmon, Evashevski, Westfall and Kromer of Ann Arbor versus Franck, Smith, Mernik and Sweiger of the Gophers.

A rather interesting bit of gossip in the middle-west relates to a track luminary in a Big Ten institution whose scholastic career was financed upon the following understanding: If he made the 1940 Olympic team he would not have to repay the sum laid out on his education. If he failed he would reimburse his benefactor. As the situation stands he would surely have made the international team had not the Olympics been called off. But the games are out and so what about the athlete? Too bad it is not a case in which Major Griffith's judiciary wisdom can be employed.

The new recordholder's set was the result of 219, 152 and 144 games and replaced the 463 record posted last week by Vern Hipsley. Her first game, incidentally, was only one pin under Nell Nichols' 220 record.

The Spades gained a third place tie with the Hearts by defeating that outfit 2-1 in the other match. The Diamonds carried off game and set team honors for the week with 729 and 1,987 counts. The summaries:

This Year's Holdout Crop Lacks "Color"

Luke Appling's Surprise Signing May Be "Tip-Off"

Chicago, Feb. 22 (AP) — Shades of Ruth, DiMaggio and Mungo — where are those noisy holdouts of yesteryear?

Perhaps Ol' Diz Dean is a little lonesome as he "sets" down on his Texas farm awaiting a $5,000 message from the Chicago Cubs. Maybe he's wondering what's happened to that old holdout guard of which he appears to be a lone but still embattled member. What has happened to those rousing salary squabbles that once echoed from coast to coast this time of the year?

Ol' Diz isn't going down without a fight, he'll let you know, even if he hasn't any company. "I'll starve before I sign for a paltry $10,000," he yells at Cub owner P. K. Wrigley in typical Dean voice. "I'm a-building a house on my farm and I'll set in it all summer before I take a cut of $10,000."

The Rest Are Quiet

But Jerome Herman isn't getting much assistance. Outside of Dizzy, this spring hasn't produced another No. 1 noisy, colorful, headline-making holdout squawk. Sure, there are a lot of ball players seeking more money, but their technique drips with dignity.

Mel Ott of New York's Giants? He's too bashful. Even if he has to go without cavier he'll not be a big-mouth. Lee Handley of Pittsburgh? He is carrying on very calm and collected "negotiations." Clint Brown of the Chicago White Sox, who wants more money after a season in which he appeared as a relief pitcher in 63 games? Why, he hasn't heard from the club in a month, doesn't know if he has a job and still hasn't even once been heard to yell "robber."

Few Good Ones Recently

Babe Ruth's fights with the late Jacob Ruppert were annual classics. Joe DiMaggio, in 1938, staged a rip-snorting holdout from Jan. 2 to April 20, finally signing for $25,000 and subsequently getting roundly booed by New York Yankee fans. Van Lingle Mungo last year accepted a $5,000 cut from Brooklyn—but not until he'd engaged in a wordy battle with Larry MacPhail.

Maybe the tipoff on this season's lack of sound effects was the case of Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox shortstop who for nine years was the undisputed White Sox salary squawker champ. Luke whipped his signed contract in a month ago — and the Sox office employes still are shaking their heads and muttering "It ain't so."

THEY WANT MORE DOUGH

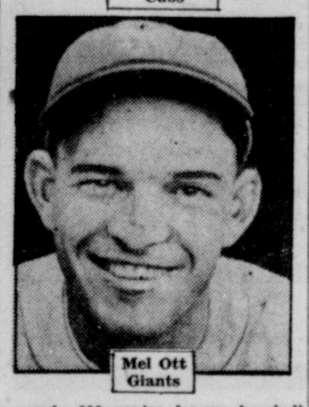
Dizzy Dean Cubs



Mel Ott Giants

Holdout time is here again with nearly 100 major league baseball players singing "We want more dough!" Heading the list is Dizzy Dean of the Cubs who is more or less familiar with this sort of thing. Diz received $20,000 last year; he is said to have been offered $10,000. He wants $15,000. A few of the others are pictured. Ott, reportedly paid $20,000 in 1939, is said to have been asked to take a cut. Allen is disputing a bonus contract.

"Dizzy" Dean Says He's Ready To Quit Diamond for Farm

Lame Cub Pitcher May Take Farm Seriously If Cubs Hold Out

Dallas, Feb. 22 (AP)—Ole Diz Dean, the man of a few thousand words, boiled down his annual holdout skit to blunt comment today:

"I won't sign for no $10,000."

Frankly, the lame Chicago Cub pitcher is vexed about the whole thing and may take his new role of gentleman farmer a little more seriously than he thought when he purchased a few acres of black land on the outskirts of Dallas several weeks ago.

"Guess I'll just get my farm ready and sit there all summer," remarked Mr. Dean after once again going over the details of owner Phil K. Wrigley's $10,000 offer and player D. Dean's refusal to sign for anything less than $15,000.

Does Not Want to Quit

The Great Dean, browsing around his several acres, first milking Betsy, a mild old cow ,then chasing down seven squealing pigs which his wife, Pat, gave him, burst out with:

"Naw, I don't want to quit baseball, but I've got will power them other players haven't. When I set my mind and know what I want, I stick to it.

"I worked out a little up at my Mississipi baseball school. I ran quite a good deal and exercised my arm. Felt pretty frisky.

"I feel like if I could get together with Mr. Wrigley I would go good this season."

Diz, deep in the problems of plowing under several acres of crops in accordance with government programs and installing a water tower "over there on the side of the hill," seemed far more worried about getting construction under way on his farm house than anything else.

Perks Up at Camp Talk

But he perked up and started asking questions when informed that the Cubs, minus only the Great Dean, had shoved off for their Santa Catalina Island training base today.

"Say, tell me, what did that story say? So training has started, has it?"

Regardless of what happens in the next few days, Dean is going right ahead with his farm plans.

"Whether I play baseball or not—and I won't unless I get what I want—I'm gonna have a good farm. 'Spect I'll build about a $12,000 or $15,000 home out here and fix it up real nice."

Potomac State To Play West Liberty At Keyser Tonight

Visitors Improved Since Losing to "Cats" Recently

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 22—Coach Dana "Hores" Lough's Potomac State Catamounts will meet the West Liberty Hilltoppers tomorrow night at 8:15 in the college gym here. There will be a preliminary game at 7 o'clock.

The Catamounts played the Joe Bartell-coached five early in the season, and won a 52-43 count over them at West Liberty. Since then the northern panhandle team has been improving very rapidly, and should give the Cats a stiff battle tomorrow night. The Hilltoppers held the Glenville Pioneers to a six-point margin, and the Battlers from Alderson-Broaddus, conquerors of Potomac State on two occasions, had to go into an extra period to win over the West Liberty five.

The Loughmen will be handicapped considerably tomorrow because Dewey Hawkins, a regular guard, will be out of the starting lineup because of a very painful leg injury received at Philippi last Monday against the Broaddus quint. Ingram, a freshman, will probably be called upon to fill Hawkin's place against the invaders. Bill Starford, Jack Tabscott, and Jack Gillooly will be in the front ranks for the Catamounts and Bob Harmon will be assisting Ingram at the guard positions.

Thus far this season the local team has won seven and lost nine games. In the win and loss column of the West Virginia Conference the Cats have gained three victories and four defeats.

Other teams remaining on the Catamount home schedule are Waynesburg, Shepherd, and Shenandoah.

Smith Expected To Build Great Team at Loyola

Clipper Will Receive Ten a Season at West Coast School

By LAWRENCE PERRY

New York, Feb. 22 (C.N.F.) — Clipper Smith's welcome to the west coast has been spontaneous. Mike Pecarovich's departure from Loyola University (Los Angeles) was brought about rather suddenly and as it appears, with not a great deal of consideration for a fine coach who did the best he could with material available. But this is not held against the Clipper who, of course, had nothing to do with whatever led to Mike's resignation.

The Clipper's job is rather a strange one. He is to get $10,000 a year for three years at least. The institution which employes him has 600 students and plays in the Gilmore Stadium, capacity 18,500 with ticket prices lower than is charged by the great Southern California universities.

Just how all this will add up is impossible for an outsider to determine. Maybe Smith will be looked to for supplementary duties as a magician. Still and all, Loyola paid Tom Lieb $90,000 for his nine years of service. He did well with what material he had and Pecarovich might have done better with his better material had not an infantile paralysis epidemic broken up his squad and stopped practice in midseason.

Clipper Smith's long association with football, following graduation from Notre Dame—Columbia Prep in Portland, Ore., Gonzaga and Santa Clara—established his reputation as a splendid gridiron instructor as a man of character and principle. His job will be to develop Loyola football to a parity with Santa Clara and St. Mary's—if possible. To this end no doubt he will encounter more favorable conditions than Pecarovich enjoyed, or Tom Lieb, either, for that matter.

Villanova A Disappointment

Clipper migrated from Santa Clara to Villanova with great expectations and so far as the quality of material was concerned he was not disappointed. Trouble was that the University of Pennsylvania has the strongest sort of a hold upon the affection and esteem of the great mass of intercollegiate football devotees in Philadelphia and vicinity. When the Quakers are strong, or even fairly strong, neighboring institutions suffer. Villanova with small attendances even at feature games did suffer and Temple did, too. Also, there is Bert Bell's Philadelphia Eagles to take care of floating patronage.

No matter how strongly a desire for major football may pervade an institution enthusiasm wanes when financial returns are not commensurate with the proficiency of its teams. At the same time there is a growing tendency in the east against catering to the ambitions of up-and-coming football systems. Last fall, for instance, the Wildcats had to draw quite widely for their opposition — South Carolina, Texas A. and M., Arkansas, Detroit and Auburn, Muhlenberg, Temple and Manhattan were the best Villanova could do in its own section. That was not so good and besides, the present administration at Villanova has begun to develop a preference for intramural sports. So the Clipper quite openly was ready for a change. At one time it seemed he would go to Boston College, then to Rice. Now at Loyola he is back in his native habitat and he will be heard from.

Backfield Battle In Prospect

They say that a greater back than Tommy Harmon will enroll at Michigan next fall. Gossip is he would be there now were it not for the fact that the Wolverine is overloaded with ball carriers. Which recalls the fact that next fall when Minnesota and Michigan meet at Minneapolis two of the nation's great backfields will collide, viz, Harmon, Evashevski, Westfall and Kromer of Ann Arbor versus Franck, Smith, Mernik and Sweiger of the Gophers.

A rather interesting bit of gossip in the middle-west relates to a track luminary in a Big Ten institution whose scholastic career was financed upon the following understanding: If he made the 1940 Olympic team he would not have to repay the sum laid out on his education. If he failed he would reimburse his benefactor. As the situation stands he would surely have made the international team had not the Olympics been called off. But the games are out and so what about the athlete? Too bad it is not a case in which Major Griffith's judiciary wisdom can be employed.

Might Be Good Idea

Trenton, N. J., (CP)—Abe Green, New Jersey boxing commissioner, is contemplating a plan whereby boxers would be forced to undergo mental as well as physical tests before being permitted to show their wares in that state's fight cards.

The new recordholder's set was the result of 219, 152 and 144 games and replaced the 463 record posted last week by Vern Hipsley. Her first game, incidentally, was only one pin under Nell Nichols' 220 record.

The Spades gained a third place tie with the Hearts by defeating that outfit 2-1 in the other match. The Diamonds carried off game and set team honors for the week with 729 and 1,987 counts. The summaries:

Center of U. S. Population Is Moving Westward

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 21 (AP)—The 1940 census is expected to show that the center of U. S. population has moved still farther westward from where it was in West Virginia in 1840.

And probably, F. Robert Hawk said, it still is following the almost straight east-west line which started from a point twenty-three miles east of Baltimore in 1790.

Not since the first census, said Hawk, has the center of population varied more than 21.4 miles, north and south.

Center In Indiana

In 1930, the center was 2.9 miles northeast of Linton, Green county, Ind., and by now it probably has moved on westward, slightly.

Back in 1840 though—and in 1820, 1830 and 1850—the center was in western Virginia, now West Virginia.

Hawk, assistant director of the Central West Virginia automobile club who went into a lot of research on census findings, said the exact "center" of 100 years ago would be 500 feet east of the west fork of Bridge run, two miles north of Lorentz, Upshur county; nineteen miles south of Clarksburg and nine miles east of Weston.

Hawk would like to see a marker there. He said: "By marking spots which have historical value we can make West Virginia more attractive to tourists.

May Erect Tablet

"If the state can effect a tablet there, officials or clubs at Clarksburg, Weston, Buckhannon and others can post signs directing attention to the spot."

By 1800 the center had moved westward of Baltimore by eighteen miles and in 1810 was forty miles northwest by west of Washington, D. C. in Virginia.

In 1820 the population center was sixteen miles east of Moorefield, W. Va., and in 1830 shifted over to nineteen miles west-southwest from Moorefield.

Hitting near Clarksburg in 1840, it stopped twenty-three miles southeast of Parkersburg in 1850.

By 1860, the center was twenty miles south by east of Chillicothe.

Finns Doomed Unless They Get Lots More Help, Experts Fear

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer and Veteran Observer of Military Affairs

Washington—Spring thaws would help the Finns, but several military experts here believe the Finns' plight will be well nigh hopeless before spring arrives.

These observers give the Finns less than a 50-50 chance to prevent decisive Russian gains before melting snows and frost turn the Karelian battle fields into a bog.

As long as the Russian artillery continues to get ammunition, their tremendous reservoir of manpower will enable the Reds to keep surging onward even if they have to advance over a carpet of their own dead. Step by step, the outnumbered and weary Finns will be driven back.

Fairly Conclusive

The situation is somewhat similar to a football game between a university that can put four or five fresh teams on the field and one with only 11 "iron men" who, although they put up a better than even battle in the first half are worn down in the second.

When a nation orders up men of 43 to 44 years, as Finland has, it is fairly conclusive evidence the backs-to-the-wall stage has arrived.

The Russians' incessant pounding seems to indicate they are trying to smash through, regardless of cost, before spring converts the ground into a quagmire.

Incidentally, military students recall that in the long history of "bad blood" between Russia and Finland, Russia has invaded Finland eight times and every one of these invasions has been launched in the winter. The Russian theory has been that the frozen ground and lakes afford better traction than the marshy soil and open waters of warmer weather.

Better Troops

Even if the Finns can hold out until the thaws come, experts figure they are likely to be defeated this spring or summer unless they get substantial aid. That means sizable contingents of fresh, well-trained troops; a large force of bombing and pursuit planes, and plenty of ammunition for the heavy artillery.

Driblets of unorganized volunteer units from other countries, even if they aggregated 30,000 to 40,000 men, would be of scant help in turning the tide against Russian superiority in numbers and equipment, military men say. The Red troops now blasting the Mannerheim line are rated as much better soldiers than those who made the earlier assaults.

What Finland needs in manpower is about 300,000 to 400,000 fresh, capably-commanded and well-drilled soldiers to replace the 200,000 to 300,000 Finns who have been fighting for three months with little rest.

Another Possibility

Bombing planes in large numbers would enable them to deliver smashing blows at enemy supply lines, service of supply being a traditional weakness of Russian armies. If the Finns had a few hundred first-class fighting planes, they could protect their own communication lines, munitions plants and industries from Russian bombers.

Unless the Finnis hair squadrons are greatly strengthened, the longer daylight and milder weather of spring will be a decided advantage of the huge Russian air force.

Another development that might save Finland would be a thrust by English-French forces, massed some 500,000 strong in the Near East, toward the Soviet oil fields in south Russia. That probably would necessitate the withdrawals of some of Russia's best troops from the Finnish front.

White-clad Finnish soldiers bringing in Russian prisoners. There are just so many Finns, but Russia's supply of soldiers seems unending.

New York City's first schoolmaster, Adam Roelandsen, was out of a job when all his children left school and he had to take in washing to make a living. In 1646 he was publicly flogged.

Japanese Settle Twenty-One More American Claims

Tokyo, Feb. 22 (AP)—The Japanese foreign office announces the settlement of twenty-one American claims for property damage and personal injuries in China.

A spokesman said that with seventy-three settlements recently announced in the Diet parliament by Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, "a total of ninety-four cases now has been settled."

New settlements included bombings of the Yunnan and Canton districts, in which "a considerable sum was paid in consolation" of personal injuries to Americans not identified by the foreign office; ten cases of damage to business property and churches; one shooting of an unidentified American; forced detention of another; and nine property damage cases resulting from occupation by Japanese.

Green Manure Crops Help Maryland Farms

College Park, Feb. 22—Through their cooperation in the AAA Farm Program, Maryland farmers in 1940 can continue to grow more green manure and cover crops to improve the fertility of their soil. This is a practice approved by the AAA for protecting the soil from erosion and building up its fertility. Under the 1938 AAA Farm Program, Maryland farmers planted 101,155 acres of green manure and cover crops. Under the 1937 program they planted 66,474 acres, and in 1936 32,738 acres. Allegany county plantings of green manure and cover crops in these 3 years were: 1938 740 acres; 1937 1,207 acres; 1936 565 acres. In 1939, the county AAA committee estimates that 1,352 acres of green manure crops were planted in this county.

Searchers Unable To Locate Old Silver Smelter

Treasure Is Supposed To Be Hidden in Nicholas or Webster

Richwood, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP) — Somewhere along the winding course of the Gauley river through the rugged hills of Nicholas and Webster counties is the ruin of an old silver smelter.

For more than a hundred years, organized parties and lone prospectors have been searching for the old smelting furnace, for according to fairly well authenticated legend there is buried treasure nearby.

Not only are fourteen kegs of silver dollars and crowns supposed to be hidden under a great tree, but "two horse loads of pure silver coined into money" are buried at a fork in the river, and in a neaby cavern are, or should be, 300 more silver dollars.

Written instructions for finding the treasure, handed down by a friend of one of the men who made and buried the money, are common property in Nicholas and Webster.

"Set your compass on left side of furnace under rock house, so due west fifty poles and you will find a large tree and a large limb growing and winding on the south side. Under this limb we buried fourteen kegs full of silver dollars and crowns. You will not miss finding this place if you find the furnace."

Furnace Not Located

So far no one has located the legendary furnace.

The story began in the Revolutionary war time, when William Swift returned to his home on the Kentucky frontier to find his wife and children slain and scalped by Indians.

Swift and neighbor, Thomas Jefferson, whose family had met a similar fate, started a private war of extermination on the redskins and followed a bloody trail up the Kanawha river and finally up the Gauley.

The pair, the story says, rescued Dave Monday from the Indians and he introduced them to his partner, known only as Ab.

Monday, an army deserter, had heard of a silver deposit in the hills and proposed to the others they locate a mine and coin money from dies and moulds in his possession.

It was purely by accident, the legend says, that the ore was found. The quartet was building a home in a cave when they came upon the ore bearing rock.

Primitive Tools Used

They built a crude furnace, mined the ore with primitive tools and refined the silver by crude makeshift methods. The bullion they moulded into dollars and crowns.

A Nicholas county man has a copy of what purports to be a contract made by the "Secret Miners and Moulders of Money.

It provides, among other things, that any three of the four would be a tribunal to control the actions of the fourth, and if that he should prove recalcitrant, he would be "hidden where none could find him" and his share divided among the others.

The tribunal would then consist of any two members, with the same provisions in respect to the third man. If but two men should remain, the tribunal was disbanded and "the stronger shall be the victor."

According to the document Bill Smith was manager, Tom Jefferson was counter and inspector, Dave Monday was selector of hiding places and Ab was the minter and moulder.

Buried the Money

When other white settlers built a fort on the Gauley the four buried all their money and scattered, hunting and trapping for a livelihood.

Dave Monday died first, of tuberculosis, according to the story, then Ab and later Tom Jefferson.

Back in Kentucky Bill Swift convinced a friend of the existence of the buried treasure and drew a map showing how to find the silver. The two set out together for the Gauley, but Swift went blind on the way. The friend left Swift and went on alone ,but never found the treasure trove.

The story is that some Webster county family has the map, but everybody knows the instructions as to how to find the silver.

There is nothing left to do but find the furnace.

Fliers Duck Out Of Trouble

Boulder, Colo. (AP)—Playing tag with ducks is part of the flying lesson for student pilots at Boulder airport.

"It's like a fullback dodging tacklers coming from all directions," they say, after a flight over nearby Valmont Lake, where thousands of ducks congregate in the winter.

A head-on collision with one of the birds, at seventy miles per hour, might be fatal, for fliers say a slight impact at the proper angle could rip the fabric from an airplane wing.

"So after we get through with a few flights dodging ducks right and left and up and down the ordinary cross country flying, with no ducks for hazards, is just as simple as making a touchdown on an empty gridiron," say the fliers.

Searchers Unable To Locate Old Silver Smelter

Treasure Is Supposed To Be Hidden in Nicholas or Webster

Richwood, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP) — Somewhere along the winding course of the Gauley river through the rugged hills of Nicholas and Webster counties is the ruin of an old silver smelter.

For more than a hundred years, organized parties and lone prospectors have been searching for the old smelting furnace, for according to fairly well authenticated legend there is buried treasure nearby.

Not only are fourteen kegs of silver dollars and crowns supposed to be hidden under a great tree, but two horse loads of pure silver coined into money" are buried at a fork in the river, and in a neaby cavern are, or should be, 300 more silver dollars.

Written instructions for finding the treasure, handed down by a friend of one of the men who made and buried the money, are common property in Nicholas and Webster.

"Set your compass on left side of furnace under rock house, so due west fifty poles and you will find a large tree and a large limb growing and winding on the south side. Under this limb we buried fourteen kegs full of silver dollars and crowns. You will not miss finding this place if you find the furnace."

Furnace Not Located

So far no one has located the legendary furnace.

The story began in the Revolutionary war time, when William Swift returned to his home on the Kentucky frontier to find his wife and children slain and scalped by Indians.

Swift and neighbor, Thomas Jefferson, whose family had met a similar fate, started a private war of extermination on the redskins and followed a bloody trail up the Kanawha river and finally up the Gauley.

The pair, the story says, rescued Dave Monday from the Indians and he introduced them to his partner, known only as Ab.

Monday, an army deserter, had heard of a silver deposit in the hills and proposed to the others they locate a mine and coin money from lies and moulds in his possession.

It was purely by accident, the legend says, that the ore was found. The quartet was building a home in a cave when they came upon the ore bearing rock.

Primitive Tools Used

They built a crude furnace, mined the ore with primitive tools and refined the silver by crude makeshift methods. The bullion they moulded into dollars and crowns.

A Nicholas county man has a copy of what purports to be a contract made by the "Secret Miners and Moulders of Money.

It provides, among other things, that any three of the four would be a tribunal to control the actions of the fourth, and if that he should prove recalcitrant, he would be "hidden where none could find him" and his share divided among the others. The tribunal would then consist of only two members, with the same provisions in respect to the third man. If but two men should remain, the tribunal was disbanded and "the stronger shall be the victor."

According to the document Bill Smith was manager, Tom Jefferson was counter and inspector, Dave Monday was selector of hiding places and Ab was the minter and moulder.

Buried the Money

When other white settlers built a fort on the Gauley the four buried all their money and scattered, hunting and trapping for a livelihood.

Dave Monday died first, of tuberculosis, according to the story, then Ab and later Tom Jefferson.

Back in Kentucky Bill Swift convinced a friend of the existence of the buried treasure and drew a map showing how to find the silver. The two set out together for the Gauley, but Swift went blind on the way. The friend left Swift and went on alone but never found the treasure trove.

The story is that some Webster county family has the map, but everybody knows the instructions as to how to find the silver.

There is nothing left to do but find the furnace.

Fliers Duck Out Of Trouble

Boulder, Colo. (AP)—Playing tag with ducks is part of the flying lesson for student pilots at Boulder airport.

"It's like a fullback dodging tacklers coming from all directions," they say, after a flight over nearby Valmont Lake, where thousands of ducks congregate in the winter.

A head-on collision with one of the birds, at seventy miles per hour, might be fatal, for fliers say a slight impact at the proper angle could rip the fabric from an airplane wing.

"So after we get through with a few flights dodging ducks right and left and up and down the ordinary cross country flying, with no ducks for hazards, is just as simple as making a touchdown on an empty gridiron," say the fliers.

The republic of Turkey, caught between the conflicting ambitions of the Allies and Russia—and Italy, too—may find itself forced to fight. In which case, the Turks will relie on a modernized army whose war strength is estimated at 2,000,000. Unlike the Turkish force which went to war in 1914 on the side of the Central Powers, the Turkish military establishment of today is a modernized, motorized force which compares favorably with that of other European powers of similar size. Above are four views showing the modern fighting force Turkey can place in the field today if war should become inevitable.

Henry Ford—He Put the World on Wheels

The story of the automotive industry is also the story of Henry Ford. Ford became the greatest producer of automobiles because he gave the world a motor car within the means of the average wage earner. His famous Model T made motorists of Hindu and Arab, Mongol and Indian. Intensely interested in world affairs, Ford attempted to bring about the end of the first World war by sending a boatload of intellectuals and pacifists to Europe aboard the chartered steamer, Oscar II. The move was a dismal failure. A leader in industrial progress, Ford was also an early advocate of temperance. His great hobby the collection of Americana, resulted in one of the most extensive private museums—Greenfield village—of its kind.

Picture of Zane Grey Story Is at the Strand

Out of the rich store of tales which Zane Grey wrote about the old west, Paramount has selected his "Knights of the Range" as a suitable vehicle for the talents of Russell "Lucky Hayden," Victor Jory, Jean Parker, J. Farrell MacDonald and Britt Wood. The picture opens today and also shows tomorrow at the Strand theater, and moviegoers will witness a rip-roaring tale of gunplay and romance, highlighted by thrilling chases, desperate encounters, gay fiestas and the singing and playing of Britt Wood and The King's Men.

As a variant from the usual thing, Lucky has been cast this time as an outlaw, a man who doesn't find himself until he falls in love with Jean Parker, a lovely headstrong girl. The story develops so that Lucky goes over to the side of the law, and has it out with the outlaws in a thrilling climax. Harry Sherman, producer of the "Hop-along Cassidy" films, produced the picture, with Lesley Selander directing it.

Like many of the country's most famous swing musicians who have catapaulted from the classics to jazz, Claude Hopkins, who brings his famous Harlem Swing Orchestra to the Strand tomorrow, started his study of music as a child in the best classical tradition. Graduating from high school, he became more keenly interested in the classics and continued his study of piano and harmony at the Washington, D. C., Conservatory of Music. After many years of extensive preparation with the works of Brahms and Beethoven as his guiding light, Hopkins became a jazz pianist in a small dance orchestra.

Five tuneful melodies were composed especially for "Shooting High," the colorful romance of the range, co-starring Jane Withers and Gene Autry, which Twentieth Century-Fox will present at the Strand, starting Sunday.

Jane and Gene sing two of these new songs together, while Jane has a rollicking number entitled "On the Rancho with My Pancho." Gene has two solos.

"Northwest Passage" Opens at Maryland

Wearing out green buckskin Ranger outfits so completely in two days that they were no longer fit for service is the record of Spencer Tracy, Robert Young and Walter Brennan. With arduous scenes requiring such mortality on outfits, it was small wonder that the wardrobe man on location in the forests and swamps of Idaho had his troubles during production of the Technicolor adventure film, "Northwest Passage," which opens today at the Maryland theater for an engagement of six days.

When the studio wardrobe department filled three over-sized box cars with outfits for the location sequences, it was assumed there would be plenty of costume changes for 240 Rangers, 200 British soldiers, 200 French soldiers, 200 oarsmen and 100 Indians. The first emergency arose for sox. The 700 taken along proved only a drop in the bucket. In the lakes, rivers, woods and swamps, a pair lasted an average of three days. Sox were rushed from the studio to fill the need.

Six wardrobe men and a wardrobe woman from the studio plus the studio tailor and five helpers hired in McCall, Idaho, found twenty-four hours a day but a short working shift when it came to keeping the Rangers alone in fair repair. King Vidor, directing, was assured of one thing, however. By the time he reached the sequence where the remnant of the Rangers finally reach Fort Wentworth, he knew that he could dress them in the strips and rags which the story required.

'Castle on Hudson' Is Feature at Liberty

The Liberty theater's 1940 hit parade begun with the comedy hit "Brother Rat and a Baby", and the "Fighting Sixty-ninth," continues tomorrow with "Castle on the Hudson," starring John Garfield, Ann Sheridan and Pat O'Brien.

Described as a tempestuous love story, "Castle on the Hudson" introduces Garfield and Miss Sheridan as a new romantic team.

The story is essentially one of life and love outside the barriers of the law, and of two lovers who defy the forces that strive to keep them apart. Both Garfield and Miss Sheridan have highly dramatic roles that give them both the opportunity to display their talents to the hilt. Pat O'Brien, cast as an idealistic reformer, is said to give one of his most serious performances.

Heading the supporting cast is Burgess Meredith, the stage star, who returns to the screen for the first time since he starred in "Winterset." He plays the role of an intellectual who has sunk to the lowest human depths, and advance reports on his work indicate that it is one of the highlights of the film.

Also included in the supporting cast are such well-known players as Jerome Cowan, John Litel, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Henry O'Neill, Margot Stevenson, Willard Robertson, Edward Pawley, Billy Wayne, Nedda Harrigan and many more.

Prize Fight and Adventure Films Are at Embassy

A rousing adventure film, with pleasant interlude of music, is Republic's "In Old Caliente," previewed today at the Embassy theater. Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, and George "Gabby" Hayes have the leading roles.

The time of the story is the 1850's, the place American California. Roy is seen as an employe of a wealthy landowner. A group of bandits hold up a caravan of gold shipment which Roy is in charge of, and suspicion falls on an American wagon train encamped nearby. The train is led by Scout George Hayes, an old friend of Roy's.

The two combine to clean up the gang, and furious action thrills fill the screen when the two pals set to work. Lovely Mary Hart, as usual, is the feminine inspiration of Roy's heroics.

The three leads—Rogers, Miss Hart and Hayes—turn in excellent performances. They are abetted by a fine cast, headed by Katherine De Mille, Jack La Rue, Frank Puglia, and Anna Demetrio.

Held over through tomorrow at the Embassy will be the Louis-Godoy fight films, fifteen rounds of action and thrills. Also on the same program will be another chapter of "Overland with Kit Carson."

Melody and Murder In Starrett Drama

In a role said to be ideally fitted to his two-fisted and hard-riding abilities as an outdoor action star, Charles Starrett returns to the Garden theater today in Columbia's "Riders of Black River," with lovely Iris Meredith as the romantic interest and the singing Sons of the Pioneers providing range tunes to augment the swiftly-paced narrative.

The hard-riding cowboy star's flying, fists, gun-slinging and daring courage, which have brought terror to numerous screen heavies, are called upon once more as he wages a single-handed battle against a band of rustlers who threaten the peace of a secluded valley and the happiness of its inhabitants.

Starrett plays the heroic role of an adventurous young cowboy who arrives at home, after serving with the Texas Ranger, just as his brother is murdered by a rustler gang which has been terrorizing the countryside.

Eddie Collins brings his very special brand of comedy into a quick lunch room in "Stop, Look and Love," the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, currently at the Garden theater. Eddie's lunchroom is the romantic spot where Jean Rogers and Robert Kellard, the sweethearts of the film, sit and sigh over a hamburger or two.

Fears of Smallpox Marking Dwindling

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 21 (AP) — Fears of the modern woman that smallpox — will mark her face are slight these days, and getting less year by year.

In West Virginia, at least, the one-time scourge has slipped in regard until the health department now terms it of "very little importance."

Officials have tagged it the "vanishing ailment."

Dr. A. M. Price, director of the division of communicable diseases, reports that there were twenty-six cases of smallpox in 1939, eighteen more than in 1938, but added this:

> "It is felt that many of these cases were chicken pox, erroneously diagnosed as smallpox."

The physician attributed the decline in the disease since its days of rampancy to "specific smallpox vaccine" — the kind every school child gets.

"NORTHWEST PASSAGE" NOW AT MARYLAND

$3000 Appropriated For Prosecution In Pilchard Slaying

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 22. (AP)—A special appropriation of $3,000 has been set aside by the Worcester county commissioners to pay the estimated prosecution costs in the slaying of Harvey Pilchard, sixty-one-year-old Stockton farmer.

This amount was earmarked out of a $7,500 total increase for law enforcement when the commissioners struck the 1940-1941 fiscal levy.

Charles L. Mason, board president, said the $7,500 was provided by increasing the sheriff's budget from $6,500 to $11,500 and increasing the constable's budget from $3,500 to $6,000.

The county tax rate was left at $1.25 on the $100; the same as in 1939.

Pilchard was slain and his wife wounded at their Stockton home Feb. 11. Five negroes are held at Bel Air, awaiting grand jury action. Two of them, women, were delivered from the Snow Hill jail last Tuesday night by a mob, taken to Stockton and later turned over to state police. The last of the five suspects was apprehended Friday.

"OOMPH" QUEEN

Ann Sheridan has her greatest dramatic opportunity to date in "Castles On The Hudson," in which she co-stars with John Garfield. The film has its first local showing at the Liberty theater tomorrow.

Picture of Zane Grey Story Is at the Strand

Out of the rich store of tales which Zane Grey wrote about the old west, Paramount has selected his "Knights of the Range" as a suitable vehicle for the talents of Russell "Lucky Hayden." Victor Jory, Jean Parker, J. Farrell MacDonald and Britt Wood. The picture opens today and also shows tomorrow at the Strand theater, and moviegoers will witness a riproaring tale of gunplay and romance, highlighted by thrilling chases, desperate encounters, gay fiestas and the singing and playing of Britt Wood and The King's Men.

As a variant from the usual thing, Lucky has been cast this time as an outlaw, a man who doesn't find himself until he falls in love with Jean Parker, a lovely headstrong girl. The story develops so that Lucky goes over to the side of the law, and has it out with the outlaws in a thrilling climax. Harry Sherman, producer of the "Hopalong Cassidy" films, produced the picture, with Lesley Selander directing it.

Like many of the country's most famous swing musicians who have catapaulted from the classics to jazz, Claude Hopkins, who brings his famous Harlem Swing Orchestra to the Strand tomorrow, started his study of music as a child in the best classical tradition. Graduating from high school, he became more keenly interested in the classics and continued his study of piano and harmony at the Washington, D. C., Conservatory of Music. After many years of extensive preparation with the works of Brahms and Beethoven as his guiding light, Hopkins became a jazz pianist in a small dance orchestra.

Five tuneful melodies were composed especially for "Shooting High," the colorful romance of the range, co-starring Jane Withers and Gene Autry, which Twentieth Century-Fox will present at the Strand, starting Sunday.

Jane and Gene sing two of these new songs together, while Jane has a rollicking number entitled "On the Rancho with My Pancho." Gene has two solos.

"Northwest Passage" Opens at Maryland

Wearing out green buckskin Ranger outfits so completely in two days that they were no longer fit for service is the record of Spencer Tracy, Robert Young and Walter Brennan. With arduous scenes requiring such mortality on outfits, it was small wonder that the wardrobe man on location in the forests and swamps of Idaho had his troubles during production of the Technicolor adventure film, "Northwest Passage," which opens today at the Maryland theater for an engagement of six days.

When the studio wardrobe department filled three over-sized box cars with outfits for the location sequences, it was assumed there would be plenty of costume changes for 240 Rangers, 200 British soldiers, 200 French soldiers, 200 oarsmen and 100 Indians. The first emergency arose for sox. The 700 taken along proved only a drop in the bucket. In the lakes, rivers, woods and swamps, a pair lasted an average of three days. Sox were rushed from the studio to fill the need.

Six wardrobe men and a wardrobe woman from the studio plus the studio tailor and five helpers hired in McCall, Idaho, found twenty-four hours a day but a short working shift when it came to keeping the Rangers alone in fair repair. King Vidor, directing, was assured of one thing, however. By the time he reached the sequence where the remnant of the Rangers finally reach Fort Wentworth, he knew that he could dress them in the strips and rags which the story required.

'Castle on Hudson' Is Feature at Liberty

The Liberty theater's 1940 hit parade begun with the comedy hit "Brother Rat and a Baby", and the "Fighting Sixty-ninth," continues tomorrow with "Castle on the Hudson," starring John Garfield, Ann Sheridan and Pat O'Brien.

Described as a tempestuous love story, "Castle on the Hudson" introduces Garfield and Miss Sheridan as a new romantic team.

The story is essentially one of life and love outside the barriers of the law, and of two lovers who defy the forces that strive to keep them apart. Both Garfield and Miss Sheridan have highly dramatic roles that give them both the opportunity to display their talents to the hilt. Pat O'Brien, cast as an idealistic reformer, is said to give one of his most serious performances.

Heading the supporting cast is Burgess Meredith, the stage star, who returns to the screen for the first time since he starred in "Winterset." He plays the role of an intellectual who has sunk to the lowest human depths, and advance reports on his work indicate that it is one of the highlights of the film.

Also included in the supporting cast are such well-known players as Jerome Cowan, John Litel, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Henry O'Neill, Margot Stevenson, Willard Robertson, Edward Pawley, Billy Wayne, Nedda Harrigan and many more.

Prize Fight and Adventure Films Are at Embassy

A rousing adventure film, with pleasant interlude of music, is Republic's "In Old Caliente," previewed today at the Embassy theater. Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, and George "Gabby" Hayes have the leading roles.

The time of the story is the 1850's, the place American California. Roy is seen as an employe of a wealthy landowner. A group of bandits hold up a caravan of gold shipment which Roy is in charge of, and suspicion falls on an American wagon train encamped nearby. The train is led by Scout George Hayes, an old friend of Roy's.

The two combine to clean up the gang, and furious action thrills fill the screen when the two pals set to work. Lovely Mary Hart, as usual, is the feminine inspiration of Roy's heroics.

The three leads—Rogers, Miss Hart and Hayes—turn in excellent performances. They are abetted by a fine cast, headed by Katherine De Mille, Jack La Rue, Frank Puglia, and Anna Demetrio.

Held over through tomorrow at the Embassy will be the Louis-Godoy fight films, fifteen rounds of action and thrills. Also on the same program will be another chapter of "Overland with Kit Carson."

Melody and Murder In Starrett Drama

In a role said to be ideally fitted to his two-fisted and hard-riding abilities as an outdoor action star, Charles Starrett returns to the Garden theater today in Columbia's "Riders of Black River," with lovely Iris Meredith as the romantic interest and the singing Sons of the Pioneers providing range tunes to augment the swiftly-paced narrative.

The hard-riding cowboy star's flying fists, gun-slinging and daring courage, which have brought terror to numerous screen heavies, are called upon once more as he wages a single-handed battle against a band of rustlers who threaten the peace of a secluded valley and the happiness of its inhabitants.

Starrett plays the heroic role of an adventurous young cowboy who arrives at home, after serving with the Texas Ranger, just as his brother is murdered by a rustler gang which has been terrorizing the countryside.

Eddie Collins brings his very special brand of comedy into a quick lunch room in "Stop, Look and Love," the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, currently at the Garden theater. Eddie's lunchroom is the romantic spot where Jean Rogers and Robert Kellard, the sweethearts of the film, sit and sigh over a hamburger or two.

Fears of Smallpox Marking Dwindling

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 21 (AP) — Fears of the modern woman that smallpox — will mark her face are slight these days, and getting less year by year.

In West Virginia, at least, the one-time scourge has slipped in regard until the health department now terms it of "very little importance."

Officials have tagged it the "vanishing ailment."

Dr. A. M. Price, director of the division of communicable diseases, reports that there were twenty-six cases of smallpox in 1939, eighteen more than in 1938, but added this:

"It is felt that many of these cases were chicken pox, erroneously diagnosed as smallpox."

The physician attributed the decline in the disease since its days of rampancy to "specific smallpox vaccine" — the kind every school child gets.

$3000 Appropriated For Prosecution In Pilchard Slaying

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 22. (AP)—A special appropriation of $3,000 has been set aside by the Worcester county commissioners to pay the estimated prosecution costs in the slaying of Harvey Pilchard, sixty-one-year-old Stockton farmer.

This amount was earmarked out of a $7,500 total increase for law enforcement when the commissioners struck the 1940-1941 fiscal levy.

Charles L. Mason, board president, said the $7,500 was provided by increasing the sheriff's budget from $6,500 to $11,500 and increasing the constable's budget from $3,500 to $6,000.

The county tax rate was left at $1.25 on the $100; the same as in 1939.

Pilchard was slain and his wife wounded at their Stockton home Feb. 11. Five negroes are held at Bel Air, awaiting grand jury action. Two of them, women, were delivered from the Snow Hill jail last Tuesday night by a mob, taken to Stockton and later turned over to state police. The last of the five suspects was apprehended Friday.

Husband Needs Sugar and Spice As Well as Wife

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

When a girl writes me that she and her fiance are devotedly in love, and there is no obstacle to their marriage except that she is holding off because her older sister has married badly, and at 26 or 27 looks like an old woman worn out with domestic cares and child-bearing, I feel like asking her if she declines to have an automobile because she's read about a motor accident in today's paper.

Unbelievable as it is, the story of a good many letters which come to this column, especially when the engaged girl has to do her part in buying shoes and groceries for the poorly married sister's family. These young spinsters who command good pay envelopes have seen so many eight-cylinder romances skid and go into the ditch, that they are over-cautions.

Perhaps these girls may have acted as bridesmaids at a wedding where the principals couldn't live without each other another week, and then they may have seen things come to such a pass that the turtledoves could not stand each other for a day longer.

Sad and Revealing

It's all very sad and very revealing, but not all marriages have such tragic finales. In spite of Reno, Mexico and our local divorce courts, there are husbands and wives who stay lovers 'til the end of the chapter.

You can hardly open a paper without finding the weatherbeaten faces of some old couple who have just celebrated their golden wedding. And those old warriors of life have remained happy in each other's love, in spite of poverty, sickness, death and all the other misfortunes to which flesh is heir.

Why don't these girls who write that they're afraid to marry because they see so much unhappiness on every side, concentrate on these old people, who, in each other's love, have had the strength given them to stand seventy, eighty and even more years of living.

Individual Proposition

Every marriage is an individual proposition, and whether it stands or fails depends entirely on the amount of patience and good will that the couple take with them from the altar.

There used to be an old-fashioned adage, much quoted in the pre-Reno days. It ran something like this. In married life there are two bears—bear and forbear. Take good care of these mythical animals, feed and minister to them, and they will guard the threshold of your home.

"My wife does not take half the care of me that she does of the canary hanging in our dining-room window," wails a husband, "so I'm beginning to hate the canary and would enjoy wringing its neck."

Only Grown-up Boys

Attention wives! Consider well this lesson of the canary and see that your husband is equally well fed and watered, and that he has a little of the goo-goo talk you shower upon the bird. After all, men are just grownup boys, and the sugar and spice you spread for them in your courting days (yes, I mean just that) will keep them happy and smiling until it comes time to have your picture taken for the golden wedding anniversary with your children and grandchildren in the background.

The prime recipe for a happy marriage is patience, good sportsmanship, intelligence, a little flattery now and then, and above all, a sense of humor. Please don't be afraid to try this old and unfailing remedy, all you girls who hesitate because you have a good fat pay envelope. Your pay envelope will not keep your heart warm after the days of your youth have vanished.

Should Consult Doctor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 23, was engaged to a certain girl, with whom I had gone "steady" for three years. I had even purchased two rings. Then she was taken ill and had to go to a sanitarium. After she had been there for six months, friends told me I ought to give her up because she'd never be well. I did this, much to my sorrow. That was about a year ago.

Recently she returned home because of her mother's death and although she ignored me at first, she now tells me she still loves me, and I know I care deeply for her. Do you think it's wise to renew our friendship? She has improved a great deal and seems to be on the road to recovery. Please help me decide. Al.

The person to consult in this matter is the physician who had charge of the young lady's case. Very often young people, especially victims of t.b., make a complete cure, and it's safe for them to marry. You haven't told me the nature of the young lady's illness, but in any case, it would be wise to consult her doctor.

Husband Needs Sugar and Spice As Well as Wife

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

When a girl writes me that she and her fiance are devotedly in love, and there is no obstacle to their marriage except that she is holding off because her older sister has married badly, and at 26 or 27 looks like an old woman worn out with domestic cares and child-bearing, I feel like asking her if she declines to have an automobile because she's read about a motor accident in today's paper.

Unbelievable as it is, the story of a good many letters which come to this column, especially when the engaged girl has to do her part in buying shoes and groceries for the poorly married sister's family. These young spinsters who command good pay envelopes have seen so many eight-cylinder romances skid and go into the ditch, that they are over-cautious.

Perhaps these girls may have acted as bridesmaids at a wedding where the principals couldn't live without each other another week, and then they may have seen things come to such a pass that the turtledoves could not stand each other for a day longer.

Sad and Revealing

It's all very sad and very revealing, but not all marriages have such tragic finales. In spite of Reno, Mexico and our local divorce courts, there are husbands and wives who stay lovers 'til the end of the chapter.

You can hardly open a paper without finding the weatherbeaten faces of some old couple who have just celebrated their golden wedding. And those old warriors of life have remained happy in each other's love, in spite of poverty, sickness, death and all the other misfortunes to which flesh is heir.

Why don't these girls who write that they're afraid to marry because they see so much unhappiness on every side, concentrate on these old people, who, in each other's love, have had the strength given them to stand seventy, eighty and even more years of living.

Individual Proposition

Every marriage is an individual proposition, and whether it stands or fails depends entirely on the amount of patience and good will that the couple take with them from the altar.

There used to be an old-fashioned adage, much quoted in the pre-Reno days. It ran something like this. In married life there are two bears—bear and forbear. Take good care of these mythical animals, feed and minister to them, and they will guard the threshold of your home.

"My wife does not take half the care of me that she does of the canary hanging in our dining-room window," wails a husband, "so I'm beginning to hate the canary and would enjoy wringing its neck."

Only Grown-up Boys

Attention wives! Consider well this lesson of the canary and see that your husband is equally well fed and watered, and that he has a little of the goo-goo talk you shower upon the bird. After all, men are just grownup boys, and the sugar and spice you spread for them in your courting days (yes, I mean just that) will keep them happy and smiling until it comes time to have your picture taken for the golden wedding anniversary with your children and grandchildren in the background.

The prime recipe for a happy marriage is patience, good sportsmanship, intelligence, a little flattery now and then, and above all, a sense of humor. Please don't be afraid to try this old and unfailing remedy, all you girls who hesitate because you have a good fat pay envelope. Your pay envelope will not keep your heart warm after the days of your youth have vanished.

Should Consult Doctor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 23, was engaged to a certain girl, with whom I had gone "steady" for three years. I had even purchased two rings. Then she was taken ill and had to go to a sanitarium. After she had been there for six months, friends told me I ought to give her up because she'd never be well. I did this, much to my sorrow. That was about a year ago.

Recently she returned home because of her mother's death and although she ignored me at first, she now tells me she still loves me, and I know I care deeply for her. Do you think it's wise to renew our friendship? She has improved a great deal and seems to be on the road to recovery. Please help me decide. Al.

The person to consult in this matter is the physician who had charge of the young lady's case. Very often young people, especially victims of t.b., make a complete cure, and it's safe for them to marry. You haven't told me the nature of the young lady's illness, but in any case, it would be wise to consult her doctor.

Plan Organization Of Honor Society

Moorefield High To Establish Chapter of National Organization

Moorefield, W. Va., Feb. 22—By the organization of a chapter of the National Honor Society at Moorefield, the local institution is recognized as one of the Class A high schools in the United States.

Only those schools of the highest qualifications and whose principals are members of the National Association of Secondary School Principals are eligible to maintain chapters.

The National Honor Society was founded in 1921 by the principals' association to recognize outstanding scholarship, unusual leadership and commendable character among high school students throughout the nation. It now boasts 2,500 chapters in the best high schools in all forty-eight states, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Phillipine Islands.

J. T. St. Clair, principal of Moorefield high school, will appoint a committee of students and faculty members to draw up a constitution for the local chapter.

The plan is that in the spring of each year, the members of the junior and senior classes of the school will be allowed to nominate candidates secretly. From these nominations, the principal and high school faculty will select five per cent of the junior class and ten per cent of the senior class for election to the society.

PTA Program

In order to display some of the creative work being done by the elementary students, teachers of the first six grades in the Moorefield school were in charge of the program at the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association Monday evening in the school auditorium.

The demonstration covered all phases of creative and expressional work being fostered among the children. Miss Mildred Rasey, who has charge of music in the elementary classes, presented two groups of singers, one from the primary grades and the second from the intermediate grades.

Miss Daisy Halterman, instructor of fine arts classes in the first six grades, gave a brief lecture on stages of development of artistic talent in the child. She illustrated her talk with work actually done by children from these grades. By using this exhibit, she was able to demonstrate more clearly the actual artistic growth of an individual child. Mrs. Halterman followed her lecture by giving the P.T.A. a lesson on art appreciation, using for her study "The Last Summer" by Leonardo da Vinci, the world's greatest artist.

The use of dramatic speech was demonstrated by students of Mrs. Edna Gamble's second grade, who appeared in a playlet, "The Making of the First Flag." Miss Bess Hawse presented boys from her class in a recitation. Stories were told by fourth graders to show the effective teaching of oral English. Mrs. Mary Grafton and Mrs. Edna Bergdoll have charge of these grades.

Raymond Sindy, who has charge of the safety patrol in the upper grades, presented one of the patrol boys in a short explanation of the work they are trying to accomplish.

After the program was completed, a short business session of the association was held. Reports from committees were presented and plans for future activities of the organization were discussed. Mrs. Grafton's fourth grade won the prize for having the largest number of parents at the meeting.

Police Probe Old Case As Ring Is Discovered

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Detectives scrutinized under a microscope today a diamond ring believed to have figured in the mysterious slaying three years ago of wealthy Mrs. Juliette B. Enslow, but they expressed doubt the find would lead to reopening of the case.

Mrs. Enslow, a widow, was found dead in a bedroom of her 27-room mansion in October, 1936. Her son by a former marriage, Charles Buffington Baldwin, was acquitted of a murder charge.

Relatives of Mrs. Enslow identified the ring found by Chapman Fry, city street employe, in an alley catch basin behind the Enslow home as one of the two she was wearing the night she was killed.

However, detective Lieutenant L. J. Swann, who said it was improbable the case would be reopened, announced the ring has not been positively identified and that a study of jeweler's records must be made before the ownership can be definitely established.

Laborers may be put to work tomorrow digging up the sewer pipe from the palatial residence in an effort to find another ring.

Coal Mine Mechanization Continues To Slow Down in West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The pace of coal mine mechanization is slowing down in West Virginia because the limit for present equipment is getting close, Chief N. P. Rhinehart, of the State Mines Department, said today.

That's because the present mechanical loaders can't be used except on certain veins of coal, most of them five feet or more thick. Some, however, have been used on seams as small as 36 inches.

"But it isn't safe to make any predictions about the limitations of mechanized coal loaders," Rhinehart added, "for in this day and age they are liable to bring out a machine that will load coal from places where only a man can now crawl."

A big percentage of West Virginia's coal production is mined mechanically—some 20,694,181 tons out of the 1939 total of 108,515,665.

Besides, there was an aggregate of 10,107,681 tons loaded by hand on conveyors, but mining men do not consider conveyor production strictly mechanized.

Conveyors, however, can be used where a mechanical loader can't enter, for a man can kneel to scoop the coal into the conveyor, which doesn't require much room at the receiving end.

And for a man who must kneel to shovel coal, the conveyor is a much easier proposition than tossing it into a regulation mine car—take Chief Rhinehart's word for it.

So far as the displacement of men with mechanical loaders is concerned, Rhinehart is inclined to the opinion that this has been exaggerated, although there is no question but that the machines have taken jobs away from some men.

"The coal still must be cut and shot down, however, and there are only certain types of coal veins upon which the mechanical loaders can be used," Rhinehart pointed out.

The robot loaders use different devices to scoop the coal into a conveyor which in turn carries the lumps to mine cars.

Some have long arms which circle around and scoop the coal in much as a human would pull it into his lap while others employ chains or circular drums with short arms which bat the coal into the conveyor entrance.

Logan county led the entire state during 1939 in the production of both mechanically loaded and conveyor coal. The county brought out 6,087,916 tons of mechanically loaded coal and 2,462,381 tons of conveyor coal. The total output for Logan county during the year was 14,795,014.

Coney Firemen Buy New Truck; To Cost $2,000

New Equipment Replaces First Truck, Purchased 20 Years Ago

Lonaconing, Feb. 22—Goodwill Fire Company No. 1 today closed a deal for a new fire truck.

The new piece of equipment was purchased at an approximate cost of $2,000 and will supplant the first truck ever purchased by the company, a Dodge, which was traded to defray part of the cost of the new truck. It was learned here today that the old truck, originally purchased here in March, 1921, had been bought by the newly organized Shaw Fire Department.

The new 1940 Chevrolet truck, with a capacity of 500 feet of hose and all needled chemical equipment, and a wheel base of 158 inches, was purchased from the Green Chevrolet Motor Company, of Frostburg. Scheduled for delivery in June, it will be used for flue fires and other minor blazes.

At present, the company has a $6,000 American La France truck, which is capable of pumping 750 gallons of water per minute from a rotary pump driven by the eight-cylinder motor. It has a capacity fof 1,000 feet of hose, and is equipped with a 100-gallon booster tank, which can be used either for chemicals or water. This truck was purchased late in 1936 by the mayor and town council, and the title was turned over to the local fire company last year.

By adding to the present equipment, the local fire company continues its march to better control over fire hazards here. Since the organization of the compuany, the tax rate has been greatly reduced and the loss by fire is very low for the fifty-eight years, amounting to $360,000 in eight major fires.

Moorefield High To Establish Chapter of National Organization

Moorefield, W. Va., Feb. 22—By the organization of a chapter of the National Honor Society at Moorefield, the local institution is recognized as one of the Class A high schools in the United States.

Only those schools of the highest qualifications and whose principals are members of the National Association of Secondary School Principals are eligible to maintain chapters.

The National Honor Society was founded in 1921 by the principals' association to recognize outstanding scholarship, unusual leadership and commendable character among high school students throughout the nation. It now boasts 2,500 chapters in the best high schools in all forty-eight states, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Phillipine Islands.

J. T. St. Clair, principal of Moorefield high school, will appoint a committee of students and faculty members to draw up a constitution for the local chapter.

The plan is that in the spring of each year, the members of the junior and senior classes of the school will be allowed to nominate candidates secretly. From these nominations, the principal and high school faculty will select five per cent of the junior class and ten per cent of the senior class for election to the society.

PTA Program

In order to display some of the creative work being done by the elementary students, teachers of the first six grades in the Moorefield school were in charge of the program at the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association Monday evening in the school auditorium.

The demonstration covered all phases of creative and expressional work being fostered among the children. Miss Mildred Rasey, who has charge of music in the elementary classes, presented two groups of singers, one from the primary grades and the second from the intermediate grades.

Miss Daisy Halterman, instructor of fine arts classes in the first six grades, gave a brief lecture on stages of development of artistic talent in the child. She illustrated her talk with work actually done by children from these grades. By using this exhibit, she was able to demonstrate more clearly the actual artistic growth of an individual child. Mrs. Halterman followed her lecture by giving the P.T.A. a lesson on art appreciation, using for her study "The Last Summer" by Leonardo da Vinci, the world's greatest artist.

The use of dramatic speech was demonstrated by students of Mrs. Edna Gamble's second grade, who appeared in a playlet, "The Making of the First Flag." Miss Bess Hawse presented boys from her class in a recitation. Stories were told by fourth graders to show the effective teaching of oral English. Mrs. Mary Grafton and Mrs. Edna Bergdoll have charge of these grades.

Raymond Sindy, who has charge of the safety patrol in the upper grades, presented one of the patrol boys in a short explanation of the work they are trying to accomplish.

After the program was completed, a short business session of the association was held. Reports from committees were presented and plans for future activities of the organization were discussed. Mrs. Grafton's fourth grade won the prize for having the largest number of parents at the meeting.

Police Probe Old Case As Ring Is Discovered

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Detectives scrutinized under a microscope today a diamond ring believed to have figured in the mysterious slaying three years ago of wealthy Mrs. Juliette B. Enslow, but they expressed doubt the find would lead to reopening of the case.

School Superintendent Seeks Third Term

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—State School Superintendent W. W. Trent announced tonight he would seek his third term subject to the Democratic primary May 14.

Trent asserted he was offering for re-election on the "platform on which I have stood while serving as state superintendent of free schools," adding:

"I believe in conducting the schools for the children; in making the teaching profession sufficiently attractive to secure for it and to retain in it the best talent among our people."

Trent said he proposed "to continue my efforts to attain these objectives."

Trent, a native of Nicholas county and former president of Broaddus College before its merger with Alderson, was elected school superintendent in 1932 and re-elected in 1936.

Coal Mine Mechanization Continues To Slow Down in West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The pace of coal mine mechanization is slowing down in West Virginia because the limit for present equipment is getting close, Chief N. P. Rhinehart, of the State Mines Department, said today.

That's because the present mechanical loaders can't be used except on certain veins of coal, most of them five feet or more thick. Some, however, have been used on seams as small as 36 inches.

"But it isn't safe to make any predictions about the limitations of mechanized coal loaders," Rhinehart added, "for in this day and age they are liable to bring out a machine that will load coal from places where only a man can now crawl."

A big percentage of West Virginia's coal production is mined mechanically—some 20,694,181 tons out of the 1939 total of 108,515,665.

Besides, there was an aggregate of 10,107,681 tons loaded by hand on conveyors, but mining men do not consider conveyor production strictly mechanized.

Conveyors, however, can be used where a mechanical loader can't enter, for a man can kneel to scoop the coal into the conveyor, which doesn't require much room at the receiving end.

And for a man who must kneel to shovel coal, the conveyor is a much easier proposition than tossing it into a regulation mine car—take Chief Rhinehart's word for it.

So far as the displacement of men with mechanical loaders is concerned, Rhinehart is inclined to the opinion that this has been exaggerated, although there is no question but that the machines have taken jobs away from some men.

"The coal still must be cut and shot down, however, and there are only certain types of coal veins upon which the mechanical loaders can be used," Rhinehart pointed out.

The robot loaders use different devices to scoop the coal into a conveyor which in turn carries the lumps to mine cars.

Some have long arms which circle around and scoop the coal in much as a human would pull it into his lap while others employ chains or circular drums with short arms which bat the coal into the conveyor entrance.

Logan county led the entire state during 1939 in the production of both mechanically loaded and conveyor coal. The county brought out 6,087,916 tons of mechanically loaded coal and 2,462,381 tons of conveyor coal. The total output for Logan county during the year was 14,795,014.

Coney Firemen Buy New Truck; To Cost $2,000

New Equipment Replaces First Truck, Purchased 20 Years Ago

Lonaconing, Feb. 22—Goodwill Fire Company No. 1 today closed a deal for a new fire truck.

The new piece of equipment was purchased at an approximate cost of $2,000 and will supplant the first truck ever purchased by the company, a Dodge, which was traded to defray part of the cost of the new truck. It was learned here today that the old truck, originally purchased here in March, 1921, had been bought by the newly organized Shaw Fire Department.

The new 1940 Chevrolet truck, with a capacity of 500 feet of hose and all needled chemical equipment, and a wheel base of 158 inches, was purchased from the Green Chevrolet Motor Company, of Frostburg. Scheduled for delivery in June, it will be used for flue fires and other minor blazes.

At present, the company has a $8,000 American La France truck, which is capable of pumping 750 gallons of water per minute from a rotary pump driven by the eight-cylinder motor. It has a capacity fof 1,000 feet of hose, and is equipped with a 100-gallon booster tank, which can be used either for chemicals or water. This truck was purchased late in 1936 by the mayor and town council, and the title was turned over to the local fire company last year.

By adding to the present equipment, the local fire company continues its march to better control over fire hazards here. Since the organization of the compuany, the tax rate has been greatly reduced and the loss by fire is very low for the fifty-eight years, amounting to $360,000 in eight major fires.

Trustees William Rankin, Thomas Fisher and George Eichhorn made the new truck purchase.

Graft Hunter Who Purged Louisiana Plans New Probe

Rogge Will Soon Open Inquiry in Another Unnamed State

New Orleans, Feb. 22 (AP)—A federal graft hunter who broke the Louisiana scandals that brought ballot disaster to the Huey Long political regime said tonight he soon would open investigation of similar corruption in another state.

Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge disclosed this much tonight but wouldn't say where the federal lightning would strike next. He outlined also a plan through which the justice department will seek uniformity in federal investigation and jurisprudence.

"Through this plan I hope to put as big a dent as I can in the pipe line that flows graft into the pockets of public officials," Rogge asserted on his return from Alexandria, La., where he had argued motions in the case of former Governor Richard W. Leche, under mail fraud indictment.

"When I finish with the Louisiana investigation I have a plan in mind to carry out similar investigations, but I do not care to reveal it now," the towering criminal division director said.

The work which Rogge headed in Louisiana paved the way for the mortal blow dealt the Long machine at Tuesday's Democratic runoff primary, which named Sam H. Jones the next governor over Gov. Earl K. Long, administration candidate and brother of the slain "Kingfish."

Rogge said the federal plan was to divide the nation into districts, where "one good man" from his department would consult with district attorneys and with judges in working out some uniformity in federal jurisprudence.

He said specifically some judges dealt out a year and a day sentence and others up to four years for the same types of crime, and that there should be a uniform system developed. He said his department felt more men should be sent from Washington to assist in local situations, as was done here.

Find Body of Slayer Of More Than 14 Men

Las Vegas, Nev., Feb. 22. (AP)—Twenty - one years after his last bloody foray, the remains of Quejo, murderous Indian bandit who slew at least fourteen men, have been discovered in a cave near Boulder dam.

Identification was made by an officer who spent weeks tracking the killer at the height of a widespread search.

Quejo began his raids in 1910. Armed with a rifle and bow and arrows, he would swoop down on ranchers and prospectors, killing them and robbing their camps. Estimates of the number of his victims run as high as twenty-three.

Chief of Police Frank Wait of Las Vagas identified the remains from clothing Quejo last was seen wearing and by the peculiar bone formation of one foot. Wait was a deputy sheriff when he began his quest for the indian.

Found with the remains were a rifle, a bow and arrows, strings of wampum, a wooden fire - making outfit, bullet moulds power and used cartridges. Charles M. Kenyon and Art Schroeder, prospectors, made the discovery.

Wood and Conway To Quit Exchange

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)—General Robert E. Wood and Carle C. Conway plan to retire from the board of governors of the New York stock exchange at the expiration of their present terms on May 1, it was learned in reliable financial circles here. Both are representatives of the "public" on the exchange board.

General Wood is chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., large Chicago mail order firm and Conway is head of Continental Can Co., second largest in its field.

Both General Wood and Conway are serving their second one-year terms on the board. Financial quarters had no definite information for the reasons behind the retirement of the two prominent men but in some quarters it was suggested that they wished to be relieved of their duties in order to give more time to their regular jobs.

Girl Leaves Home, Is Found Murdered

New York, Feb. 22 (AP) — An attractive 23-year old girl who left home saying "I can take care of myself" was found dead today, her body bruised and frozen, in a narrow sewer excavation in Manhattan's upper east side.

Head abrasions and tiny blue marks on her throat indicated Frances Marks had been slugged, strangled and robbed. The medical examiner said there was no indication of rape.

Her hat and shoes were gone. Her handbag, found in another excavation fifty feet away, contained six pennies. She had been dead five or six hours when a passerby espied the stocking-clad feet projecting from beneath a newspaper.

Miss Marks had worked until midnight at her job as bookkeeper of a nearby garage.

She moved from home eight months ago, protesting that her life was too circumscribed by her parents, who operate a grocery. She then rented a room with a family in Brooklyn.

Flies and Pests Expected In June

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP) — Despite the bitterest winter in twenty-five years, it's no sign the summer market on screens and sprays is likely to collapse.

Waldo Craig, entomologist of the state department of agriculture, expressed belief the flies and pests will swarm back—come June — in the same old density of numbers.

Experts report the rigors of winter, be it 10 below or ordinary freezing, wipe out ninety-five per cent of the pest crop.

Russia Testing Vital Defenses On South Border

Oil Supply Area Said To Be Unusually Well Protected

Moscow, Feb. 22 (AP)—Soviet Russia even as she is embroiled with Finland in the north is testing anew her defenses in the vital south where her wealth in oil is concentrated.

Conclusion of important winter maneuvers in the Black Sea of the fleet commanded by Admiral Oktyabrsky was disclosed today simultaneously with word that a training blackout had been decreed from Tuesday until further notice in Baku, Caspian seaport from which the oil supplies of the region are shipped.

"The fleet was, is and shall be a reliable guard of the southern borders of the U.S.S.R.," Admiral Oktyabrasky announced after the return of the Black Sea warships to their Sevastopol base.

Many New Ships

He reported that "the strength of the Black Sea fleet is growing daily" and though no figures were given, Russians asserted two-thirds of the vessels were new and built in Russia.

(Russia's naval forces are divided into five fleets—based in the far east, the Caspian sea, the Baltic and the Arctic.

(The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet reported that Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzoff, Soviet naval commissar, had flown to Murmansk to inspect the Russian Arctic fleet after reports that British warships were off Finland's arctic shore—which Russian forces occupied early No confirmation of this came from Moscow.

(To the east is the important Russian port of Murmansk and the Kremlin was reported concerned over reports that the British might try to interfere with the Russian-German trade through Murmansk.)

Test Blackout in Baku

A Baku newspaper received here today told of the decreeing of a series of test blackouts in Baku, whence a pipeline crosses the southernmost extremity of the Soviet Union to deliver oil to the Black Sea port of Batum.

(Advices from Istanbul said that marines there reported the Russian winter maneuvers included defense exercises off Batum and other ports, including Odessa, a short distance east of the Russian-Rumanian frontier.

(Coast defense batteries and airplanes were said to have participated.

(The Russian Caucasian oil fields have figured prominently in speculation over the possibility of a spread of the European conflict to the near east since Britain and France were reported to have massed some 570,000 men in Syria, Egypt and Palestine.

(A British-French-Turkish drive on the fields has been envisioned as possible in a two-edged stroke to cripple Russia and deprive Germany of a chance to get needed petroleum.)

Cause of Mine Explosion Unknown

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Tracing the cause and place of origin of a mine gas explosion killing ninety-one men at Bartley has brought "bafflement" to the state department of mines.

More than a month after the blast, Department Chief N. P. Rhinehart answers when asked if the cause will ever be known: "I doubt it."

Behind cleanup crews—and even as rescue shifts left the mine—department inspectors, among them the chief himself, probed into the mine, noting the effects of the explosion.

Clues were found—but many pointed in different directions.

John Wood Said To Have Invented The Gatling Gun

Aged West Virginian Contends Ansted Man Made the Gun First

Oak Hill, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Did Richard Jordon Gatling invent the first machine gun, which bears his name, or was it the creation of an obscure West Virginia gunsmith?

History, army records and the patent office say the inventor was Gatling, a wealthy army physician. A. W. Hamilton, 84-year-old Fayette county attorney, contends that John Nickel Wood, of Ansted, W. Va., first made the gun.

The Gatling gun, patented by Gatling, first appeared in the Civil War. By 1862 the gun had been perfected to fire 350 shots a minute, but only a few were manufactured before the close of the war. Later, the gun was adopted by the armies of almost every nation.

Hamilton, who knew the Wood family well as a boy, said Marshall Wood, John's uncle, related the story of the invention of the gun to him many times in the years after the Civil War.

Joined Confederates Early

"John and Marshall Wood joined the Confederate army at the start of the war and were stationed at Camp Pyatt on the Kanawha river above Charleston," Hamilton says.

"Marshall, a wheelwright, helped John perfect a model of the rapid-fire gun and they showed it to the commanding officer, who gave them tools and equipment. The gun was mounted and tested.

"When Union forces compelled the Confederates to evacuate the camp, the officer ordered the gun sunk in the Kanawha to escape capture.

"The two Woods were then sent to Roanoke, Virginia. Again they worked on the model of the gun and an officer introduced them to Gatling, as a man with money and influence.

Gatling Made Offer

"Gatling offered to take the gun to France and have it patented in exchange for a half-interest. In the meantime John Wood died, and when Gatling returned, he told Marshall Wood he had no interest in the gun."

Hamilton recalls Marshall Wood went back to the spot on the Kanawha river where the original had been sunk after the war, but was never able to locate the exact spot.

"That gun is still somewhere in the Kanawha river," Hamilton declares.

"John and Marshall were about the same age," Hamilton recalls, "and both could make anything. John was the actual inventor of the gun, and Marshall helped him with it."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

High School Boy Held as Robber

Pittsburgh, Feb. 22 (AP)—Richard Evans, 17-year old High School junior and son of a former judge was arrested today and accused of staging a number of robberies, including the taking of $10,000 worth of jewels.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park, who made the charges, said Evans and a companion, Jack Kernon, 19, calmly admitted they forced their way into the home of Albert Geyer, printing company executive on Feb. 2 and took the jewels which were recovered.

Evans is a son of former Judge John E. Evans of Ebensburg, Pa., who now is an associate here of Former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti.

A surprised brother of the youth, John E. Evans, Jr., said he could not suggest a reason for young Evans' behavior.

"He had a good home and every advantage. We can't believe this thing."

4-H Club Boys Will Exhibit Feeding Lambs

College Park, Md., Feb. 22. (AP)— A score of 4-H club boys from six Maryland counties will exhibit western feeding lambs at the second annual fat western lamb show at the Baltimore Union stock yards Feb. 27.

Mylo S. Downey, assistant state boys' club agent, said the boys purchased the lambs from Nebraska last November in a lot averaging 58 pounds per head.

Club agent officials encouraged the youths to follow a definite feeding schedule, keeping record of their progress. These reports will be shown along with the lambs.

The project is designed to demonstrate the possibility of feeding western lambs as a profitable outlet for certain farm crops, and to give older boys experience in buying, feeding, grading and marketing of livestock, Downey declared.

Coal Too Dirty

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The relief authorities thought they had something when coal was found on the site of Wheeling's new airport, now under construction, but complaints about dirt in the coal have brought a decision to cease distribution.

Besides, City Engineer Jay Henry protested that many of the WPA and department of public assistance clients left the coal in the street and he threatened arrest for the truckers.

There is no equipment for screening the coal at the airport, from which 1,200 five-ton loads have been delivered.

Sloan Hints

payers' recommendations are generally carried out by the legislature, he said.

What Would Washington Do?

"What would Washington do about all these problems?", the jurist asked. "We don't know. But we do know that he would have the courage to face the situation and do what ought to be done, guided by a wisdom unequalled in the history of this country."

"He would act unselfishly, too, with no idea of perpetuating his name and fame and hold on the country," he added. It was unnecessary for him to say that the present President is not of such caliber; his manner of speaking got that across in an unmistakable manner.

Earlier, in noting that he was a "pinch-hitter" for Forum Speaker Stanley High, he had mentioned High's topic, "After Roosevelt—What?", and added: "And God knows what!"

In discussing the failure of either political party to sponsor any Washington birthday observances, Judge Sloan did not let his own Republican party escape unscathed either.

After saying that Andrew Jackson is "the patron saint of the Democratic party—in theory at least," he made a similar remark about the Republicans and their "idol," Abraham Lincoln.

In eulogizing Washington as "the greatest figure in the secular history of the world," the speaker quoted tributes paid the first President by foreigners, including Englishmen, as well as Americans.

Judge Sloan especially hailed Washington's vision in foreseeing the future growth of the nation and acting accordingly.

Supreme Court Justice Does Not Seek Vice Presidency, He Says

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—Despite a statement by Justice Frank Murphy that he is very happy on the Supreme Court, there were persistent reports today that he has been seeking the vice-presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket.

As told by a friend of Murphy's the story went that he had conferred with certain Democratic leaders from Michigan on the possibility that the state's delegation to the Democratic National Convention might be instructed for him.

Graft Hunter Who Purged Louisiana Plans New Probe

Rogge Will Soon Open Inquiry in Another Unnamed State

New Orleans, Feb. 22 (AP)—A federal graft hunter who broke the Louisiana scandals that brought ballot disaster to the Huey Long political regime said tonight he soon would open investigation of similar corruption in another state.

Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge disclosed this much tonight but wouldn't say where the federal lightning would strike next. He outlined also a plan through which the justice department will seek uniformity in federal investigation and jurisprudence.

"Through this plan I hope to put as big a dent as I can in the pipe line that flows graft into the pockets of public officials," Rogge asserted on his return from Alexandria, La., where he had argued motions in the case of former Governor Richard W. Leche, under mail fraud indictment.

"When I finish with the Louisiana investigation I have a plan in mind to carry out similar investigations, but I do not care to reveal it now," the towering criminal division director said.

The work which Rogge headed in Louisiana paved the way for the mortal blow dealt the Long machine at Tuesday's Democratic runoff primary, which named Sam H. Jones the next governor over Gov. Earl K. Long, administration candidate and brother of the slain "Kingfish."

Rogge said the federal plan was to divide the nation into districts, where "one good man" from his department would consult with district attorneys and with judges in working out some uniformity in federal jurisprudence.

He said specifically some judges dealt out a year and a day sentence and others up to four years for the same types of crime, and that there should be a uniform system developed. He said his department felt more men should be sent from Washington to assist in local situations, as was done here.

Girl Leaves Home, Is Found Murdered

New York, Feb. 22 (AP) — An attractive 23-year old girl who left home saying "I can take care of myself" was found dead today, her body bruised and frozen, in a narrow sewer excavation in Manhattan's upper east side.

Head abrasions and tiny blue marks on her throat indicated Frances Marks had been slugged, strangled and robbed. The medical examiner said there was no indication of rape.

Her hat and shoes were gone. Her handbag, found in another excavation fifty feet away, contained six pennies. She had been dead five or six hours when a passerby espied the stocking-clad feet projecting from beneath a newspaper.

Miss Marks had worked until midnight at her job as bookkeeper of a nearby garage.

She moved from home eight months ago, protesting that her life was too circumscribed by her parents, who operate a grocery. She then rented a room with a family in Brooklyn.

Flies and Pests Expected In June

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP) — Despite the bitterest winter in twenty-five years, it's no sign the summer market on screens and sprays is likely to collapse.

Waldo Craig, entomologist of the state department of agriculture, expressed belief the flies and pests will swarm back—come June — in the same old density of numbers.

Experts report the rigors of winter, be it 10 below or ordinary freezing, wipe out ninety-five per cent of the pest crop.

A KISS FOR LULU

Find Body of Slayer Of More Than 14 Men

Las Vegas, Nev., Feb. 22. (AP)—Twenty - one years after his last bloody foray, the remains of Quejo, murderous Indian bandit who slew at least fourteen men, have been discovered in a cave near Boulder dam.

Identification was made by an officer who spent weeks tracking the killer at the height of a widespread search.

Quejo began his raids in 1910. Armed with a rifle and bow and arrows, he would swoop down on ranchers and prospectors, killing them and robbing their camps. Estimates of the number of his victims run as high as twenty-three.

Chief of Police Frank Wait of Las Vagas identified the remains from clothing Quejo last was seen wearing and by the peculiar bone formation of one foot. Wait was a deputy sheriff when he began his quest for the indian.

Found with the remains were a rifle, a bow and arrows, strings of wampum, a wooden fire - making outfit, bullet moulds power and used cartridges. Charles M. Kenyon and Art Schroeder, prospectors, made the discovery.

Wood and Conway To Quit Exchange

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)—General Robert E. Wood and Carle C. Conway plan to retire from the board of governors of the New York stock exchange at the expiration of their present terms on May 1, it was learned in reliable financial circles here. Both are representatives of the "public" on the exchange board.

General Wood is chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., large Chicago mail order firm and Conway is head of Continental Can Co., second largest in its field.

Both General Wood and Conway are serving their second one-year terms on the board. Financial quarters had no definite information for the reasons behind the retirement of the two prominent men but in some quarters it was suggested that they wished to be relieved of their duties in order to give more time to their regular jobs.

Russia Testing Vital Defenses On South Border

Oil Supply Area Said To Be Unusually Well Protected

Moscow, Feb. 22 (AP)—Soviet Russia even as she is embroiled with Finland in the north is testing anew her defenses in the vital south where her wealth in oil is concentrated.

Conclusion of important winter maneuvers in the Black Sea of the fleet commanded by Admiral Oktyabrsky was disclosed today simultaneously with word that a training blackout had been decreed from Tuesday until further notice in Baku, Caspian seaport from which the oil supplies of the region are shipped.

"The fleet was, is and shall be a reliable guard of the southern borders of the U.S.S.R.," Admiral Oktyabrasky announced after the return of the Black Sea warships to their Sevastopol base.

Many New Ships

He reported that "the strength of the Black Sea fleet is growing daily" and though no figures were given, Russians asserted two-thirds of the vessels were new and built in Russia.

(Russia's naval forces are divided into five fleets—based in the far east, the Caspian sea, the Baltic and the Arctic.

(The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet reported that Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzoff, Soviet naval commissar, had flown to Murmansk to inspect the Russian Arctic fleet after reports that British warships were off Finland's arctic shore—which Russian forces occupied early No confirmation of this came from Moscow.

(To the east is the important Russian port of Murmansk and the Kremlin was reported concerned over reports that the British might try to interfere with the Russian-German trade through Murmansk.)

Test Blackout in Baku

A Baku newspaper received here today told of the decreeing of a series of test blackouts in Baku, whence a pipeline crosses the southernmost extremity of the Soviet Union to deliver oil to the Black Sea port of Batum.

(Advices from Istanbul said that marines there reported the Russian winter maneuvers included defense exercises off Batum and other ports, including Odessa, a short distance east of the Russian-Rumanian frontier.

(Coast defense batteries and airplanes were said to have participated.

(The Russian Caucasian oil fields have figured prominently in speculation over the possibility of a spread of the European conflict to the near east since Britain and France were reported to have massed some 570,000 men in Syria, Egypt and Palestine.

(A British-French-Turkish drive on the fields has been envisioned as possible in a two-edged stroke to cripple Russia and deprive Germany of a chance to get needed petroleum.)

Cause of Mine Explosion Unknown

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Tracing the cause and place of origin of a mine gas explosion killing ninety-one men at Bartley has brought "bafflement" to the state department of mines.

More than a month after the blast, Department Chief N. P. Rhinehart answers when asked if the cause will ever be known: "I doubt it."

Behind cleanup crews—and even as rescue shifts left the mine—department inspectors, among them the chief himself, probed into the mine, noting the effects of the explosion.

Man Worth $12,419,139 Had Only $600 Worth Of Personal Property

Fayetteville, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—William McKell, millionaire coal operator, had only $600 worth of tangible personal property.

The appraisal of McKell's estate, filed by Administrator J. Earl Beatty, of Charleston, valued all property at $12,419,139.

John Wood Said To Have Invented The Gatling Gun

Aged West Virginian Contends Ansted Man Made the Gun First

Oak Hill, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—Did Richard Jordon Gatling invent the first machine gun, which bears his name, or was it the creation of an obscure West Virginia gunsmith?

History, army records and the patent office say the inventor was Gatling, a wealthy army physician. A. W. Hamilton, 84-year-old Fayette county attorney, contends that John Nickel Wood, of Ansted, W. Va., first made the gun.

The Gatling gun, patented by Gatling, first appeared in the Civil War. By 1862 the gun had been perfected to fire 350 shots a minute, but only a few were manufactured before the close of the war. Later, the gun was adopted by the armies of almost every nation.

Hamilton, who knew the Wood family well as a boy, said Marshall Wood, John's uncle, related the story of the invention of the gun to him many times in the years after the Civil War.

Joined Confederates Early

"John and Marshall Wood joined the Confederate army at the start of the war and were stationed at Camp Pyatt on the Kanawha river above Charleston," Hamilton says.

"Marshall, a wheelwright, helped John perfect a model of the rapid-fire gun and they showed it to the commanding officer, who gave them tools and equipment. The gun was mounted and tested.

"When Union forces compelled the Confederates to evacuate the camp, the officer ordered the gun sunk in the Kanawha to escape capture.

"The two Woods were then sent to Roanoke, Virginia. Again they worked on the model of the gun and an officer introduced them to Gatling, as a man with money and influence.

Gatling Made Offer

"Gatling offered to take the gun to France and have it patented in exchange for a half-interest. In the meantime John Wood died, and when Gatling returned, he told Marshall Wood he had no interest in the gun."

Hamilton recalls Marshall Wood went back to the spot on the Kanawha river where the original had been sunk after the war, but was never able to locate the exact spot.

"That gun is still somewhere in the Kanawha river," Hamilton declares.

"John and Marshall were about the same age," Hamilton recalls, "and both could make anything. John was the actual inventor of the gun, and Marshall helped him with it."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK By R. J. SCOTT

High School Boy Held as Robber

Pittsburgh, Feb. 22 (AP)—Richard Evans, 17-year old High School junior and son of a former judge was arrested today and accused of staging a number of robberies, including the taking of $10,000 worth of jewels.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park, who made the charges, said Evans and a companion, Jack Kernon, 19, calmly admitted they forced their way into the home of Albert Geyer, printing company executive on Feb. 2 and took the jewels which were recovered.

Evans is a son of former Judge John E. Evans of Ebensburg, Pa., who now is an associate here of Former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti.

A surprised brother of the youth, John E. Evans, Jr., said he could not suggest a reason for young Evans' behavior.

"He had a good home and every advantage. We can't believe this thing."

4-H Club Boys Will Exhibit Feeding Lambs

College Park, Md., Feb. 22. (AP)— A score of 4-H club boys from six Maryland counties will exhibit western feeding lambs at the second annual fat western lamb show at the Baltimore Union stock yards Feb. 27.

Mylo S. Downey, assistant state boys' club agent, said the boys purchased the lambs from Nebraska last November in a lot averaging 58 pounds per head.

Club agent officials encouraged the youths to follow a definite feeding schedule, keeping record of their progress. These reports will be shown along with the lambs.

The project is designed to demonstrate the possibility of feeding western lambs as a profitable outlet for certain farm crops, and to give older boys experience in buying, feeding, grading and marketing of livestock, Downey declared.

Coal Too Dirty

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 22 (AP)—The relief authorities thought they had something when coal was found on the site of Wheeling's new airport, now under construction, but complaints about dirt in the coal have brought a decision to cease distribution.

Besides, City Engineer Jay Henry protested that many of the WPA and department of public assistance clients left the coal in the street and he threatened arrest for the truckers.

There is no equipment for screening the coal at the airport, from which 1,200 five-ton loads have been delivered.

Sloan Hints

payers' recommendations are generally carried out by the legislature, he said.

What Would Washington Do?

"What would Washington do about all these problems?", the jurist asked. "We don't know. But we do know that he would have the courage to face the situation and do what ought to be done, guided by a wisdom unequalled in the history of this country."

"He would act unselfishly, too, with no idea of perpetuating his name and fame and hold on the country," he added. It was unnecessary for him to say that the present President is not of such caliber; his manner of speaking got that across in an unmistakable manner.

Earlier, in noting that he was a "pinch-hitter" for Forum Speaker Stanley High, he had mentioned High's topic, "After Roosevelt—What?", and added: "And God knows what!"

In discussing the failure of either political party to sponsor any Washington birthday observances, Judge Sloan did not let his own Republican party escape unscathed either.

After saying that Andrew Jackson is "the patron saint of the Democratic party—in theory at least," he made a similar remark about the Republicans and their "idol," Abraham Lincoln.

In eulogizing Washington as "the greatest figure in the secular history of the world," the speaker quoted tributes paid the first President by foreigners, including Englishmen, as well as Americans.

Judge Sloan especially hailed Washington's vision in foreseeing the future growth of the nation and acting accordingly.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Daisy Elizabeth Owens vs. McKeever Gilbert Owens.
No. 15,512 Equity in the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that they were married on the 22rd day of August, 1934, and that on the 15th day of October, 1934, the defendant abandoned and deserted the plaintiff without any just cause or reason and declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for the last three years and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the plaintiff's conduct toward her husband has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach.

The bill further states that there were no children born unto this marriage; that the plaintiff has been a resident of the State of Maryland for more than two years prior to the bringing of this action, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and the plaintiff also asks for an Order of Publication against the defendant, and also for general relief.

It is thereupon this 7th day of February, 1940, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, sitting in equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this Order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Allegany County once in each of four successive weeks on or before the 11th day of March, 1940, giving notice to said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill and warn him to appear in person, or by solicitor on or before the 27th day of March, 1940, to show cause, if any he might have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

ROBERT JACKSON, Clerk.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Daisy Elizabeth Owens vs. McKeever Gilbert Owens.
No. 15,512 Equity in the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that they were married on the 23rd day of August, 1934, and that on the 15th day of October, 1934, the defendant abandoned and deserted the plaintiff without any just cause or reason and declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for the last three years and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the plaintiff's conduct toward her husband has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach.

The bill further states that there were no children born unto this marriage; that the plaintiff has been a resident of the State of Maryland for more than two years prior to the bringing of this action, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and the plaintiff also asks for an Order of Publication against the defendant, and also for general relief.

It is thereupon this 7th day of February, 1940, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, sitting in equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this Order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Allegany County once in each of four successive weeks on or before the 11th day of March, 1940, giving notice to said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill and warn him to appear in person or by solicitor on or before the 27th day of March, 1940, to show cause, if any he might have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

Mystery Thickens As Reporters Lose 'Candidate'

Janitor's Intentions, Also His Whereabouts, Still Unknown

Whether or not a municipal primary will be held March 5 remained a mystery last night. Janitor John W. Harper, who holds the matter of a primary in the palm of his hand, could not be found.

Reporters tried in vain to track down the white-haired janitor. Although Mr. Harper ordinarily goes to bed early, his whereabouts were still unknown at 1 a. m.

Mr. Harper, who created a political sensation Tuesday by announcing his candidacy for mayor, went to a Bible class meeting at the First Methodist church on Bedford street, his wife explained.

"Then he called to say he wouldn't be home until late," said Mrs. Harper. "He said he was going to sit up with a sick friend".

Mrs. Harper said she did not know who the sick friend was, but that she wasn't worried about her husband's absence.

Daughter June said she understood her father had every intention of filing his petition papers today.

"He's got all the names he needs," she said.

At any event, it was certain that Cumberlanders anxious to avoid a $2500 primary would keep a close watch on City Clerk S. E. Grininger's office today. That is where Mr. Harper will file his petition—if he files.

The matter of the primary, to be or not to be, was dumped squarely in Mr. Harper's lap yesterday when Robert L. Meyers and John H. Fike, potential council aspirants, declared that they would not file their petitions if they were to be responsible for causing a primary. But in the event Mr. Harper files today, both will shoot in their petitions and get in the running.

It was almost certain yesterday that an attempt would be made to discourage Mr. Harper in his announced intention of running against Mayor Harry Irvine and Tom Post. Whether such an attempt was made last night could not be determined because Mr. Harper could not be found.

Speculation as to whether Mr. Harper would walk into City Hall today with his petition papers under his arm was rife last night. Opinion on the question was divided.

To date, there are two candidates for mayor and eight for city council. One more candidate for either the mayorality or for the council will make a primary necessary.

Last night, the missing Mr. Harper remained the big question mark.

Community Center May Get NYA Aid

Official Discusses Negro Youth Program

Hope that the Cumberland unit of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People may obtain city and NYA aid in constructing the proposed community center for negro youths was expressed last night.

The expression came from leaders of the association drive for funds for such a building after hearing an address by Elder H. Russell, state director of negro activities for the National Youth Administration.

Speaking at a meeting at Frederick street school, Russell indicated that the association might succeed in securing the Cumberland mayor and council as sponsors of an NYA project to build the community center. A grant from the city and an NYA grant, and NYA labor, together with the funds raised in the current drive, would insure the success of the project, it was said.

The NYA official said that such a project had been worked out on that basis in Hagerstown.

Russell told of negro NYA projects throughout the state and suggested possibilities for Cumberland, in addition to the community center.

The meeting sponsored jointly by the school and the association, drew a large crowd. Principal Earl L. Bracey presided.

They are Marshall high school of Huntington, Nitro, Madison and Jane Lew, upon which the data will be presented to the N. C. A. C. S at the annual convention April 3-5. Two others—West Liberty and Trap Hill of Surveyor, Raleigh county—will be surveyed before April 7.

F. D. Just Can't Let Go, Declares Forum Speaker

In a factual address on the topic, "After Roosevelt, What?" Stanley High last night told a forum audience that the "Roosevelt thyroid" would have as much bearing on the ultimate answer as any.

Mr. High, one of the shrewdest news commentators on the national political scene, realistically pointed out why the cards might easily be stacked for another Roosevelt administration if the President says the magic word.

"With the possible exception of Theodore Roosevelt, there has never been a president who has loved his job so well as the present incumbent," Mr. High said. "He loves his job and he thrives on it.

Opposition Smacked Down

"The fact that the President has smacked down every Democrat whose hand has appeared above the horizon in the last seven years is also significant," he declared.

Pointing out that the European war would undoubtedly become a vital factor in the forthcoming campaign, Mr. High declared that without a doubt the old refrain of "never change horses in mid-stream" would be dusted off once again.

As for the third term issue, "It is merely an academic question to the great mass of the voting public," the speaker stated.

Speaker Against Third Term

"There is also another factor," the speaker said. "The President, as everyone knows, is very sensitive regarding the place he will be given in history. And if he quits now, his position might very well be considered somewhat doubtful."

Personally, Mr. High is against a third term for President Roosevelt on the grounds that "it would be a perpetuation of the New Deal weaknesses."

Irresponsibility in regard to debt was scored by Mr. High as the most glaring New Deal weakness. The staggering national debt, in itself, would not be so alarming if the administration held a more responsible view of indebtedness, the speaker contended.

Debt Attitude Scored

A business man of known integrity and character may go into debt without causing great alarm," he pointed out. "But undoubted irresponsible attitude in regard to liabilities is a matter of great concern.

Mr. Roosevelt, the speaker said, was elected on an economy platform. And for the first seven months of his first term he followed the Jefferson principle of conservatism in regard to governmental finance, High said.

Then, suddenly, the professors were called to Washington and the administration started the practice of governmental pump-priming to restore prosperity, High said.

Recovery Quickened Before Spending Started

"And it is a matter of record that recovery was more rapid during the first seven months when the Jeffersonian principle was adhered to than any time since," the speaker said.

"The Bureau of the Budget has merely been the adding machine of the White House during the Roosevelt administration," Mr. High said.

Citing a concrete example of New Deal spending, Mr. High stated that one department of the government has for several years spent two million dollars annually for office supplies, including pencils, paper, and erasers.

Each year, the department has failed to use anywhere near this amount of equipment and consequently much of it has been stored away in government warehouses, he said. But when an accountant suggested last year that the department cut the yearly appropriation and use the material they had on hand, the suggestion was vetoed.

Credit Due for Trying

Mr. High stated that while the New Deal experiments had only been partly successful in many instances, the Roosevelt administration should be given due credit for grapling with and trying to solve the great domestic problems of the country.

Roosevelt "Victories" Only Protests

President Roosevelt's sweeping victories, he said, were not so much Democratic victories and Republican defeats, as they were the protests of the people who desire more economic security and better conditions.

The New Deal reforms will not be abandoned, High predicted. For it has become more and more obvious that the electorate, comprised of the ranks of labor, the farm bloc and all other groups, want reform, he said.

The New Deal's reforms, he predicted, will be improved and amended by whatever administration takes over in Washington in 1941.

Favors Hull or Vandenberg

Asked what slates he preferred in the forthcoming election, Mr. High said, "If I were a Democrat I would like to see Hull for president and Farley for vice-president. If I were a Republican I would prefer Vandenberg for president and Dewey for vice-president."

Commenting on possible presidential timber, High said that Vandenberg had proved himself a constructive critic of the New Deal by advocating certain constructive measures of the administration and sharply criticizing impractical features.

Senator Taft was characterized as a "plugger" by the speaker, Tom Dewey as a "young man who has been a howling success and probably the only Republican candidate with any political sex-appeal."

High, a rapid-fire speaker, held the interest of his audience throughout the course of his address, which was spiced with good-natured barbs and asides directed at New Dealers, Democrats, and Republicans alike.

The audience opened up on him with a barrage of questions following his talk.

Youth Repairing Car Ends Up in Hospital For Repairs Himself

Nineteen-year-old Joseph C. Brown started to repair his father's car yesterday morning and wound up in Allegany hospital for repairs himself.

The Wiley Ford youth suffered a broken leg when the car, driven by Robert Holt, backed into him. Holt was helping young Brown with the repair job.

Brown was admitted to the hospital at 11 a. m.

Norma Lee Vanausdale, 8, of LaVale, was treated at 10 a. m. at the hospital for an injured left elbow after she fell from a parked car at the Keating Memorial Day Nursery.

Principal speaker at the meeting will be the Rev. Theodore E. Miller, pastor of First Baptist church, secretary of the Baltimore Roundtable of the National Conference of Jews and Christians and dean of the Baltimore School of Christian Education.

In addition to his prepared address, Mr. Miller will also lead a discussion on "Democracy and Peace" after recorded motion picture talks by Dr. Albert Einstein, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Senator Robert A. Taft, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, and other notables at Allegany and Fort Hill high schools Tuesday.

City Police Recover Stolen Watch, Now Hunt for Unidentified Owner

Police were holding two colored men today for questioning in connection with the larceny of a watch and were waiting for the owner of the watch to show up to identify the stolen property, which was recovered in a downtown pawn shop.

Albert Taylor, about 40, and Josh Taylor, about 45, both of 115 Walnut place, but no relation, were arrested, just after noon yesterday by Officer William J. Cubbage, after B. & O. employes said they might be the pair who deftly lifted a watch from the pocket of a passenger sleeping in the Queen City station while waiting for an early morning train.

After the passenger, thought to be a retired jeweler from Hancock, reported the robbery, he told police he would be in town all day hoping for recovery of his watch. But after the time-piece was recovered officers found they had no record of the man's name nor the hotel where he said he was staying, so they are waiting for him to appear.

According to authorities, the watch was taken from the man's pocket about 4 a. m., yesterday, while he dozed on a bench in the station. Attendants said the two Taylor men had been in the station and they were apprehended for investigation.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Being rather immune to our surroundings as long as we have enough hot water for a tubfull, a decent light over the shaving mirror, and a commodious, but not too conspicuous, corner for dirty clothes, we never paid much attention to wall paper.

When we did notice wall paper it was to classify it either as clean and bright, or dirty, as in good shape, or badly in need of repair. It being our experience that the wall paper in rented rooms is generally dirty and usually in need of repair, we had more or less let the matter drop there.

Unfortunately, however, we are now in the throes of furnishing a new apartment. And that's why we suddely became aware of wall paper, because the landlord left it up to us to select an "appropriate" paper.

The landlord said we might select any paper we wanted, but he used the tone of voice that an employer uses when he tells an employe that he can join the union if he REALLY wants to. He reminded us, too, to think of the other people who might move into the place some day when we moved out.

By this time we were getting the idea that selecting wall paper is something like selecting a wife. It's something you have to live with, but which your relatives must approve.

We soon learned, too, that only half the wall paper in the world is on walls and the other half is in big sample books. After considerable thumbing about, we were able to narrow the field down to some 237 possibilities.

The lady said something about one paper being much warmer than another. We said they both looked pretty thin, and then she explained that she meant the color tones were warmer. We asked her if she had any colors which would be warm in winter and cold in summer, but she changed the subject.

Whereupon, we picked out a very jolly paper and said to wrap it up, or whatever one does with the wall paper one buys. The lady patiently explained that this particular paper was for kitchens only. The best answer we had for that was "Oh."

We were attracted by a hunting scene design, but finally decided that our room was too big for that. The sight of so many horses and hounds chasing so many different foxes but never quite catching up would soon give us an awful frustration complex, we feared.

The lady said that blue paper was very fashionable these days. We said that having blue wall paper all around gave us the impression of being under water. The lady gave us a fishy look.

We were determined, however, to see this thing through in our own way. Getting scientific about the whole thing, we decided to establish a base for this venture into the great unknown. We looked about for a base, and spied our necktie. It was the pick of the Christmas crop. We asked the lady if she could match it. She sniffed, and said she thought she could, except for the soup spots.

It pays to be scientific. We soon had a paper that matched our necktie very well. And we knew we wouldn't have to consult our roommate about it, because he is very fond of all our ties.

That left only the bedroom paper to pick out. We thought of getting some to match our pajamas, but we hadn't brought any pajamas along, and, moreover, none of our pajamas have much character to them anyway.

While we were concentrating around for an idea, the lady interrupted with the remark that bedroom wall paper is very, very important because one-third of one's life is spent in bed. We were sobered by the thought of how terrible it would be to sleep our life away surrounded by drab wall paper.

Then we had an idea. Since we never are up to see the sunrise, and since the sunrise is supposed to be not only beautiful but also inspirational, we decided to splash sunrise all over the walls of our bedroom. The lady suggested that it might be confusing, going to bed with so much sunrise in the room. We said we could soon get used to burning the sun at both ends.

Well, the only sunrise paper they had had some flowers thrown in for good measure, but they looked like strawberry blooms, which we decided would not be too fancy for a gentleman's bedroom.

It was nice to learn so much about wall paper. We fear, however, that the draperies are even more of a problem. It might be simpler just to get married, but wives are always bothering their husbands for advise about such things, even though they don't intend to follow it at all.

The furniture problem will be simpler. We won't have any money left to buy furniture with. Instead we shall have a house warming—the kind where you let the guests know they are supposed to bring gifts.

Burglary Suspect 'Dead Drunk'; Police Say He Played Possum

Two South Cumberland men will be given hearings in Trial Magistrates court at 2 p. m. today, following their arrest early Wednesday morning within two hours of the time they are accused of breaking and entering the service station and beer parlor of Clarence R. Nicholson, 1201 Old town road.

Nicholson reported in person to police headquarters, while most of the citizens still up were watching the search for a man drowned in Wills creek. He said his place had been broken into soon after he had closed at midnight, and told police he suspected Dayton Poole, 132 Utah street, and John Puhalla, of Laing avenue.

Police went first to Poole's address and found him in an upstairs room slumped down in a chair, apparently passed out from drinking. But the officers were so sure he was only playing 'possum that they carried him from the house and put him in a police car for the trip to the station and prepared to round up the other suspect.

They went first to Puhalla's father's home, at 214 Utah street, but found he had left there. They then hurried around to the end of a path from his father's house to his own home on Laing avenue and met him there. Police said he was carrying a bag containing about $10 worth of cigarettes, cigars, and chewing gum when he was arrested.

Poole soon came to and walked into the police station under his own power, police said. The Nicholson business place was broken into twice before in the past three years, the officers recalled. Lieut. James E. Van, Detective R. Emmet Flynn, and Officer Charles D. Manges investigated the robbery and made the arrests.

Legal Batteries Primed for Fight Over Clerkship

Argument Scheduled In Court Today In Buchholtz Case

With a battery of legal talent on each side, argument will get underway in Circuit court this morning on the petition of William H. Buckholtz for a writ of mandamus to compel the county commissioners to recognize him as their clerk.

The hearing, at which both Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge William A. Huster will be on the bench, will concern itself with the demurrer filed by the board contending that Buckholtz has no case.

Buckholtz will be represented by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and W. Earle Cobey and indirectly by Attorney General William C. Walsh, acting as a "friend of the court" to explain Governor O'Conor's reasons and authority for appointing Buckholtz to the post made vacant by dismissal of Thomas P. Richards.

Opposing counsel will be Walter C. Capper, counsel to the board, and Attorney Horace P. Whitworth Sr., of Westernport, who assisted Mr. Capper in the successful defense of the board's ouster of Richards.

Defendants in the case, besides the county commissiners, are R. Mason Hill, now holding the clerkship by board appointment, and Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson, who refused to administer the oath of office to Buchholtz.

The case is scheduled to open at 9:15 a. m. and is expected to take several hours.

Miss Lorena M. Stump

Miss Lorena M. Stump, 212 New Hampshire avenue, died yesterday morning at Memorial hospital, where she was admitted Jan. 17. She was 71.

Extradition Plea Is Turned Down

Harris Denied Writ By W. Va. Judge

Diamonds don't mix with tomatoes, State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris commented ruefully last night after he had been denied a writ of extradition in Clarksburg, W. Va.

The state's attempt to extradite Marc Levine for stopping payment on a $1,000 check for two diamond rings was denied after Circuit Court Judge John Strohsnider recalled that the higher courts reversed him in a previous case which pertained to tomatoes. The tomato case was somewhat similar to this one, he recalled.

Allegany county authorities started for Clarksburg after Levine had stopped payment on a $1,000 check to Benny Waingold, Cumberland junk dealer, who had sold him two diamond rings. Waingold is known as a collector of precious stones and other curios.

Waingold alleges that Levine stopped payment on the check and that he had obviously intended to do so from the start.

Harris stated that Levine declared that Waingold owed him around a $1,000 for involving him in a former deal in which he lost money.

Waingold declared this was not true and that Levine backed out on him after he and Levine had formed a partnership to buy up a quantity of metal beams in Grafton. Levine left him holding the bag, he declared.

Judge Strohsnider, who heard the evidence in the case, recalled that he had once passed judgment on a somewhat similar matter pertaining to a load of tomatoes which were carted across the state line. Payment on a check for the tomatoes was stopped because the tomatoes had spoiled.

The court, it was pointed out, had granted an extradition writ in the tomato case and later the upper courts had overruled the court's action.

State's Attorney Harris confessed that he didn't see much similarity between a truckload of spoiled tomatoes and two diamond rings.

Waingold, informed of the denial by the West Virginia court, will probably make a cicil case out of the matter, Harris said.

SKI CONDITIONS

Skiing was good at New Germany yesterday and, barring a sudden thaw, should be good for the week-end.

The snow on the slope is crusty, but is topped in most places with a light covering of powder snow.

Although skiing is good as it is, some more snow would make it much better. Snow is forecast for today.

The temperature at New Germany was twenty-two at 9 o'clock last night.

Nearly twenty skiers were on the slope yesterday afternoon.

5 Escape Unhurt As Backing Train Demolishes Auto

Three Men, Two Girls Narrowly Miss Death In Crossing Accident

Three men and two young girls narrowly escaped death or serious injury early this morning when their car was struck by a shifting freight at the Williams street crossing of the B&O.

Driver of the car, James Via, of Zihlman, 32-year-old employe of the Mt. Savage brickyard, said that he failed to see the signal of the crossing watchman and started across the tracks heading east.

Suddenly, he heard a whistle blow—that of the conductor of the freight, G. R. Williams, he learned later.

Via automatically stopped—right in the path of the backing freight.

Williams signalled for the train to stop, but it was too late. The rear car, loaded with cement, crashed into the automobile.

It turned it over on its side, pushed it down the tracks for perhaps fifty feet.

Railroaders came running. Some one summoned an ambulance.

But, almost miraculously, the passengers climbed out of the totally wrecked vehicle unscratched. There wasn't a scratch on any of them, but all of them were shocked and frightened.

The ambulance arrived, and the five were taken to Memorial hospital over their protests.

Examination confirmed their statements that they were unhurt, and they were discharged.

Others to escape, besides Via, were Eugene Lucas, 24, of Frostburg, a Celanese worker; John Bolden, 27, of Frostburg, employed at the Cumberland Cloak and Suit Store; Katherine Engle, 18, of Frostburg, an NYA worker; and Allmetti Bender, about 21, of Cumberland.

Crossing watchman on duty was William Lashley. Ed Bohrer was engineer of the shifting engine, and C. R. Anderson was brakeman.

Shifting was delayed for about an hour until a wrecker removed what was left of the car from the tracks.

Railroad police investigated the accident, which occurred about 12:20 a. m.

CMTC Boys Plan To Form Post

Reserve Officers Sponsoring Group

Cumberland district youths who have attended Citizens' Military Training Camps will meet Monday night at 7 o'clock at Central YMCA to discuss the formation of CMTC post in the city to keep up their training between the summer camps.

Harold E. Crawford, 250 Columbia street, who has completed three years of training at Fort George G. Meade, has taken the first steps necessary to form a post here. This week he was notified by Major Walter E. Myers, of Baltimore, third corps area officer in charge of citizen training, that he could go ahead.

The post is being sponsored by the Western Maryland chapter of the reserve Officers Association, with a committee of three officers to help organize the group. Lieut. Martin B. Sharp, chairman, Major John W. Fisher, and Lieut. James C. Duff are the officers who have arranged Monday's meeting.

Crawford said there are about fifty boys in Cumberland eligible for the post. They are those who have attended at least one thirty-day summer camp for civilians and who desire to keep up their training and interest. Four camp periods and some correspondence work make the young men eligible for a commission as reserve officers when they become twenty-one.

Mystery Thickens As Reporters Lose 'Candidate'

Janitor's Intentions, Also His Whereabouts, Still Unknown

Whether or not a municipal primary will be held March 5 remained a mystery last night, Janitor John W. Harper, who holds the matter of a primary in the palm of his hand, could not be found.

Reporters tried in vain to track down the white-haired janitor. Although Mr. Harper ordinarily goes to bed early, his whereabouts were still unknown at 1 a. m.

Mr. Harper, who created a political sensation Tuesday by announcing his candidacy for mayor, went to a Bible class meeting at the First Methodist church on Bedford street, his wife explained.

"Then he called to say he wouldn't be home until late," said Mrs. Harper. "He said he was going to sit up with a sick friend".

Mrs. Harper said she did not know who the sick friend was, but that she wasn't worried about her husband's absence.

Daughter June said she understood her father had every intention of filing his petition papers today.

"He's got all the names he needs," she said.

At any event, it was certain that Cumberlanders anxious to avoid a $2500 primary would keep a close watch on City Clerk S. E. Grimminger's office today. That is where Mr. Harper will file his petition—if he files.

The matter of the primary, to be or not to be, was dumped squarely in Mr. Harper's lap yesterday when Robert L. Meyers and John H. Fike, potential council aspirants, declared that they would not file their petitions if they were to be responsible for causing a primary. But in the event Mr. Harper files today, both will shoot in their petitions and get in the running.

It was almost certain yesterday that an attempt would be made to discourage Mr. Harper in his announced intention of running against Mayor Harry Irvine and Tom Post. Whether such an attempt was made last night could not be determined because Mr. Harper could not be found.

Speculation as to whether Mr. Harper would walk into City Hall today with his petition papers under his arm was rife last night. Opinion on the question was divided.

To date, there are two candidates for mayor and eight for city council. One more candidate for either the mayorality or for the council will make a primary necessary.

Last night, the missing Mr. Harper remained the big question mark.

Community Center May Get NYA Aid

Official Discusses Negro Youth Program

Hope that the Cumberland unit of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People may obtain city and NYA aid in constructing the proposed community center for negro youths was expressed last night.

The expression came from leaders of the association drive for funds for such a building after hearing an address by Elder H. Russell, state director of negro activities for the National Youth Administration.

Speaking at a meeting at Frederick street school, Russell indicated that the association might succeed in securing the Cumberland mayor and council as sponsors of an NYA project to build the community center. A grant from the city and an NYA grant, and NYA labor, together with the funds raised in the current drive, would insure the success of the project, it was said.

The NYA official said that such a project had been worked out on that basis in Hagerstown.

Russell told of negro NYA projects throughout the state and suggested possibilities for Cumberland, in addition to the community center.

The meeting sponsored jointly by the school and the association, drew a large crowd. Principal Earl L. Bracey presided.

F. D. Just Can't Let Go, Declares Forum Speaker

In a factual address on the topic, "After Roosevelt, What?" Stanley High last night told a forum audience that the "Roosevelt thyroid" would have as much bearing on the ultimate answer as any.

Mr. High, one of the shrewdest news commentators on the national political scene, realistically pointed out why the cards might easily be stacked for another Roosevelt administration if the President says the magic word.

"With the possible exception of Theodore Roosevelt, there has never been a president who has loved his job so well as the present incumbent," Mr. High said. "He loves his job and he thrives on it.

Opposition Smacked Down

"The fact that the President has smacked down every Democrat whose hand has appeared above the horizon in the last seven years is also significant," he declared.

Pointing out that the European war would undoubtedly become a vital factor in the forthcoming campaign, Mr. High declared that without a doubt the old refrain of "never change horses in mid-stream" would be dusted off once again.

As for the third term issue. "It is merely an academic question to the great mass of the voting public," the speaker stated.

Speaker Against Third Term

"There is also another factor," the speaker said. "The President, as everyone knows, is very sensitive regarding the place he will be given in history. And if he quits now, his position might very well be considered somewhat doubtful."

Personally, Mr. High is against a third term for President Roosevelt on the grounds that "it would be a perpetuation of the New Deal weaknesses."

Irresponsibility in regard to debt was scored by Mr. High as the most glaring New Deal weakness. The staggering national debt, in itself, would not be so alarming if the administration held a more responsible view of indebtedness, the speaker contended.

Debt Attitude Scored

A business man of known integrity and character may go into debt without causing great alarm," he pointed out. "But undoubted irresponsible attitude in regard to liabilities is a matter of great concern.

Mr. Roosevelt, the speaker said, was elected on an economy platform. And for the first seven months of his first term he followed the Jefferson principle of conservatism in regard to governmental finance, High said.

Then, suddenly, the professors were called to Washington and the administration started the practice of governmental pump-priming to restore prosperity, High said.

Recovery Quickened Before Spending Started

"And it is a matter of record that recovery was more rapid during the first seven months when the Jeffersonian principle was adhered to than any time since," the speaker said.

"The Bureau of the Budget has merely been the adding machine of the White House during the Roosevelt administration," Mr. High said.

Citing a concrete example of New Deal spending, Mr. High stated that one department of the government has for several years spent two million dollars annually for office supplies, including pencils, paper, and erasers.

Each year, the department has failed to use anywhere near this amount of equipment and consequently much of it has been stored away in government warehouses, he said. But when an accountant suggested last year that the department cut the yearly appropriation and use the material they had on hand, the suggestion was vetoed.

Credit Due for Trying

Mr. High stated that while the New Deal experiments had only been partly successful in many instances, the Roosvelt administration should be given due credit for grapling with and trying to solve the great domestic problems of the country.

Roosevelt "Victories" Only Protests

President Roosevelt's sweeping victories, he said, were not so much Democratic victories and Republican defeats, as they were the protests of the people who desire more economic security and better conditions.

The New Deal reforms will not be abandoned, High predicted. For it has become more and more obvious that the electorate, comprised of the ranks of labor, the farm bloc and all other groups, want reform, he said.

The New Deal's reforms, he predicted, will be improved and amended by whatever administration takes over in Washington in 1941.

Favors Hull or Vandenberg

Asked what slates he preferred in the forthcoming election, Mr. High said, "If I were a Democrat I would like to see Hull for president and Farley for vice-president. If I were a Republican I would prefer Vandenberg for president and Dewey for vice-president."

Commenting on possible presidential timber, High said that Vandenberg had proved himself a constructive critic of the New Deal by advocating certain constructive measures of the administration and sharply criticizing impractical features.

Senator Taft was characterized as a "plugger" by the speaker, Tom Dewey as a "young man who has been a howling success and probably the only Republican candidate with any political sex-appeal."

High, a rapid-fire speaker, held the interest of his audience throughout the course of his address, which was spiced with good-natured barbs and asides directed at New Dealers, Democrats, and Republicans alike.

The audience opened up on him with a barrage of questions following his talk.

City Police Recover Stolen Watch, Now Hunt for Unidentified Owner

Police were holding two colored men today for questioning in connection with the larceny of a watch and were waiting for the owner of the watch to show up to identify the stolen property, which was recovered in a downtown pawn shop.

Albert Taylor, about 40, and Josh Taylor, about 45, both of 115 Walnut place, but no relation, were arrested, just after noon yesterday by Officer William J. Cubbage, after B. & O. employes said they might be the pair who deftly lifted a watch from the pocket of a passenger sleeping in the Queen City station while waiting for an early morning train.

After the passenger, thought to be a retired jeweler from Hancock, reported the robbery, he told police he would be in town all day hoping for recovery of his watch. But after the time-piece was recovered officers found they had no record of the man's name nor the hotel where he said he was staying, so they are waiting for him to appear.

According to authorities, the watch was taken from the man's pocket about 4 a. m., yesterday, while he dozed on a bench in the station. Attendants said the two Taylor men had been in the station and they were apprehended for investigation.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Being rather immune to our surroundings as long as we have enough hot water for a tubfull, a decent light over the shaving mirror, and a commodious, but not too conspicuous, corner for dirty clothes, we never paid much attention to wall paper.

When we did notice wall paper it was to classify it either as clean and bright, or dirty, as in good shape, or badly in need of repair. It being our experience that the wall paper in rented rooms is generally dirty and usually in need of repair, we had more or less let the matter drop there.

Unfortunately, however, we are now in the throes of furnishing a new apartment. And that's why we suddenly became aware of wall paper, because the landlord left it up to us to select an "appropriate" paper.

The landlord said we might select any paper we wanted, but he used the tone of voice that an employer uses when he tells an employe that he can join the union if he REALLY wants to. He reminded us, too, to think of the other people who might move into the place some day when we moved out.

By this time we were getting the idea that selecting wall paper is something like selecting a wife. It's something you have to live with, but which your relatives must approve.

We soon learned, too, that only half the wall paper in the world is on walls and the other half is in big sample books. After considerable thumbing about, we were able to narrow the field down to some 237 possibilities.

The lady said something about one paper being much warmer than another. We said they both looked pretty thin, and then she explained that she meant the color tones were warmer. We asked her if she had any colors which would be warm in winter and cold in summer, but she changed the subject.

Whereupon, we picked out a very jolly paper and said to wrap it up, or whatever one does with the wall paper one buys. The lady patiently explained that this particular paper was for kitchens only. The best answer we had for that was "Oh."

We were attracted by a hunting scene design, but finally decided that our room was too big for that. The sight of so many horses and hounds chasing so many different foxes but never quite catching up would soon give us an awful frustration complex, we feared.

The lady said that blue paper was very fashionable these days. We said that having blue wall paper all around gave us the impression of being under water. The lady gave us a fishy look.

We were determined, however, to see this thing through in our own way. Getting scientific about the whole thing, we decided to establish a base for this venture into the great unknown. We looked about for a base, and spied our necktie. It was the pick of the Christmas crop. We asked the lady if she could match it. She sniffed, and said she thought she could, except for the soup spots.

It pays to be scientific. We soon had a paper that matched our necktie very well. And we knew we wouldn't have to consult our roommate about it, because he is very fond of all our ties.

That left only the bedroom paper to pick out. We thought of getting some to match our pajamas, but we hadn't brought any pajamas along, and, moreover, none of our pajamas have much character to them anyway.

While we were concentrating around for an idea, the lady interrupted with the remark that bedroom wall paper is very, very important because one-third of one's life is spent in bed. We were sobered by the thought of how terrible it would be to sleep our life away surrounded by drab wall paper.

Then we had an idea. Since we never are up to see the sunrise, and since the sunrise is supposed to be not only beautiful but also inspirational, we decided to splash sunrise all over the walls of our bedroom. The lady suggested that it might be confusing, going to bed with so much sunrise in the room. We said we could soon get used to burning the sun at both ends.

Well, the only sunrise paper they had had some flowers thrown in for good measure, but they looked like strawberry blooms, which we decided would not be too fancy for a gentleman's bedroom.

It was nice to learn so much about wall paper. We fear, however, that the draperies are even more of a problem. It might be simpler just to get married, but wives are always bothering their husbands for advise about such things, even though they don't intend to follow it at all.

The furniture problem will be simpler. We won't have any money left to buy furniture with. Instead we shall have a house warming—the kind where you let the guests know they are supposed to bring gifts.

Burglary Suspect 'Dead Drunk'; Police Say He Played Possum

Two South Cumberland men will be given hearings in Trial Magistrates court at 2 p. m. today, following their arrest early Wednesday morning within two hours of the time they are accused of breaking and entering the service station and beer parlor of Clarence R. Nicholson, 1201 Old town road.

Nicholson reported in person to police headquarters, while most of the citizens still up were watching the search for a man drowned in Wills creek. He said his place had been broken into soon after he had closed at midnight, and told police he suspected Dayton Poole, 132 Utah street, and John Puhalla, of Laing avenue.

Police went first to Poole's address and found him in an upstairs room slumped down in a chair, apparently passed out from drinking. But the officers were so sure he was only playing 'possum that they carried him from the house and put him in a police car for the trip to the station and prepared to round up the other suspect.

They went first to Puhalla's father's home, at 214 Utah street, but found he had left there. They then hurried around to the end of a path from his father's house to his own home on Laing avenue and met him there. Police said he was carrying a bag containing about $10 worth of cigarettes, cigars, and chewing gum when he was arrested.

Poole soon came to and walked into the police station under his own power, police said. The Nicholson business place was broken into twice before in the past three years, the officers recalled. Lieut. James E. Van, Detective R. Emmet Flynn, and Officer Charles D. Manges investigated the robbery and made the arrests.

Legal Batteries Primed for Fight Over Clerkship

Argument Scheduled In Court Today In Buchholtz Case

With a battery of legal talent on each side, argument will get underway in Circuit court this morning on the petition of William H. Buckholtz for a writ of mandamus to compel the county commissioners to recognize him as their clerk.

The hearing, at which both Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge William A. Huster will be on the bench, will concern itself with the demurrer filed by the board contending that Buckholtz has no case.

Buckholtz will be represented by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and W. Earle Cobey and indirectly by Attorney General William C. Walsh, acting as a "friend of the court" to explain Governor O'Conor's reasons and authority for appointing Buckholtz to the post made vacant by dismissal of Thomas P. Richards.

Opposing counsel will be Walter C. Capper, counsel to the board, and Attorney Horace P. Whitworth Sr., of Westernport, who assisted Mr. Capper in the successful defense of the board's ouster of Richards.

Extradition Plea Is Turned Down

Harris Denied Writ By W. Va. Judge

Diamonds don't mix with tomatoes, State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris commented ruefully last night after he had been denied a writ of extradition in Clarksburg, W. Va.

The state's attempt to extradite Marc Levine for stopping payment on a $1,000 check for two diamond rings was denied after Circuit Court Judge John Strohsnider recalled that the higher courts reversed him in a previous case which pertained to tomatoes. The tomato case was somewhat similar to this one, he recalled.

Allegany county authorities started for Clarksburg after Levine had stopped payment on a $1,000 check to Benny Waingold, Cumberland junk dealer, who had sold him two diamond rings. Waingold is known as a collector of precious stones and other curios.

Waingold alleges that Levine stopped payment on the check and that he had obviously intended to do so from the start.

Harris stated that Levine declared that Waingold owed him around a $1,000 for involving him in a former deal in which he lost money.

Waingold declared this was not true and that Levine backed out on him after he and Levine had formed a partnership to buy up a quantity of metal beams in Grafton. Levine left him holding the bag, he declared.

Judge Strohsnider, who heard the evidence in the case, recalled that he had once passed judgment on a somewhat similar matter pertaining to a load of tomatoes which were carted across the state line. Payment on a check for the tomatoes was stopped because the tomatoes had spoiled.

The court, it was pointed out, had granted an extradition writ in the tomato case and later the upper courts had overruled the court's action.

State's Attorney Harris confessed that he didn't see much similarity between a truckload of spoiled tomatoes and two diamond rings.

Waingold, informed of the denial by the West Virginia court, will probably make a cicil case out of the matter, Harris said.

Although skiing is good as it is, some more snow would make it much better. Snow is forecast for today.

The temperature at New Germany was twenty-two at 9 o'clock last night.

Nearly twenty skiers were on the slope yesterday afternoon.

Three Men, Two Girls Narrowly Miss Death In Crossing Accident

Three men and two young girls narrowly escaped death or serious injury early this morning when their car was struck by a shifting freight at the Williams street crossing of the B&O.

Driver of the car, James Via, of Zihlman, 32-year-old employe of the Mt. Savage brickyard, said that he failed to see the signal of the crossing watchman and started across the tracks heading east.

Suddenly, he heard a whistle blow—that of the conductor of the freight, G. R. Williams, he learned later.

Via automatically stopped—right in the path of the backing freight.

Williams signalled for the train to stop, but it was too late. The rear car, loaded with cement, crashed into the automobile.

It turned it over on its side, pushed it down the tracks for perhaps fifty feet.

Railroaders came running. Some one summoned an ambulance.

But, almost miraculously, the passengers climbed out of the totally wrecked vehicle unscratched. There wasn't a scratch on any of them, but all of them were shocked and frightened.

The ambulance arrived, and the five were taken to Memorial hospital over their protests.

Examination confirmed their statements that they were unhurt, and they were discharged.

Others to escape, besides Via, were Eugene Lucas, 24, of Frostburg, a Celanese worker; John Bolden, 27, of Frostburg, employed at the Cumberland Cloak and Suit Store; Katherine Engle, 18, of Frostburg, an NYA worker; and Allmetti Bender, about 21, of Cumberland.

Crossing watchman on duty was William Lashley. Ed Bohrer was engineer of the shifting engine, and C. R. Anderson was brakeman.

Shifting was delayed for about an hour until a wrecker removed what was left of the car from the tracks.

Reserve Officers Sponsoring Group

Cumberland district youths who have attended Citizens' Military Training Camps will meet Monday night at 7 o'clock at Central YMCA to discuss the formation of CMTC post in the city to keep up their training between the summer camps.

Harold E. Crawford, 250 Columbia street, who has completed three years of training at Fort George G. Meade, has taken the first steps necessary to form a post here. This week he was notified by Major Walter E. Myers, of Baltimore, third corps area officer in charge of citizen training, that he could go ahead.

The post is being sponsored by the Western Maryland chapter of the reserve Officers Association, with a committee of three officers to help organize the group. Lieut. Martin B. Sharp, chairman, Major John W. Fisher, and Lieut. James C. Duff are the officers who have arranged Monday's meeting.

Crawford said there are about fifty boys in Cumberland eligible for the post. They are those who have attended at least one thirty-day summer camp for civilians and who desire to keep up their training and interest. Four camp periods and some correspondence work make the young men eligible for a commission as reserve officers when they become twenty-one.

Sloan Hints At U. S. Action 'Over There'

Judge Also Sees Support of Aged As Big Burden

Even George Washington [illegible] be somewhat baffled by the [illegible] plex problems, both domestic [illegible] foreign, facing the United S[illegible] today, but that he would act [illegible] courage, wisdom and patri[illegible] there is no doubt, Cumberland [illegible] wanians and Rotarians heard [illegible] day.

The speaker was Chief Judge [illegible] Lindley Sloan, who used the oc[illegible] ion of the first President's birth[illegible] to touch on the nation's "se[illegible] problems" and to take a couple [illegible] back-handed slaps at Presi[illegible] Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Without actually calling for [illegible] S. participation in the Europ[illegible] wars, Judge Sloan hinted that A[illegible] erica could not afford to stand [illegible] by in the face of events happe[illegible] overseas.

U. S. Not So Independent

The United States "is not so [illegible] dependent that we can ignore [illegible] European situation, the jurist [illegible] clared, calling attention to our [illegible] for chemicals, ores and other [illegible] terials not produced here.

He noted, for example, that C[illegible] berland's tire industry would be [illegible] tally concerned if Holland's [illegible] pendence and her control over [illegible] Dutch East Indies should be [illegible] ously menaced, as seems altoge[illegible] possible.

To cut off or impair the supply [illegible] rubber from the Dutch East In[illegible] would almost immediately make [illegible] self felt here, he asserted, add[illegible] that the Indies are threatened [illegible] Germany, Japan and Russia.

From the national standpo[illegible] if something should occur to af[illegible] seriously America's steel and r[illegible] ber industries, "our present fa[illegible] would collapse," according to [illegible] speaker.

Can't Ignore Europe

"We must not and can not ig[illegible] what's going on over there," he w[illegible] on, "despite the cries of those [illegible] claim that we have no busi[illegible] with the rest of the world."

Aside from the commercial asp[illegible] the United States should take [illegible] strong interest, too, Judge Sloan [illegible] dicated, in the attacks made [illegible] "small, neutral countries."

"On what basis can we fail to [illegible] something for such nations—th[illegible] law-abiding democracies?", [illegible] speaker inquired.

He asked this question after r[illegible] ing that the United States went [illegible] war in 1898 for the "people of Cub[illegible] who were "far less worthy" th[illegible] those needing aid today.

Despite these circumstances, "[illegible] country should stay out of the int[illegible] national mess as far as possible," t[illegible] speaker hastened to add. "We shou[illegible] maintain our neutrality as far as [illegible] can."

Sloan Puzzled, Too

Then, he frankly admitted, "[illegible] don't know what we're going to [illegible] about it."

The United States has perha[illegible] the "best strategic position in t[illegible] world" because "it is the most [illegible] accessible large country in t[illegible] world," he continued.

Although there is "no reason w[illegible] we should be subject to attack fr[illegible] any source," the speaker urged [illegible] policy of preparedness. "We w[illegible] be attacked if we are prepare[illegible] he said.

Turning to the domestic sce[illegible] Judge Sloan noted that there w[illegible] "serious problems" that affect n[illegible] only the present generation, b[illegible] future generations as well.

Sees Old People as Big Proble[illegible]

Chief among these problems [illegible] Social Security taxes, which t[illegible] jurist said were "saddled on t[illegible] country when it was struggling [illegible] of an economic depression" a[illegible] which today form a "crushing bu[illegible] den."

The problem of paying for th[illegible] care of dependent old people is [illegible] "situation which calls for all t[illegible] courage, wisdom and patriotis[illegible] we've got," he stated. He quot[illegible] Mark Sullivan in pointing out th[illegible] forty per cent of the population [illegible] now supporting the other sixty pe[illegible] cent.

And with the natural increase [illegible] the life span, the proportion o[illegible] those being supported will contin[illegible] to grow he said.

Judge Sloan yuoted figures to sho[illegible] the cost in Maryland of aid to de[illegible] dependent children, and the blin[illegible] The 1941 budget calls for an ex[illegible] penditure of over $12,000,000 for th[illegible] purpose, he said, shared in var[illegible] ing proportions by the federal, stat[illegible] and local governments.

"Old Folks Vociferous"

"And the amount is going t[illegible] grow," he said grimly. "The ol[illegible] folks are vociferous. They ha[illegible] nothing to lose and everything t[illegible] gain. And they don't care wh[illegible] pays."

From this point, he continued t[illegible] a discussion of the recently [illegible] organized Allegany County Tax[illegible] payers Research Association an[illegible] stated flatly that its efforts alon[illegible] are "futile."

"Locally, no one can do any[illegible] thing," he said. "Taxes can't b[illegible] cut by pecking at small amount[illegible] here and small amounts there.

"You must slash by the million[illegible] on a large state-wide scale."

Accordingly, he advised the group [illegible] that it must organize on a state[illegible] wide basis, make a thorough study [illegible] so that its conclusions will be re[illegible] spected and acted upon by th[illegible] legislature.

Nebraska is the outstanding [illegible] example of what can be done by [illegible] state - wide organization, Judge [illegible] Sloan noted. In this state, the tax[illegible]
